EASY TO MIX THIS.

What will appear very interesting to many people here is the article taken from a New York paper, and giving a simple prescription, as formulated by a noted authority, who claims that he has found a positive remedy to cure almost any case of backache or kidney or bladder derangement, in the following simple prescription, if taken before the stage of Bright's disease:

Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kurgen, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. Shake well in a bottle and take in teaspoonful doses after each meal and again at bedtime.

A well-known druggist here at home, when asked regarding this prescription, stated that the ingredients are all harmless, and can be obtained at a small cost from any good prescription druggist, and the mixture would be put up if asked to do so. He further stated that while this prescription is often prescribed in rheumatic afflictions with splendid results, he knows no reason why it would not be a splendid remedy for kidney and urinary troubles and backache, as it has a peculiar action upon the kidney structure, cleansing these important organs and helping them to sift and filter from the blood the foul acids and waste matter which cause sickness and suffering. Those of our readers who suffer can make no mistake in giving it a trial.

HAVE YOU PAID THE BEAVER?

Two weeks ago we sent a statement of account to all subscribers to The Beaver whose subscription had expired, or who had no arrears. To-day we send to other business men notify their patrons concerned, and because we are in need of the money. Of course everything has been almost doubled during the past year, but The Beaver, it should have been raised likewise, but we have stood pat, and have not withstanding the increased cost of production. If you have not received it in your dollar, kindly do so at once, and make everybody happy all around. etc

The whole stock amounts to about $25,000, which has been purchased under the best conditions possible. My regular customers know what it is, and will not hesitate to take advantage of the large reductions.

To those who do not know what the stock is like, I can only say that this store has a reputation for keeping reliable goods at right prices for many years, and my experience of over forty years in the General Store business in this County should be sufficient to convince them that it will be to their interest to patronize this sale, and of the honesty of it

Everything will be carried out as set forth in this advertisement.

ALL FARM PRODUCE marketable, will be taken at cash prices.

This sale is being made in contemplation of radical changes to be made in the business.

DORMAN S. HAWLEY

Died Nov. 17th, 1907, aged 68 years, 2 months and 11 days. He was born and lived his lifetime within a mile and a half of the Village of Enterprise, in the Township of Camden. He gave his heart to God twenty-three years ago, and been a member of the Methodist church ever since, and lived to ever honor the Master. He was ever ready to do a kind act, and ever searching for the truth as it is in Jesus. In politics he was a Liberal. He leaves a wife and two sons, Frederick at home, and Dorman Frank, near Napanee, to mourn the loss of an affectionate husband and kind father.

ROSA CELIA McKINSTER

Was born at Harrowsmith, Sept. 17th, 1881, and passed away on Nov. 18th, 1907, after a protracted illness. Service was conducted in the home by the Rev. C. H. Chant, and the body was placed in the vault at the Newburgh cemetery. She was soundly converted in early life, and for years was an active member of the Epworth League. During her long illness she gave evidence that she was sustained by the consolations of the Christian faith; death for her had no terrors, for it had lost its sting; and she was being made ready for the final change. Those she has left behind do not sorrow as those without hope, but rather bless God for grace that enabled her to triumph over the last enemy.

PAST THREE SCORE AND TEN.

Mr. Robert Magee was born in the County of Donegal, Ireland, in the year 1823, and died at The Pines, South Fredericksburgh, on November 20th, 1907, having reached the ripe age of 84 years, 9 months and 6 days. The funeral was held in the Union church, where in spite of the unfavorable condition of the roads, and other obstacles, a large number of neighbors and friends gathered to pay their respect to all that was mortal of the deceased. Six sons, viz., Robert, of Toronto; William, John, Andrew, Alexander and Joseph, all of The Pines, acting as pall-bearers, and one daughter, Mrs. J. Dirkson, Hayburn, mourn the loss of a kind-hearted and affectionate father. The funeral was conducted by the Rev. W. S. Boyce, after which the body was placed in the vault at Napanee, to be interred at a later date in the Methodist cemetery, Adolphustown. The subject of this obituary was a good citizen, highly respected, in religion a Methodist; in his Christian life he was devoted to his Master, and the church of his choice. He was one of the principal men who engaged in the erection of the Union church, and was one of the chief supporters of God's cause in his community. A large number of friends sympathize with the sons and daughter and relatives of the deceased, believing however, that their loss was his gain.

Ever wake up in the morning with the nose stuffed up and dry? That's catarrh! A $1.00 outfit of Hyomei will cure you. Money back if it fails. T. B. Wallace.

FRED. J. WAY.

Died in Dallas, Texas, on October 23rd, Mr. Fred. J. Way, Lieutenant-General of the Army of Elks of Texas, passed away, after three days' illness following an operation for appendicitis. Fred. Way was known throughout all the South Western States, as one of the most genial and kind-hearted men in his profession. His disposition and straightforwardness of character won him friends wherever he went, and his loss will be felt by thousands of people whom he visited in a business capacity. A man who was voted the most popular reveller, man in Texas, by thousands of votes, thereby being presented with a diamond set watch and chain, inscribed to that effect. His loss is to be considered as a calamity to the community as stated by all the leading merchants in the "Lone Star State." By a man's works ye shall know him, and the one who has passed away, has lived his life of usefulness, and his only regret, that a man with such strength of character, a kind and loving husband, should be cut of in the prime of life, and leave so much sorrow behind. His remains were taken charge of by the Order of Elks the most prominent members accompanying the body to his father's home in Atlanta, Georgia, where services were held in the Chapel by the Rev. H. H. Patterson, and interment at Westview. The casket was covered with flowers, and the Elks colors, purple and white. The widow, who is the youngest daughter of the late James Fee, Esq., of Camden, received many telegrams and letters of condolence. One from the Mayor of Waco, "May the Lord grant you strength to bear the heavy blow with which He has visited you," John Sanford. Mr. Way was heavily insured and left much real estate. They will remain in the South for the winter.

WHY NOT NAPANEE?

Toronto, Nov. 20.—In response to requests from Belleville, Kingston, and Deseronto, the Hydro-Electric Commission have furnished those places with estimates for the supply of power. The estimates have been supplied upon the basis of an offer made by the Northumberland Paper & Electric Company, of Campbellford for the supply of power. The lowest and highest prices per horsepower respectively, for a twenty-four hour power stepped down and per horse power ready for distribution, are:—Belleville, $20.44 to $25.29; Deseronto, $24.79 to $31.86, and Kingston, $24.81 to $26.60.

PUBLIC MEETINGS.

Addington Farmers' Institute will hold meetings in Finkle's Hall, Newburgh, on Wednesday, 11th Dec., at 1.30 and 7.30 p.m., and in the town hall, Centreville, on Thursday, 12th Dec., at same hours. The delegation to address the meetings is H. G. Reed, V.S., Georgetown, and Henry Glendinning, Manilla, the former taking up the subject of dairy cows, stock breeding, horse breeding, for profit and more in relation to diseases. Mr. Glendinning's subjects are cultivation of the soil and destruction of weeds, feeds and feeding, farm water supply and beautifying farm homes. Local talent will furnish music for the meetings interesting, and Mr. F. D. Moore, Newburgh, will furnish music. Everybody invited. Membership fee, only 25 cts. a year.

SOMETHING SHOULD BE DONE.

WHAT IS CAUSING THE INCREASE OF CATARRH IN NAPANEE?

In spite of the best efforts of medical men, catarrhal trouble is rapidly increasing not only in Napanee, but all over the country.

Catarrh is a germ disease, and to cure it germ life in the breathing organs should be destroyed. Hyomei is the only treatment has such positive and beneficial action as Hyomei.

When the mucous membrane is irritated and raw and the tissues weakened, there is an ideal lodging place for catarrhal germs. Breathe Hyomei and see how quickly it soothes the membranes, vitalizes the tissues and destroys all the disease germs that cause catarrh. It is impossible.

There is no dangerous stomach dragging when Hyomei is used; no tablets or liquid mixtures destroying digestion.

Breathe through the neat pocket inhaler that comes with every Hyomei outfit. The healing balsamic vapor penetrate to the most remote air cells of the lungs, nose and throat, destroying the catarrhal germs so quick relief follows.

T. B. Wallace has agreed to refund the money to any purchaser of Hyomei who does not find that it does all we claim. Good for 1c. The complete outfit costs but $1.00.

DEER SKINS.

Newburgh Tannery is the place to get them tanned for mitts. Also hides and skins for robes and gauntlets.

EVERYBODY'S OPPORTUNITY.

If your eyes are causing you trouble, or the glasses you are now wearing are not giving you perfect service, the optician in charge of the optical department at The Medical Hall will be pleased to locate the difficulty for you, free of charge. We guarantee satisfaction. Fred. L. Hooper.

SANTA CLAUS

Will soon be here. We are ready for him with a fine display of Toys, Dolls, Games, and Picture Books. Come to the Crystal Hall, next door to Pruyn's Liquor store, and see how far a little cash will go there. New lines in Dinner and Toilet ware, and Fancy China. Large stock to select from, at MRS. A. PRATT'S. 48

ANNUAL MEETING.

Mrs. Symington's men's Bible class met at her house on and Nov., to arrange class work and to have a royal good time from seven to twelve with her and Mr. Symington. The house was fit from top to bottom, and tables spread most beautifully with every best thing. The lady members of the class were well represented and joined in to make the house happy. This class, under their teacher's able instruction, are wielding a strong influence for good and creating a desire in men to studently study the word of G-d.

NAPANEE CHORAL CLUB.

We are glad to inform the public that we have organized a Choral Club for this winter consisting of ladies and gentlemen. We have been most fortunate in securing Miss Singleton, of Kingston, to direct the club, as her experience as directress of Queen's University Glee Club and church choir has been varied. The first Club meeting will be held Wednesday, Dec. 4th, at eight o'clock sharp, when Miss Singleton will place the voices and assign the music. Any interested in the Club will be made welcome at the meeting, and it is desired that as far as possible the membership fee of $1.00 will be paid at first meeting. Place of meeting will be announced later.

BARGAINS FOR ALL.

Mr. M. Ryan, Newburgh, will commence on Monday next, 2d Dec., a genuine clearing sale, which will be carried on until the stock is sufficiently reduced. Twenty per cent. reduction will be given on all stock in the store including this fall's importations. For years Mr. Ryan has occupied a space on the first page of The Beaver, but because a larger space is now needed, it still in future be found on page 7, which is devoted to County correspondence. Read it this week and note the reductions quoted.

Big Discount Sale.

Of crockery, china and glassware for the next sixty days, especially in dinner sets of all shades and patterns, and in prices ranging from $5.00 to $25.00. In order to reduce them considerably, we will give a special discount of 10 per cent. off the regular prices, for the next sixty days. We can assure any one wanting sets that they will do well to avail themselves of this chance, as our goods and prices are all right, and our stock of groceries, etc., it up-to-date in all lines, and will be sold at lowest prices. THE COXALL CO.

KNOW HOW TO ADVERTISE.

If there is one thing more than another that Napanee may well be proud of it is its stores, especially the dry goods establishments. They are second to none in Central Ontario, and are conducted after the manner of city establishments. They are also liberal users of ads and believers in printers' ink, their weekly advertisements being looked for as eagerly as the local news. This week Messrs. Madill Bros. advertise a great clearance sale, and as the space required is more than our columns would permit of, they have a mammoth ad. on page 9. The Robinson Co. also advertise a great commemoration sale on page 4. Messrs. Lawrason & Co. also occupy two columns on the supplement, advertising their Xmas goods and cut-rate prices.

The Best Flour,
Dafoe's Neeuwsch,
Dafoe's Manitoba Patent

By numerous tests by the best bakers the above mentioned grades have been proven to be the best flours for family use.

When buying flour, ask for Dafoe's, and insist upon getting it. Then you will have bread and cakes and pastry that will "melt in the mouth." Dafoe's flours are made from choice mills, which has to be transported thousands of miles, and is ground by my father's own hands. Don't be persuaded to buy any other, if it is better quality. It cannot be had anywhere in Napanee, but can be had in Toronto or to outside points. Ask your dealer to get it for you. If he refuses to do so, write me and I will endeavor to pay for them with the money you pay for purchase of flour. Don't forget every bag is guaranteed.

GRAHAM & VANALSTYNE

Dodd's Kidney Pills Are Real.

THAT IS WHAT DR. WILLIAMS' PINK PILLS FOR PALE PEOPLE ALWAYS GIVE—THEY NEVER FAIL.

Good blood in the one thing necessary for perfect health. If the blood is good disease cannot exist—if it is bad disease is bound to appear. There are dozens of maladies caused by bad blood. Among them are anæmia, rheumatism, heart palpitation, headache and backache, indigestion and the special ailments of women and growing girls. If you suffer from any of these troubles, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will cure you because they make new, and I mean life giving blood. They succeed where doctors sometime fail. In proof of this Mrs. Sarah Jane Dane, Deseronto, Ont., says: "In 1905 I became weak and sickly. I was all run down; I found housework a burden sometimes I could not do it at all; the least effort made me tired. I consulted a doctor who told me he might help me some but could not cure me permanently on account of my age. I am over fifty. His treatment did me no good and I gradually grew worse; even my friends began to despair. Four different doctors attended me, one was hopeless. My suffering was intense. Sores broke out around my mouth and I consulted a specialist who told me my trouble was anæmia and that he had little hopes for my recovery. I was in deep despair and decided it was useless to spend any more money on doctors' drugs. One day my husband urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. After the use of the Pills I was convinced that I had found the right medicine, and by the time I had used two boxes I could see a change for the better. I continued the use of the Pills and by the time I had used six boxes I was entirely cured me, and I am now in excellent health. I gladly recommend them to all sufferers, for they cured me when doctors had failed and my friends were expecting death to end my suffering."

Unless the full name, "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People," is printed on the wrapper around each box don't take them—any other so-called pink pill is a fraud intended to deceive you and may do you harm. If your medicine dealer has not got the genuine Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People they will be sent to you direct at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The Peoples' Popular Trading Place

A CLEARANCE OF SURPLUS STOCKS
AT TREMENDOUS REDUCTIONS

THE GREATEST MONEY-SAVING OPPORTUNITY OF THE YEAR.

The unusually tight money market the latter part of October and this month has been a great inconvenience, not only to the banks but to hundreds of our manufacturers. To quickly raise funds to keep up their pay rolls and other expenses they were compelled to sacrifice their surplus stock at prices they would have ridiculed a few months ago. We happened to be in such a fortunate position that we could snap up these offerings for cash, and thus almost daily throughout October we have been acquiring various lines of merchandise for this great sale to be held SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 30th, AND THROUGHOUT THE MONTH OF DECEMBER. Months ago we began planning to make December the greatest sales' month of the year, and circumstances have recently conspired to further our efforts in this direction, in addition TO OUR OWN SURPLUS STOCKS AT MARVELLOUS REDUCTIONS.

THE GREATEST PRICE-CUTTING MOVEMENT OF RECENT TIMES.

MOST IMPORTANT TRADE EVENT WE EVER ANNOUNCED.

"It's an ill wind indeed that blows nobody good." We positively are going to stand at the back of the farmer and the working man. We contend they will be protected in the prices of merchandise. Therefore our many patrons will now have the greatest bargain opportunity of their lives right at the beginning of the winter season, just when they need goods most and just when it is most unusual to see a general sacrifice of prices. No such saving opportunity ever presented itself here before—an opportunity that would be utterly impossible for even us to give you had it not been for the money panic of the past month. We only have room for a few of the many good offerings during this great sale. Your Xmas goods won't cost you much this year. Pick out of this important list what you want and come to this store. OUR ATTRACTION, AND WHAT PEOPLE ARE TALKING ABOUT, ARE OUR LOW PRICES.

MOST OPPORTUNE TIME TO BUY YOUR WINTER NEEDFULS.

The Prisoner of Zenda

"They are, sir."

"I need you no more."

"Nay, I'm not oppressed with fatigue," said Rupert.

"Pray, sir, leave us," said Michael more impatiently. "In ten minutes the drawbridge will be drawn back, and I suppose you have no wish to swim for your bed."

Rupert's figure disappeared. I heard the door close and shot again. Michael and Antoinette de Mauban were left together. To my chagrin, the duke laid his head on the window and closed it. He stood talking to Antoinette for a moment or two. She shook her head, and he turned impatiently away. She left the window. The door sounded again, and Black Michael closed the shutters.

"De Gautet, De Gautet, man!" sounded from the drawbridge. "Unless you want a bath before your bed, come along!"

It was Rupert's voice, coming from the end of the drawbridge. A moment later he and De Gautet stepped out on the bridge. Rupert's arm was through De Gautet's, and in the middle of the bridge he detained his companion and leaned over. I dropped beside the shelter of Jacob's ladder.

Then Master Rupert had a little sport. He took from De Gautet a bottle, which he carried and put it to his lips.

"Hardly a drop!" he cried discontentedly and flung it in the moat.

It fell, as I judged from the sound and the circles on the water, within a yard of the pipe. And Rupert leaned out his revolver, began to shoot at it. The first two shots missed the bottle, but hit the pipe. The third shattered the bottle. I hoped that the young ruffian would be content, but he emptied the other barrels at the pipe, and one, skimming over the pipe, whistled through my hair as I crouched on the other side.

"Were bridge!" a voice cried, to my relief.

Rupert and De Gautet cried, "A moment!" and ran across. The bridge was drawn back, and all became still. The clock struck a quarter past 1. I rose and stretched myself and yawned.

I think some ten minutes had passed when I heard a slight noise to my right. I peered over the pipe and saw a dark figure standing in the gateway that led to the bridge. It was a man. By the careless, graceful way he advanced it to be Rupert again. He held a sword in his hand, and he stood motionless for a minute or two. Wild thoughts ran through me. On what mischief was the young fiend bent now? Then he laughed low to himself; then he turned his face to the wall, took a step in my direction and, to my surprise, began to climb down the wall. In an instant I saw that there must be steps in the wall; it was plain. They were cut in and offered to the wall at intervals of about eighteen inches. Rupert set his foot on the lower one, then he placed the sword between his teeth, turned round and noiselessly let himself down into the water. I was not a coward, but for my life only I would have swam to meet him. Dearly would I have loved to fight it out with him then and there—with steel—on a fine dark night—but it came between us. But there was the king. I restrained myself, but I could not bridle my evil breathing, and I watched him with the intensest eagerness.

He swam leisurely and quietly across. There were more footsteps up on the other side, and he climbed them. When he got foot in the gateway, standing on the drawn back bridge, he felt in his pocket and took something out. I heard him unlock the door. I could hear no noise of its closing behind him. He vanished from my sight.

Abandoning my ladder—I saw I did not need it now—I swam to the side of the bridge and climbed halfway up the steps. There I hung, with my sword in my hand, listening eagerly. The duke's room was shuttered and dark. There was a light in the window on the opposite side of the bridge. Not a sound broke the silence until half past 1 chimed from the great clock in the tower of the chateau.

There were other clocks than mine afoot in the castle that night.

CHAPTER XVIII.

THE position wherein I stood does not appear very favorable to thought, yet for the next moment or two I thought profoundly. I had, I told myself, acted on point. Be Rupert Hentzau's errand what it might and to what end he was engaged on what it would, I had scored one point. He was on the other side of the moat from the king, and it would be by no fault of mine if ever he set foot on the same side again. I had three left to deal with—two on guard and the traitor Bersonin by bed. Ah, if I had the keys! I would have risked everything and attacked Detchard and Bersonin before my friends could join them. But I was powerless. I must wait till the coming of my friends would allow me to cross the bridge—some one with the keys. Andjl waited, as it seemed, for half an hour, really for about five minutes, before the next act in the rapid drama began.

All was still on the other side. The duke's room remained inscrutable behind its shutters. The light burned steadily in Mme. de Mauban's window. Then I heard a step on the bridge, a sound. It came from behind the door which led to the drawbridge on the other side of the moat. If the door reached my ear, yet I could not be mistaken as to what it was. It was made by a key being turned very carefully and slowly. Who was turning it? And of what room was it the key? There leaped before my eyes the picture of young Rupert, with the key in one hand, his sword in the other and an evil smile on his face. But I did not know what door it was nor in which of his favorite pursuits young Rupert was spending the hours of that night.

I was soon to be enlightened, for the next moment—before my friends could be near the chateau door—before Antoinette, the lawyer, would have thought it was time to bring her his tardy news—there was a sudden crash from the room with the lighted window. It sounded as though a table were flung down a lamp, and the window went dark and black. At the same instant a cry rang out, shrill in the night air—"Help, help Michael, help!" and was followed by a shriek of utter terror.

I was tingling in every nerve. I stood on the topmost step, clinging to the threshold of the gate with my right hand and holding my sword in my left. Suddenly I perceived that the gateway was broader than the bridge. There was a dark corner on the open side where a man could stand. I darted across and stood there. Then placed I commanded the path, and no man could pass between the chateau and the old castle till he had tried conclusions with me.

There was another shriek. Then a door was flung open and clanged against the wall, and I heard the hands of a door savagely twisted.

"Open the door! In God's name, what's the matter?" cried a voice, the voice of Black Michael himself.

He was answered by the very words I had written in my letter:

"Help, Michael—Hentzau!"

A fierce oath rang out from the duke, and, with a loud thud, he threw himself against the door. At the same moment I heard a window above my head open, and a voice cried, "Help! What's the matter?" and I heard a man's hasty footsteps. I grasped my sword. If De Gautet came my way the Six would be way by one more.

Then I heard the clash of crossed swords and a tramp of feet, and—I cannot tell the thing so quickly as it happened, for all seemed to come at once. There was an angry cry from madam's room, the cry of a wounded man. The window was flung open. Young Rupert stood there, sword in hand. He turned his back, and I saw his body go forward to the lunge.

"Ah, Johann, there's one for you! Come on, Michael!"

Johann was there, then—come to the rescue of the duke! How would he open the door for me, for I feared that Rupert had slain him?

"Help!" cried the duke's voice, faint and husky.

I heard a stir on the stairs above me, and I heard a stir down to my right in the direction of the king's cell. But before anything happened on my side of the moat I saw five or six men round young Rupert in the embrasure of madam's window. Four or four times he lunged with incomparable dash and dexterity. For an instant they fell back, leaving a ring round him. He leaped on the parapet of the window, laughing as he leaped, and waving his sword in his hand. He was drunk with blood, and he laughed again wildly as he flung himself headlong into the moat.

What became of him then? I did not see, for as he leaped De Gautet's lean face looked out through the door by me, and without a second's hesitation I struck at him with all the strength God had given me, and he fell dead in the doorway without a word or a groan. I dropped on my knees by him. Where were the keys? I found myself muttering. "The keys, man, the keys!" as though he had been yet alive and could listen, and when I could not find them I—God forgive me!—I believe I stamped on the dead face.

At last I had them. There were but three. Seizing the largest, I felt the lock of the door that led to the cell. I fitted in the key. It was right. The lock turned. I drew the door close behind me and locked it as noiselessly as I could, putting the key in my pocket.

I found myself at the top of a flight of steep stone stairs. An oil lamp burned dimly in the bracket. I took it down and held it in my hand, and I stood and listened.

"What in the devil can it be?" I heard a voice say.

It came from behind a door that faced me at the bottom of the stairs.

And another answered:

"Shall we kill him?"

I strained to hear the answer and could have sobbed with relief when Detchard's voice came jigging and cold:

"Wait a bit. There'll be trouble if we strike too soon."

There was a moment's silence. Then I heard the bolt of the door cautiously drawn back. Instantly I put out the light I held, replacing the lamp in the bracket.

"It's dark—the lamp's out. Have you a light?" said the other voice—Bersonin's.

No doubt they had a light, but they should not use it. It was come to the crisis now, and I rushed down the steps and flung myself against the door. Bersonin had unbolted it, and it gave way before me. The Belgian stood there, sword in hand, and Detchard was sitting on a couch at the side of the room. In astonishment at seeing me, Bersonin recoiled; Detchard jumped to his sword. I sprang again at the Belgian. He gave way before me, and I drove him up against the wall. He was no swordsman, though he fought bravely, and in a moment he lay on the floor before me. I turned. Detchard was not there. Faithful to his orders, he had not risked a fight with me, but had rushed straight to the door of the king's cell, opened it, and slammed it behind him. Now I know he was at his work inside.

And surely he would have killed the King and perhaps also the duke, and I had been for one devoted man who gave his life for the king, for when I forced the door the sight I saw was this: The king stood in the corner of the room. Broken in his sickness, he could do nothing. "In fettered hands moved uselessly up and down, and he was laughing horribly, half mad and drunk. Detchard and the doctor were together in the middle of the room, and the doctor had flung himself on the intruder, pinning his hands to his sides for an instant. Then Detchard wrenched himself free from the feeble grip, and as I entered drove his sword through the hapless man.

Then he turned on me, crying:

"At last!"

We were sword to sword. By three to one chance neither he nor Bersonin had had time to draw their revolvers. I found them afterward, ready loaded, on the mantelpiece of the outer room. I was the quicker of the two, moved to their hands, but my sudden rush in had cut off access to them. Yes, we were man to man, and it was to fight, silently, sternly and hard. Yet I remember little of it, save that the man was my master. He was stronger, and passed me for he knew more tricks than I—and that he forced me back against the door that opened the entrance to Jacob's ladder. And I saw a smile on his face, and ho wounded me in the left arm.

No glory do I take for that contest. I believe that the man would have mastered me and slain me and then gone his butcher's work, for he was the most skillful swordsman I have ever met, but even as he pressed me hard the half mad, wasted, wan creature in the corner leaped high in lunatic mirth, shrieking:

"It's Cousin Rudolf! Cousin Rudolf! I'll help you, Cousin Rudolf!" And, catching up a chair in his hands (he could but just lift it from the ground and hold it uselessly before him), he came toward us. Hope came to me.

"Come on!" I cried. "Come on! Drive it against his legs!"

Detchard replied with a savage threat. He all but had me.

"Come on! Come on, man!" I cried. "Come and share the fun!"

And the king laughed gleefully and came on, pushing his chair before him.

With an oath Detchard skipped back and before I knew what he was doing had thrown his sword against the king. He made one fierce cut at the king, and the king, with a piteous cry, dropped where he stood. The stout ruffian turned to face me again. But his own hand had prepared his destruction, for in turning he trod in the pool of blood that flowed from the dead physician. He slipped; he fell. Like a dart I was upon him. I caught him by the throat, and before he could recover I drove my blade through his neck, and with a stilled curse he fell across the body of his victim.

Was the king dead? It was my first thought. I rushed to where he lay. Yes, it seemed as if he were dead, for he had a great gash across the forehead, and he lay still in a huddled mass on the floor. I dropped on my knees beside him and leaned my ear down to hear if he breathed. But before I could there was a loud rattle from the outside. I sprang to my feet. The drawbridge was being pushed out. A moment later it rang home against the wall on my side of the moat. I should be caught in a trap and the king with me if he yet lived. He must take his chance to live or to die. I took my sword and passed into the other room. Who were pushing the drawbridge out—my men? If so, all was well. My eye fell on the revolvers, and I seized one and passed to listen in the doorway of the outer room. To listen, say I? Yes, and to get my breath, and I tore my shirt and twisted a strip of it round my bleeding arm and stood listening again. I would have given the world to hear Sapt's voice, for I was faint, spent and weary. And that wildcat Rupert Hentzau was yet at large in the castle. Yet, because I could better defend the narrow door at the top of the stairs than the wider entrance to the room, I dragged myself up the steps and stood behind it, listening.

What was the sound? Again a strange one for the place and the time. An easy, sceptical, merry laugh, the laugh of young Rupert Hentzau! I could scarcely believe that a sane man would laugh. Yet the laugh told me that my men had not come, for they must have shot Rupert ere now if they had come, and the clock struck half past 2! My God, the door had not been opened! They had gone to the bank! They had not found me! They had gone by way back to Tarlenheim for the news of the king's death—and mine. Well, it would be true before they got there. Was not Rupert laughing in triumph?

For a moment I sank unnerved against the door. Then I started up alert again, for Rupert cried scornfully:

"Well, the bridge is there! Come over it! And in God's name, spend a Black Michael keep back you cowa! Michael, come and fight for her!"

If it were a three cornered fight I might yet bear my part. I turned the key in the door and looked out.

CHAPTER XIX.

FOR a moment I could see nothing, for the glare of lanterns and torches caught me full in the eyes from the other side of the bridge. But soon the scene grew clear, and I saw the carriage and the bridge was in its place. At the far end of it stood a group of the duke's servants. In the three carried the lights which had deserted me; three or four held pikes in rest. They were huddled together; their weapons were protruded before them; their faces were pale and agitated. To put it plainly, they looked in no sense a fright as I have seen men look, and they stood eagerly, attentively at a man who stood in the middle of the bridge, pointing to the water and talking to them with his hands and shirt. The white flesh was stained with blood, but his easy, careless attitude showed that he had himself either not touched at all or merely scratched. There he stood, laughing and talking, and then he turned and farther them to engage on, or, rather, bidding them and Black Michael to him, and they, deeply impressed by the prowess of the single man and dared not attack him. They whispered to one another, and in the background I saw my friend Jeanhean leaning against the portal of the door and slunching with a handkerchief the blood which flowed from a wound in his cheek.

By marvelous chance I was master. The cervens would oppose me no more than they dared attack Rupert. I had but to raise my revolver to send him to his account with his sins on his head. He did not so much as know that I was there. I did nothing—why, I hardly know to this day. I had killed one man stealthily that night and another by luck rather than skill—perhaps it was that. Again, within me the man was, I did not relish being one of a crowd against him—perhaps it was that. But stronger than either of these restraining feelings came a curiosity and a fascination which held me spellbound, watching for the outcome of the scene.

"Michael, you dog! Michael! If you can stand, come on!" cried Rupert. And he advanced a step, the group shrinking back a little before him.

The answer to his taunts came in a shrill cry of a woman:

"He's dead! My God, he's dead!"

"Dead!" shouted Rupert. "I struck better than I knew!" And he laughed triumphantly. Then he went on: "Down with your weapons there! I'm your master now! Down with them, I say!"

I believe they would have obeyed, but as he spoke came new things. First there arose a distant sound, a din of shouts and knockings from the other side of the chateau. My heart leaped. It must be my men, come by a happy disobedience to seek me. The noise continued, but none of the rest seemed to heed it. Their attention was chained by what now happened before their eyes. The group of servants parted, and a woman staggered on to the bridge. Antoinette de Mauban was in a loose white robe, her dark hair streamed over her shoulders, her face was ghastly pale, and her eyes gleamed wildly in the light of the torches. In her shaking hand she held a revolver, and as she tottered forward she fired at Rupert Hentzau. The ball missed him and struck the woodwork over my head.

"Fails, fails!" laughed Rupert, "had your eyes been no more deadly than your shooting I had not been in this scrape nor Black Michael in the lower regions tonight!"

She took no notice of his words. With a queer and rather slow action herself till she stood still and rigid. Then very slowly and deliberately she began to raise her arm again, taking most careful aim.

He would be mad to risk it. He must rush on her, charging the bullet, or retreat toward me. I covered him with my weapon.

He did neither. Before she had got her aim he bowed in his most graceful fashion, cried, "I can't kill where I've kissed; I'm not back to Tarlenheim," and him laid his hand on the parapet of the bridge and lightly leaped into the moat. At the moment I heard a rush of feet and a voice I knew—Sapt's—cry, "God, it's the duke—dead!" Then I knew that the king needed me no more. Throwing down my revolver, I sprang out on the bridge. There was a cry of wild wonder, "The king!" and I saw his Rupert Hentzau, sword in hand, vaulted over the parapet, intent on finishing my quarrel with him where I saw his curly head fifteen yards off in the water of the moat.

He swam swiftly and easily. I was wounded and half crippled with my wounded arm. I could not gain on him. For a time I madeigo sound, but as we neared the corner of the old keep I cried:

"Stop, Rupert! Stop!"

He gave a look over his shoulder, but he swam on. He was under the bank now, searching, as I guessed, for a spot to land and climb. I knew there to be none, but there was my rope, which would still be hanging where I had left it. He would come to where it was and climb it. Perhaps he would make it; perhaps he would find it, and if he drew it up after him he would get a good start of me. I put forth all my remaining strength and pressed on. At last I began to gain on him, for he, accepted with his search, unconsciously slackened his pace.

Ah, he had found it! A low shout of triumph came from him. He laid hold of it, gave it a few pulls to test it, and began to climb. I was now under the bank

A DESERTED WIFE.

Kingston Whig, Dec. 2d.

When the Cape Vincent boat arrived today a very sad case was reported. About Three years ago a man and his wife left here for Cape Vincent, to live. The woman was a Canadian with relatives living near Napanee. To-day the wife and child arrived here on her way to stay with her relatives, travelling at the expense of Supervisor Bates, of Cape Vincent. Six months ago the husband cleared out, leaving his wife and few months old baby to care for themselves. The woman tried to get along as well as she could, but at last had to appeal to the municipality for aid. Mr. Bates did everything in his power to aid the deserted woman, even to paying her expenses to her home. No reason is given for the husband's action, and no one knows where he went.

SHORT WEIGHT.

On Saturday, 23d Nov., Chief Graham discovered a gentleman on the market with potatoes weighing a little short of the number of pounds that are supposed to be in a bag. The owner was let go with a warning. Last Saturday another man brought loads to the market which were from one to three ounces short on each pound, for which he asked 25c. and 30c. a bushel. He was prosecuted and will be given to the poor. This should certainly be a warning to any person who has even the thought of passing out short weight goods, as the Chief is now on the lookout and offenders will receive the penalty.

Deafness Cannot be Cured.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

FRASER ASSELSTINE.

The death took place on Saturday, of one of Belleville's highly respected and well-known citizens, when Fraser Asselstine passed away after a lengthy illness. About nine years ago he suffered a paralytic stroke and latterly his heart became affected, which hastened the end. The deceased was a son of the late Isaac F. Asselstine, and was born in Ernesttown, fifty-two years ago. For thirty-two years he was a resident of this city and carried on the business of a dealer in musical instruments. Surviving him are his widow and one son, Burton, of Queen's University, his mother, Mrs. Asselstine, Kingston, two sisters, Mrs. Kate, Kingston, and Mrs. J. S. Powley, Toronto; two brothers, Michael and Henry B., Odessa.

DELONG — ORSER.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. M. B. Rodbert, Redoubt, was the scene of a happy event on Wednesday evening, Nov. 27th, when their niece, Miss Ada M. Delong, was married to Mr. Harry Orser, of Murray. The bride was given away by her uncle, Mr. M. B. Rodbert, and looked very pretty in her travelling suit of brown chiffon velvet and white lace. She carried a white prayer book and was attended only by Miss Gladys Rodbert, who dressed in white silk and carrying a basket of white roses, looked like a little fairy. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Herbert, at 7 p.m., after which all sat down to a delightful supper, the tables being beautifully decorated with pink roses, ferns, carnations and ferns. Among the guests from a distance were Mrs. C. Delong, of Tyendinaga, Mr. and Mrs. H. Ketcheson, of Hillsdale; Miss Edith Gordon, Wellington; and Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Shipman, Napanee. As the bridal party descended to the drawing room, Mrs. Shipman played the wedding march, and as the ceremony proceeded drifted into a soft dreamy reverie, which continued throughout. The many useful and costly presents testified to the popularity of the bride. The happy couple took the midnight train at Belleville, for Ottawa, and on their return spend a couple of days at Napanee guests of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Shipman. Mr. and Mrs. Orser will make their home at Murray, Ont.

Weak Women

To weak and ailing women, there is at least one way to help. Two treatments are required, but must be combined. One is local, one is constitutional, but both are important, both essential. Dr. Shoop's Night Cure is the Local. Dr. Shoop's Restorative, the Constitutional. The former—Dr. Shoop's Night Cure—has instant power to relieve nervousness, sleeplessness, and irritability. Restorative is vitality, normal treatment. The Restorative reaches through the stomach to enrich the blood, to give it power to feed the nerves. Both Night Cure and Restorative are to be had at all druggists. Write Dr. Shoop, Racine, Wis., for free book. Test them. Let them prove what they will do for you. Don't suffer from weak, watery blood, from nervousness, irritability, weak stomach, indigestion, backache, headache, or any of the ills of weak women. Start to get well today. DISCRIMINATING LADIES.

Ruby Using Herpicide on Account of Its Distinctiveness.

The ladies who have used Newbro's Herpicide speak of it in the highest terms, for its quick effect in cleansing the scalp of dandruff and also for its effective use as a general hair-dressing. It makes the scalp feel fresh and it allays all itching which dandruff will cause. Newbro's Herpicide effectively cures dandruff, as it destroys the germ that causes it. The same germ causes hair to fall out and later baldness; in killing it, Herpicide stops falling hair and prevents baldness. It is also an ideal hair dressing, for it lends an aristocratic charm to the hair that is quite distinctive. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c. in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.

The Prisoner of Zenda

By ANTHONY HOPE

Copyright, 1897, 1898, by Henry Holt & Company.

The little farm girl stood by us, weeping for fright and wide eyed for wonder.

"Au revoir, Rudolf Rassendyll!"

for, as the hind seen me at Zenda, and was not I, pallid, dripping, foul and bloody as I was—yet was not I the king?

And when I heard that the king was alive I strove to cry "Hurrah!" but I could not speak, and I laid my head back in Fritz's arms and closed my eyes, and I groaned, and then, lest Fritz should do me wrong in his thoughts, I opened my eyes and tried to say "Hurrah!" again, but I could not, and, being very tired and sore very cold, I huddled myself close up to Fritz to get the warmth of him and shut my eyes again and went to sleep.

CHAPTER XX.

IN order to a full understanding of what had occurred in the castle of Zenda it is necessary to supplement my account of what I myself saw and did on that night by relating briefly what I afterward learned from Fritz and from Mme. de Mauban. The story told by the latter explained clearly how it happened that the cry which I had arranged as a stratagem and a sham had come in dreadful reality before its time and had thus, as it seemed at the moment, ruined our hopes, while in the end it had favored them. The unhappy woman, fired, I believe, by a genuine attachment to the Duke of Strelsau—less than to the dazzling prospects which a dominion over him opened before her eyes, had followed him and Antoinette from Paris to Strelsau. He was a man of strong passions, but of stronger will, and his cool head ruled both. He was content to bide and give nothing. When she arrived she was not long in finding thatgshe had a rival in Queen Antoinette. Rendered desperate, she stood at nothing which might give or keep for her her power over the duke. As I say, he took and gave not. Simultaneously Antoinette found herself entangled in his audacious schemes. Unwilling to abandon him, bound to him by the chains of shame and hope, she yet would not be a decoy nor at his bidding more to deathly hurt the letters of warning she had written. Whether the lines she sent to Fritz were inspired by good or bad feeling, by jealousy or by pity, I do not know, but here also she served us well. When the duke went to Zenda she accompanied him, and here for the first time she learned the full measure of his cruelty and was touched with compassion for the unfortunate king. From this time she was with us, yet from what she told me I know that she still (as women will loved Michael and trusted to gain his life, if not his pardon, from the king as the reward for her assistance. His triumph she did not desire, for she loathed his crime and loathed yet more fiercely what would be the prize of it—his marriage with his cousin, Princess Flavia.

At Zenda a new force came into play, the daring of young Rupert. He was caught by her beauty, perhaps. Perhaps it was enough for him that she belonged to another man and that she loved him. For many days there had been quarrels and ill will between him and the duke, and the scene which I had witnessed in the duke's room was but one of many. Rupert's proposals to me, of which she had of course been ignorant, in no way surprised her when I related them. She had herself warned Michael against Rupert even when she was calling on me to deliver her from the toils of them. On this night, then, Rupert when she had gone to her room, having furnished himself with a key to it, made his entrance. Her cries had brought the duke, and there in the dark room while she screamed the men had fought, and Rupert, having wounded his master with a mortal blow, had on the servants rushing in escaped through the window, as I have described. The duke's blood, spurting out, had stained his opponent's shirt; he died, not knowing that he had dealt Michael his death, was eager to finish the encounter. How he meant to deal with three of the men and I know not. I dare say he did not think, for the killing of Michael was not premeditated. Antoinette, left alone with the duke, had tried to stanch his wound, and thus was she busied till he died, and then, hearing Rupert's taunts, she had come forth to avenge him. Me she had not seen, nor did she till I darted out of my ambush and leaped after Rupert into the moat.

The same moment found my friends on the scene. They had reached the chateau in due time and waited ready by the door. But Johann, swept with the rest to the rescue of the duke, did not open it—nay, he took a part against Rupert, putting himself forward more bravely than any in his anxiety to avert suspicion. And he had received a wound, in the embrasure of the window. Till nearly half past 2 Sapt waited; then, following my orders, he had sent Fritz to search the banks of the moat. I was not there. Hastening back, Fritz told Sapt, and Sapt was for following orders still and riding at full speed back to Tarlenheim, while Fritz went again to the moat to find me, let me have ordered what I would. On this they disputed some few minutes; then Sapt, persuaded, left a detached a party under Bersenstein to gallop back to Tarlenheim and bring up the marshal, while he, at rest fell to on the great door of the chateau. For near fifteen minutes it resisted them; then, just as Antoinette de Mauban had fired Rupert-Rentzau on the bridge, they broke in, eight of them in all, and the first door they came to was the door of Michael's room, and Michael lay dead across the threshold, with a sword thrust through his breast. Sapt cried out at his death, as I had heard, and they rushed on the servants, but these in fear dropped their weapons, and Antoinette flung herself weeping at Sapt's feet. And all she cried was that I had been at the end of the bridge and had leaped off. "What of the prisoner?" asked Sapt, but she shook her head. Then Sapt and Fritz, with the gentlemen behind them, crossed the bridge, slowly, warily and without noise, and Fritz stumbled over the body of De Gautet in the eyy of the moon. They felt him and found him dead.

Then they consulted, listening eagerly for any sound from the cells below, but there came none, and they were greatly afraid that the king's guards had killed him and, having pushed his body through the great pipe, had escaped the same way themselves. Yet because I had been seen here they had still some hope (thus, indeed, Fritz in his friendship told me), and, going back to Michael's body, pushing aside Antoinette, who prayed by it, they found a key to the door which I had locked which shows that skin diseases heretofore considered hopeless can be cured.

Sick childhood, Leo Corrigan has been tortured with the horrible agony and feeling of Eczema. His parents have spent a great deal of money in consulting physicians and buying medicines —but all to no purpose.

As he grew older he sought other doctors—some of them specialists. He was eleven weeks in a Toronto hospital—eight weeks in bed. At times the irritation and pain caused by the Eczema were so severe, life was a burden. He would get relief, but he could not walk. Several winters he could do no work.

He wrote, on February 20, 1906:

"In November, 1905, I had another attack, and I was advised to use Zam-Buk. I thought it would be like the others—that I had tried all of them in vain. But, to my great delight, a few hours after the first application, I felt relief—nothing else.

I have used it, now, two and a-half months, and wholeheartedly state that it is the best remedy I ever used. It has worked wonders for me. Since using Zam-Buk I have been able to work every day—without irritation and without suffering. I am entirely cured."

Prove a state of great irritation and sometimes bleeding going on beneath—not such as such being capable of doing hard work every day, is a marvelous change. Zam-Buk has effected it.

I strongly recommend any person afflicted with this terrible complaint—Eczema—to try Zam-Buk."

"It is not the king. Don't him him."

Sapt started round. The old marshal's face asked unspoken questions. Flavia's glance was no less eloquent. Suspicion spreads quick.

"I'll ride myself and see this man," said Sapt hastily.

"Nay, I'll come myself," said the princess.

"Then come alone," he whispered.

And she, obedient to the strange hinting in his face, prayed the marshal and the rest to wait, and she and Sapt came on foot toward where we lay, Sapt waving to the farm girl to keep at a distance. And when I saw

COUNTY COUNCIL

(Concluded from last week.)

SECOND DAY—AFTERNOON SESSION.

Council resumed.

Communication from G. F. Ruttan complaining of stoppage of natural water course by Road Engineer Anderson, causing damage to land of Geo. Stinson, was read, and ordered filed.

Communication from Napanee Collegiate Institute.

Moved by Mr. Edgar, seconded by Mr. Davis, that the matter of increasing grant be referred to Education and Printing Committee, to report to-morrow. Carried.

The following accounts were ordered to be paid: J. M. Gray, $5.40, chargeable to Camden County Road account; J. H. Hogle, $5.95, chargeable to Ernestown County Road account; Township of Ernestown, $60.00, chargeable to County Machinery account; R. Herrington, $3.50, chargeable to County Road account; Re-audit.

The following accounts were referred to County Property Committee to report: Josh. Pendell $5.00; M. S. Madole, Registry Office, $3.20.

Account, M. S. Madole, $22.88, was ordered to lay on the table.

Communication from Herrington, Warner and Grange, notifying Council of accident to Mrs. C. H. Finkle and daughter, at Newburgh bridge approach, was read and filed.

Moved by Mr. Aylesworth, seconded by Mr. Lowry, that whereas this Council is convinced that the best and most humane method of caring for such of the poor as from various causes have become dependent upon public support, is to provide Houses of Refuge, situated so as conveniently to serve the purpose for large districts such as a whole County; and whereas the Consolidated Debenture debt of this County now lacks but a short period of its complete liquidation.

And whereas the present condition of the money market is such that even debentures could be disposed of only at a very considerable disadvantage.

Therefore, be it resolved, and it is hereby resolved, that this Council considers it inexpedient immediately to undertake the establishment of a House of Refuge, but strongly recommends the said undertaking in the near future.

Moved in amendment by Mr. Edgar, seconded by Mr. Hamm, that the question of erection of a House of Refuge be laid over till next year. Carried.

On motion Council adjourned till to-morrow at 10 a.m.

ABOUT SEWING MACHINES.

When the sewing machine begins to run hard and work, it is because the oil has become gummy. Oil the parts with coal oil and let it remain on for two hours. Then with a soft cloth wipe off every part and portion After this is well done, oil as usual with fine machine oil. You will think you are running a new machine. Never buy anything but the best oil, as poor oil ruins the machine.

Napanee's Cash Grocery

IF YOU PAY CASH, WHY PAY CREDIT PRICES?

95 per cent. of our goods come direct from the manufacturers, thus we have the lowest and best to save you the middlemen's or wholesaler's profit, and add the expenses of the credit system, which counts up TO 20 PER CENT. OFF general and package Groceries.

Others may follow some of our prices at times, some cut to direct your attention, but take the coal oil scandal as a sample. The cost of coal oil to retailers for the month of January, and those appearing the most anxious to sell coal oil at cost are the ones that never paid perhaps still are) the most determined to force us to run the combine and restore the former retail price, 25c per gallon.

All our prices are always right.

Our teatime is over 70 per cent. of Yeast Soda, Blue, Butter Color, Diamond Dyes, Stove Blacking, Root Polish.

10 per cent. discount for cash and 10 per cent. off for one year equals 11 1/2 p.c.

THE ROBINSON CO. LIMITED — NAPANEE'S — GREATEST STORE — THE ROBINSON CO. LIMITED

The Store Shows its Christmas Readiness

SUCH READINESS!

Over seventy thousand dollars in Merchandise in this great building.

Two weeks from next Wednesday comes the great holiday season when you are working and planning. Just as well—in fact a good deal better—to do your buying early and have it over. Everything that's to be here for Christmas is here now. Then too, you make it easier for those who serve you by not putting off till the last minute the shopping you might do now.

SHOP EARLY—AS EARLY IN THE WEEK AS POSSIBLE—AS EARLY IN THE DAY AS POSSIBLE, AS THE HOLIDAY BUSINESS BECOMES PROGRESSIVELY INTENSIFIED.

Teddy Bear Crib Blankets

Here is one of the latest inventions of a clever Yankee. It combines the fad of the day with a useful garment. Made from a beautifully soft fleecy material in several color combinations. For instance the light blue grounds have white Teddy Bears, the tan grounds have pink bears, and so on with about seven color combinations. Wherever there is a home with a kiddie these crib blankets are very suggestive for Christmas gifts. We're taking orders for them and can have shipped to anywhere in America before Xmas Price, $2.00.

All Women's Fur and Fur-lined Coats at Less Than Regular Prices.

All our Fur-lined Coats and Fur Coats are going at less than our regular prices. Everyone of them is of high quality, with a Robinson Co. guarantee to protect you. In buying Furs you take considerable risk when you buy outside of a first class house. If skins go wrong you have no redress. Not so with an old reliable house like this. We have too much at stake to trifle with inferior qualities. Compare our values with city prices.

Dainty Xmas Waistings.

In white and dark grounds with colored embroidered dot, 27 inch material for 50c.

Evening Wear — Dress Goods.

The ladies appreciate our assortment of evening wear fabrics and have been buying them freely.

Colored Hair Line Stripe Voile in the opera shades.

The new Filet Net with lace trimming to match in sky, rose, butter, white and tan shades. A pleasure to show them.

Plain and Embroidered Voiles.

Boys' Fleece Lined Underwear.

Is at present very scarce goods and hard to get. At present writing we have all sizes in stock and the prices are the same as they have been for years past, ranging from 20c for size 20 up to 45c for size 32.

Men's Black Overalls.

We have just received a very large shipment of Overalls and lined Smocks for the working man. The same excellent values we have had before in spite of the advancing market. See our extra heavy double seat and double knee overall in black or grey at $1.00 a pair.

Furs For Christmas.

Nowadays the demand for Christmas gifts is not for mere trinkets but for something that combines both beauty and lasting usefulness, and when so many gifts must be bought, every one wants to get something good at a moderate price. There is nothing so desirable from these two points of view as a fur article of some kind. We are showing a very complete stock in all the leading styles of Fur and we double the cordiality of our customers invitation to come and inspect our goods. Special prices prevail.

Sharp Price Cutting in Persian Curl Coats.

Those beautiful Black Curl Coats that you have been recently admiring at $50 and $65 have been cut in price to $19.50 and $25. Size 32 to 40.

Reliable Kid Gloves for Xmas Giving.

At Christmas time, nine out of ten pairs of Kid Gloves sold are for gifts. To be sure of quality insist on having guaranteed reliable makes. We name three makes—Fownes, Perrins, Evangeline, that have stood the test. A nice box to put them in for the asking. Also a Swastika card to put the name on.

Women's Christmas Neckwear Complete.

We are now ready with completed assortments of Xmas Neckwear. Choosing now is certainly at its best. So much more satisfactory to pick from big assortments of dainty new crisp creations than later on when assortments are broken.

The dainty new styles are very pretty You will we are sure be very pleased with them. With the better qualities we supply you with a very pretty fancy box.

Men's Fur Coats, Fur Collars, Fur Caps.

All are at special prices. Adjustable Fur Collars can be had from us as low as $3.15 and as high as $45 for an extra quality genuine Otter. Dozens to choose from and they do make a most acceptable present.

"Walkeesi" Black Hose for Men.

Have you ever seen them? They have heavy double thickness soles, heels and toes, will outwear two pairs of the ordinary kind at the same price and are a decided boon to any who are troubled with tired aching feet. Price, 50c. Sizes 10, 10 1–2, 11.

Dress Goods Special Roxana Suiting.

Two rolls of this popular all wool suiting. Dark hunters green and cream. Width, 54 in. Regular $1.00 yard. To clear, 50c yd.

Fancy Boxes for Gift Buyers.

Dainty and perishable novelties look much better when new and crisp. We have 1,000 boxes for our custome s to use in protecting dainty stuffs. If you are buying for gift purposes, these are yours for the asking.

Leather Goods.

Every season brings its novelties. There are many new ideas brought out in Leather Hand Bags, Purses, Music Rolls, etc., that are very suitable and useful for Christmas buyers.

Our advice is to buy in time. Delay may mean a lost chance for the very item that you have set your heart on. We've been working like beavers to get everything in readiness for your Christmas shopping. Now our word is to buy early.

We are Prepared

To have made to your order Seal Coats at $275 to $500. Persian Lamb Coats, $125 to $200. Christmas orders should be in at once.

We've Planned

Our store decorating and made free use of tickets so that customers may be helped in their shopping.

Special lots of Trimmed Hats at $2.50, $3.50, $4.50.

Women's Black Hoods, knitted, at 75c, $1.00. Children's colored and white hoods, 35c up.

RIBBONS—Don't forget us for ribbons. Right values and large assortments. Our big buying powers tell in ribbons as in silks.

Linens for Gifts.

Many homes in Napanee can show you choice lots of Real Linens that were bought at Robinson's. We are safe in saying that the owners take great pleasure in showing them. We refer particularly to the fancy table and bed linens, hand embroidered goods. Keep Robinson Co. linens in mind when starting out for your Xmas gifts. Pattern Table Cloths, Tea Cloths, with Napkins to match covers, Pillow Cases, Doylies, Lunch Sets, Napkins.

Boxed Handkerchiefs for Xmas Gifts.

From Ireland come the finest collection of boxed Xmas handkerchiefs we have ever shown. There are the small sized pictured boxes to tickle the heart of the wee ones.

Quarter dozen and half dozen lots of ladies' or men's sized handkerchiefs in plain, fancy or initialed with state bits of scenery, character sketches, floral and art designs. In the Xmas boxes nearer the assortment will grow less. Prices per box, 20c, 25c, 35c, 50c, 75c, $1.00, up to $3.50. A Christmas card in each of the better boxes.

Fur Turbans and Glengarys for Children.

Turbans are made from Squirrels, Glengarys are from Candda Ermine with tails.

Men's House Coats and Dressing Gowns.

We impart these ourselves and certainly show great values.

Our $5 Dressing Gown is as good as we used to show at $10. Other prices are 7 50, 10.00, 12 50.

House Coats at 2 50 up to 5.00.

Special Prices on Men's Fur Lined Coats, all Men's Fur Coats and Imitation Lined.

Men's Fancy Vests To Order.

The most acceptable present of all for a man is a Fancy Vest to order.

Ry., stopping two days in each place over the line as far as Marlbank. He will be in Enterprise, next door west of Methodist church, next Monday and Tuesday, and at Mr. Vandewater's photograph rooms, Yarker, on Wednesday and Thursday, and at his own store in town the rest of the week, Friday and Saturday. 48c

A tickling cough, from any cause, is quickly stopped by Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. And it is so thoroughly harmless and safe, that Dr. Shoop tells mothers to give it to the baby as it without hesitation, even to very young infants. The active principle of seven leaves and one cedar plant of a long-healing mountainous shrub, furnish the curative properties to Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. It calms the cough, and heals the sore and sensitive bronchial membranes. No opium, no chloroform, nothing harsh used to injure or suppress. Simply a resinous plant extract, that helps to heal aching lungs. The Spaniards call this shrub which the Doctor gets his Cough Cure, "the Sacred Herb." Always demand Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. For sale by T. B. Wallace. 49bp

STRATHCONA.

Mrs. Byron Rose entertained Mr. and Mrs. E. Rosh and Mr. and Mrs. George Hayward, on Thursday evening last. The announcement of Mr. W. Ballance's marriage created quite a surprise here, especially among the ladies. Best wishes.—Bert. Mr. Ballance was kicked by a horse on Monday last. The animal struck him on the leg at the knee. Although badly bruised it was not broken, which omits very fortunate. The winter seems to have set in in earnest. Though the sleighing is rather poor, there is a little to be seen. Mr. Wm. Smith is the guest for a few days with his family.—Mrs. Edward Rosh, of Cleveland, is visiting with Mr. E. B. Allen, Napanee.—Mr. and Mrs. H. Wagar and Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Carr have left the village from their farm lying about a mile from here.

The Methodist Sunday School are practising for their annual entertainment to be held on Christmas night.—Miss L. Riddell has returned after visiting friends at Harrowsmith.—Miss Vanalstine has been re-engaged as teacher for the ensuing year.—Mr. Peter Warman, of Sydenham, has returned, after visiting friends here.—Mr. and Mrs. Mamm McQueen are visiting their sons at Kingston.—Mrs. Glenn, of Bath, spent a few days with Mr. and Mrs. Perry Couners at the Colebrook House.—Mr. Jas. Gray has returned home, after visiting with friends at Brockville and Lansdowne. His grandson, Charlie Ferguson, accompanied him.—Miss Laura Galbraith has returned home, after spending a few weeks with friends at Wellington.—Miss Woodruff, of Sydenham, is visiting friends here.—Mr. and Mrs. Burton Sutton are occupying a part of Mrs. John Shangraw's house.—Mrs. and Miss Smith have returned to Meaford, after visiting friends here.—Miss Coral Bean, of Moscow, was the guest of Miss Gertrude Jackson, recently.—Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Clement, of Moscow North, visited Mr. and Mrs. Orland Clement, recently.—Miss Luella Garrison has returned, after spending a few days at Marlbank.

Mr. George Garrison gave a dinner at the hotel to his children and a few friends in honor of his wife's eighteth birthday, on the 27th inst. There were twelve seated at the table consisting of his son, C. S. Garrison, and wife, Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Warner, Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Wortman, Mr. and Mrs. James Young, of Napanee, Mr. and Mrs. R. Wilson, and the host and hostess After partaking of a sumptuous dinner, ably prepared by Mrs. Cessnon, the landlord, who is deserving of great praise, some of the guests proposed a few toasts in honor of the aged couple. F. S. Wortman in proposing a toast in honor of the hostess, made a short speech, describing the early settlement of the aged couple, when they were first married and commenced house keeping and the hardships and privations they had to undergo in those early days. They were blessed with good health, however, during all those long years and had very few misfortunes. In reply, the host, George Garrison, who is now over eighty-five years old, made a few appropriate remarks, after which the company dispersed, wishing the host and hostess continued health and many more pleasant birthdays.

Orland Clement, Shannonville, has moved to to Mrs. T. Townsend's home.—Mrs. Ira Salsbury, who has been very ill, is improving slowly.—Mrs. Campbell and little son Donald, of Harlington, have left for Ottawa, where they will reside.

NOTICE.
In the matter of the estate of Samuel Durland, late of the Township of Rawdon, Frederickburgh, in the County of Lennox and Addington, farmer, deceased.
Notice is hereby given, pursuant to R. S. O., 1897, Cap. 129, and amending Acts, that all persons having claims against the estate of the said Samuel Durland, who died on or about the 18th day of November, 1906, are required to send by post prepaid, or to deliver to Sophia Durland, whole post office address is Parma, Ont., (administratrix of the property of the said deceased), on or before the 8th day of December, 1907, their names, addresses and descriptions, and a full statement of particulars of their claims and the nature of the security (if any) held by them duly certified, and that after the said day the administratrix will proceed to distribute the assets of the deceased among the parties entitled thereto having regard only to the claims of which she shall then have notice. And take notice further that the said administratrix will not be liable for the proceeds of the estate so distributed to any person of whose claim she may not have notice at the time of the distribution thereof.
Dated at Picton on this 13th day of November, 1907.
M. R. ALLISON, Picton, Ont.,
Solicitor for the said Sophia Durland.
47p Administratrix of the said estate.

FEW WOMEN ESCAPE
Like the rest of mankind, they are constantly exposed to cuts, burns, bruises, etc., but the wiser ones, and many more would be wise if they knew, keep a box of Zam-Buk handy for use when accidents happen.
The value of Zam-Buk, as a remedy for all painful affections, and for wounds, sores, and ulcers of every description, cannot be overestimated. A test will be given every dreader of pain.
CHAPPED FROM FINGERS TO ELBOW
Henry Walker, of 14 Manufacturer Street, Montreal, works in a cold room, and his hands, from finger to elbow, are peeling from a severe case of the kind called salt rheum. He says: "I have used Zam-Buk for chapped hands and scalds, and found it very good. I have also used it for a bad cut on my leg, which it healed and left no scar. I tried several kinds of salve, but nothing relieved me until I got Zam-Buk. Then in a few days the burning and smarting almost ceased. The cracks began to heal and a few applications of Zam-Buk cured him. His hands and arms are now of the best."

ZAM-BUK CURES blood poison, eczema, ringworm, abscesses, piles, cold sores, chilblains, scalds, burns, cuts, bruises, and all skin injuries and diseases. Use it for all druggists and stores at 50c. box, or from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto. 3 boxes for $1.25.

We, your Committee, appointed to prepare a summary statement of expenditures on County Roads for the year 1907, beg leave to report as above.
(Signed), L. L. GALLAGHER.
CHAS. ANDERSON.
C. EDGAR.
Note.—In addition to above disbursements the County Road Superintendents were paid the sum of $887.34: Mr. A. McN. Dawney received $150.00; John Milling $375.00; T. W. Anderson $362.34; they were paid at the rate of $75.00 per month as per by-law. I want to say that the expenditure of Adolphustown and North and South Frederickburgh of 1906 re roads, was governed by Mr. Miller and Mr. Creighton, and that the money obtained by Mr. Anderson was for management of crusher, and that there was some of the money which appeared in South Frederickburgh should have been in Adolphustown, as the three townships were a district in 1906, which caused the error.
Yours respectfully,
L. L. GALLAGHER.

Paul's Story

The season has come for "Special Sales," "Cut Rates," "20 Per Cent. Off," reasons being given as "Commemoration," "Goods Stopped in Transit," the tight money market forcing manufacturers to sacrifice goods, which really retailers in town are able to take advantage of, and other equally plausible yarns.
Now, please listen to my story. My goods were bought in May last in anticipation of a bigger business than ever before. My store is packed full to overflowing with

Beautiful Xmas Goods
—COMPRISING—
China and Glassware, Purses, Combs and Brushes, Books, Toys, Dolls, Games, Sleighs, Bibles, Hymn Books, Prayer Books, Post Card Albums, Vases, Jardanieres, Bric-a-Brac of an endless variety, and numerous other Christmas novelties.

These Goods Must Be Sold

Not because of the close money market in Europe, New York or Timbucto, but because of the scarcity of money on the credit side of Paul's bank account.

LISTEN!

In Japanese Goods no reasonable offer will be refused. Cost will not be considered, as I propose GOING OUT OF THIS LINE ENTIRELY. As every article has been specially selected, you will get the finest quality goods.

Lamps at Cost

Hand Lamps, regular 40c for 25c; 50c for 35c, 75c for 50c, and other in proportion. With coal oil at 12c per gallon and lamps at above prices the person preferring darkness to light could have mean things truthfully said about him.
PICTURES—Beauties, too—at 50c. These are part of a bankrupt stock, and are worth at least $1.00. See them; it won't cost you anything.
PURSES are aplenty. I snap I can offer. I have about a bushel and will give you your choice for 15c.
CHRISTMAS PAPETERIES is where we shine. We make this assertion—we have the largest stock and the best assortment ever brought to Napanee. Our other lines are complete and will be sold at closest prices possible.
REMEMBER—In our lines we will not be undersold.

SOMETHING SHOULD BE DONE.

WHAT IS CAUSING THE INCREASE OF CATARRH IN NAPANEE?

In spite of the best efforts of medical men catarrhal troubles are increasing not only in Napanee, but all over the country.

Catarrh is a germ disease, and to cure it germ life in the breathing organs should be destroyed, and to do this no other treatment has such positive and beneficial action as Hyomei.

When the mucous membrane is irritated and raw and the system weakened, there is an ideal lodging place for catarrhal germs. Breathe Hyomei and see how quickly it soothes the membranes, vitalizes the tissues and destroys the life of these germs, rendering catarrh no longer possible.

There is no dangerous stomach drugging when Hyomei is used; no tablets or liquid mixtures destroying digestion.

Breathe through the neat pocket inhaler that comes with every Hyomei outfit, the healing balsams penetrate to the most remote air cells of the throat, nose and lungs, destroying the catarrhal germs so that quick recovery follows.

T. B. Wallace agrees to refund the money to any purchaser of Hyomei who does not find that it does all that is claimed for it. The complete outfit costs but $1.00.

ADOLPHUSTOWN.

This is the 2d day of December, and winter is here, and from all appearances, to stay for a while. The stock is now housed, and the most of them have been since the 25th November. The old horses are having a rest for the past two weeks, and a rifle is heard from all points of the compass quite frequently through the day; but one cannot say for certain which it was that fell, a "deck" or an "old horse" cast time he hears the report of the rifle, but takes it for granted that another "deck" has passed in his checks. Well, who knows but this state of affairs is from the hand of Providence, to remove these poor old animals from the further abuses of man, when they have already suffered more for years than they should have been. Cruel-man would continue to make him serve even if he had only three legs left, and would put a wooden leg in him could he make the old horse trot. So Providence must at times step in and deal with the unkindness of man, "inhuman man".

The "Picton Times" quotes good cows at Bloomfield Horse Bridge being sold at 15.00 per head. That is something terrible, after cattle selling at from $50.00 per head. In my opinion, the farmer wants a little more education, although the Government is doing well for them in the matter, but to protect themselves from financial disaster and school boys from their welfare, why should not the farmer be told repeatedly to provide against short years and drought seasons, by always carrying over half as much feed as be requires for the next winter? Then in a season like this one he would be able to get his stock through, and keep the surplus in slaughtering or shipping to a distance. Next year when spring begins all is under water, and I expect will be so this fall—the hay crop will be short next year even if the season is favorable. So that it will be some time in the future yet to give the farmer a chance to get a half winter's feed ahead, to meet my proposition.

Rumor says high social weddings ahead. So high that a common person, won't be able to touch the trail of the bride's gown with a forty-foot pole.

GROWING CHILDREN.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS OF NAPANEE.

Perhaps the most important principle involved in the care of a child is proper nourishment.

How many delicate children do we meet on our streets with colorless cheeks and thin little legs and arms. It is very plain to be seen that rachitic growth takes all their strength and their little bodies are not receiving sufficient nourishment to make them well, strong and robust.

We want to say to the parents of all such children in Napanee that our delicious cod liver and iron preparation, Vinol, will build up delicate children, fill out hollow cheeks and make them strong, robust and rosy. Vinol makes new vitality, sound flesh and muscle tissue and pure, rich red blood, and children love it. This is because Vinol is a delicious tasting cod liver preparation without oil, made by a new and effective, extractive and concentrating process from fresh cods' livers, thus combining the tonic action of iron all the medicinal, healing, body-building elements of cod liver oil, but no oil.

As a body builder and strength creator for old people, delicate children, weak, run-down persons, after sickness, and for chronic coughs, colds, bronchitis, and all throat and lung troubles, Vinol is unexcelled. Try Vinol on our offer to return money if it fails to give satisfaction. T. B. Wallace, Druggist, Napanee, Ont.

Dr. George Gordon, pastor of the Old South Church, Boston, tells how a witty Irishman stood before the gate at the other world, asking for admission. St. Peter refused him, however, telling him he was too great a sinner to enter there, and bade him go away. The man went a little distance from the gate and then crowed three times like a rooster. St. Peter at once threw open the gate and cried out, "Come in Pat! We'll let bygones be bygones!"

"The difference between a woman and a glass," said the funny fellow, "is that the glass reflects without speaking, while a woman speaks without reflecting."

"And the difference between you and a glass," said the sharp girl, "is that the glass is polished!"

SIMPLE HOME RECIPE.

Get from any prescription pharmacist the following:

Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces.

Shake well in a bottle and take a teaspoonful dose after each meal and at bedtime.

The above is considered by an eminent authority, who writes in a New York daily paper, as the finest prescription ever written to relieve Backache, Kidney Trouble, Weak Bladder and all forms of Urinary difficulties. This mixture acts promptly on the eliminative tissues of the Kidneys, enabling them to filter and strain the uric acid and other waste matter from the blood which causes Rheumatism.

Some persons who suffer with the above troubles may not feel inclined to place much confidence in this simple mixture, yet those who have tried it say the results are simply surprising, the relief being effected without the slightest injury to the stomach or other organs.

Mix some and give it a trial. It certainly comes highly recommended. It is the prescription of an eminent authority, whose scientific reputation, it is said, was established by it.

A druggist here at home when asked stated that he could either supply the ingredients or mix the prescription for our readers, recommends it as harmless, also

Much of the left-over food you now throw out can be turned into delicious dishes by the addition of a little Bovril.

It gives warmed-over meats the juiciness of the original cooking.

It gives body and strength to soups and gravies.

It gives a delicious, piquant flavor to cold meats and hashes.

Every day you will find Bovril a help and an economy in your kitchen.

Bovril contains the essence, flavor and nutrient substance of the very best beef. It gives strength and nourishment to the invalid, and helpfulness and economy to the cook.

AN EXCELLENT THING.

Habitual constipation and stomach troubles are each and all causes of our readers that anything which will give a degree of permanent relief will be greatly welcomed. The following simple and harmless ingredients, all of which are strictly of vegetable origin, have been found most efficient by eminent physicians : Compound Tincture of Rhubarb half an ounce, Fluid Extract of Mandrake two drams, Hepatrilla one ounce, not enough good Peppermint water to fill a 6 oz. bottle. Shake well and take a teaspoonful three times a day, before meals and at bed time, followed by a glass of water.

A SPLENDID CONCERT.

The Ladies' Musical Club gave a delightful concert in the town hall Tuesday night. The hall was well filled, and the audience showed by their hearty applause that they were delighted with the programme, which was rendered by Mrs. Hawley and Mrs. Lockridge, the latter acting as accompanist on her customary artistic manner. The numbers were all fine selections, and each was encored. Mr. Cameron and Miss Stock delighted all with their singing, and Miss Higgs, of Belleville, proved herself an exceptionally clever violinist. Mrs. Barrett's numbers were rendered with great taste, and her popularity with home audiences is as marked as ever.

DIED AT CALGARY.

Mr. Allen Oliver, Deseronto Road, received a despatch last Monday, at Dec., stating that his son, Morley Franklin, had died that day. Deceased was taken down with pneumonia about the 1st Nov., but his physician stated that he would pull through. A complication of heart failure set in, however, with the above sad result. Morley was Mr. Oliver's third son, was in his thirtieth year, and had been residing in Calgary for the past four years, where he conducted a drug store. He was married only Sept. last. The remains will arrive in Napanee on Sunday, and the funeral will take place from his father's home on Tuesday next, 10th Dec., at 2 o'clock, and thence to Deseronto cemetery. Friends will please accept this intimation instead of a more formal one. Mr. and Mrs. Oliver and family have the sincerest sympathy of the whole community.

NOTICE TO FRIENDS AND NEIGHBORS

At a meeting of the members of the Catholic congregation of Carrnesville, it was decided to ask the assistance of their Catholic and Protestant friends in the work of drawing the stone for their new church from the quarry in Centreville to the foundation in Carrnesville. Many friends of the congregation, both Protestant and Catholic, have signified to me during the summer months, their intention to assist in this work if they received due notice. From present indications we judge that we should have good sledding by the middle of next week, so we earnestly solicit your assistance at a "bee" on the 12th, 13th and 13th of the present month, weather and roads permitting. We desire to take advantage of the first good sleighing. The work is a large undertaking for a small congregation. We know we have the good wishes of the public generally, but actively work lends rewards, so your presence with your teams shall be sincerely appreciated by the committee.

OUTBREAK OF GLANDERS.

Dr. Ming, inspector of Veterinary health certificates, and Dr. Moore, Inspector of contagious diseases, were in this very busy last week investigating a report of an outbreak of glanders in the vicinity of Consecon. They found on the farm of Mr. Fred. Hawley six horses affected with glanders, and all had to be destroyed. There is great danger of the disease spreading as Mr. Hawley had a public watering trough where all the diseased horses were watered. The disease made its appearance about three months ago, and had been treated for distemper, and accordingly it was allowed to spread to a very alarming extent that Dr. Ming was called in and at once diagnosed the disease as glanders, and immediately reported it to the Dominion government. So prompt was the action of the above named inspectors that all the horses were destroyed in less than three days. The balance were quarantined for further testing. Dr. Minghad given that any suspicious cases be reported to him at once so that prompt action may be taken to prevent further spread of this most contagious and loathsome disease. The Government deserves most will pay Mr. Hawley two-thirds value of all the horses destroyed.

them coming I sat in a sad heap on the ground and buried my face in my hands. I could not look at her. Frits I felt her, laying his hand on my shoulder.

"Speak low, whatever you say," I heard Sapt whisper as they came up, "and the next thing I heard was a low cry—half of joy, half of fear—from the princess.

"It is he! Are you hurt?"

And she fell on the ground by me and gently pulled my hands away, but I kept my eyes to the ground.

"It is the King!" she said. "Pray, Colonel Sapt, tell me where lay the wit of the joke you played on me?"

We answered none of us. We three were silent before her. Regardless of them, she threw her arms round my neck and kissed me. Then Sapt spoke in a low, hoarse whisper:

"It is not the King. Don't kiss him. He's not the King."

She drew back for a moment; then, with an arm still round my neck, she asked in superb indignation:

"Do I not know my love? Rudolf, my love!"

"It is not the King," said old Sapt again, and a sudden sob broke from Rudolf heartfelt Fritz.

It was the sob that will not be comforted—the sob of

"He is the King!" she cried. "It is the King's face—the king's ring—my ring! It is my lover!"

"Your love, madame," said old Sapt, "is not the king. The king is there in Strelsau. This is Rudolf Rassendyl."

"Look at me, Rudolf, look at me!" she cried, taking my face between her hands. "Why do you let him torment me? Tell me what it means!"

Then I spoke, raging into her eyes.

"And I forgive you, madame," I said. "I am not the king!"

I felt her hands clutch my cheeks. She gazed at me as a man's face was scanned yet. And I, silent again, was wonder born, and doubt grew, and fierce spring to life as she looked. And very gradually the grasp of her hands slackened; she turned to Sapt, to Fritz and back to me, then suddenly she reeled forward and fell in my arms, and with a great cry of pain I gathered her to me and kissed her lips. Sapt laid his hand on my arm. I looked up in his face. And I laid her softly on the ground and stood up, looking down, surprising heard that young lieutenant's sword had spared me for this deeper pang.

CHAPTER XXI.

IT was night, and I was in the cell wherein the king had lain in the castle of Zenda. The great pipe that Rupert of Hentzau had nicknamed "Jacob's ladder" was gone, and the lights in the room across the moat twinkled in the darkness. It was still; the din and clash of strife were all hushed and gone. I had spent the day hidden in the forest from the men which Fritz had led me off, leaving Sapt to counterfeit the love as I had acted the king and taken her kisses with a smothered smile.

Now the men all my life and heart," said I as she clung to me. "Always, from the first moment I saw you in the cathedral. Trouble had I but one woman in the world to me, and there will be no other. But God forgive me the wrong I've done you!"

"They made you do it!" she said quickly, and she added, raising her head and her princess's air once: "I shall have made no difference if I'd known it. It was always you, never the king."

And she rained heavy kisses on me.

"I meant to tell you," said I. "I was going to on the night of the ball—to tell you before—before—I must! My love, for—you I nearly left the king to die."

"I know, I know! What are we to do now, Rudolf?"

I put my arms round her and held her up while I said:

"I am going away tonight."

"No, no, no!" she cried. "Not tonight!"

"I must go tonight before more people have seen me. And how would you have me stay, sweetheart, except—

"If I could come with you," she whispered very low.

"My God," said I roughly, "don't talk about that!" And I thrust her a little back from me.

"Why not? I love you. You are as good a gentleman as the king."

Then I was false to all that I should have held by, for I caught her in my arms and prayed her in words that I dare not write to come with me, during all Ruritania to take her from me. And for awhile she listened, with wondering, dazzled eyes, but as her eyes looked on me I grew ashamed and my voice died away in broken murmurs and stammerings, and at last I was silent.

She drew herself away from me and leaned against the wall, while I sat on the edge of the sofa, trembling in every limb, knowing what I had done, loathing it, desiring not to undo it. So we rested a long time.

"I am mad!" I said sullenly.

"I love your madness, dear," she answered.

Her face was away from me, but I caught the sparkle, of a tear on her cheek. I clutched the sofa with my hand and held myself there.

"Is love the only thing?" she asked in low, sweet tones that seemed to bring a calm even to my wrung heart.

"If love were the only thing, I could follow you—in rags, if need be—to the world's end, for you hold me fast in the hollow of your hand. But is love the only thing?"

I made her no answer. It grew me know, now it's think that I would not help her.

She came near me and laid her hand on my shoulder. I put my hand up and held here.

"I hope people write and talk as if it were. Perhaps for some fate lets it be. Ah, if I were one of them! But if love had been the only thing you would have let the King die and—

I kissed her hand.

"Rose, such a woman, too, Rudolf. My lover, I am being true to my country—to my honor! Don't I, my love? Why God has let me love you, but I know that I must stay."

Again I paused and she, pressing awhile, then went on:

"Your ring will always be on my finger, your heart in my heart, the touch of your lips on mine, but you must go, and I must stay. Perhaps I must do what it kills me to think of doing."

I knew what she meant, and a shiver ran through me, but I could not utterly fail beside her. I rose and took her hand.

"Do what you will or what you must," I said. "I will go, my dear, and my purposes to such as you. My part is lighter, for your ring shall be on my finger and your heart in mine, and no touch save of your lips will ever be on mine. So may God comfort you, my darling!"

There struck on our ears the sound of singing. The priests in the chapel were singing masses for the souls of those who lay dead. They seemed to chant a requiem over our joyful hopes. To pray forgiveness for our love that would not die. The soft, sweet, pitiful music rose and fell as we stood opposite one another, her hands in mine.

"My queen and my beauty?" said I.

"My lover and true knight!" she said.

"Perhaps we shall never see one another again. Kiss me, and let me go."

I kissed her as she bade me, but at the last she clung to me, whispering nothing but my name and that over and over again—and again—and again—and then I left her.

Rapidly I walked down to the bridge. Sapt and Fritz were waiting for me. Under their directions I changed my dress, and, muffling my face, as I had done more than once before, I mounted with them at the door of the castle and we three rode through the night and on to the breaking of day and found ourselves at a little roadside station just over the border of Ruritania. The train was not quite due, and I walked with them in a meadow by a little brook while we waited for it. They promised me all the rest of the night and on the morrow, a mile or more away, the blue smoke of the train. Then I held out a hand to each of them.

"It was always you, never the king."

"We are all but half men this morning," said I, smiling. "But we have been men, eh, Sapt and Fritz, old friends? We have run a good course together, sir."

"We have defeated traitors and set the king firm on his throne," said Sapt.

Then Fritz von Tarlenheim suddenly, before I could discern his purpose or stay him, uncovered his head and bent to me and to my sister-in-law, and again I snatched at my hand, and he would not go with him."

"Where's he going to?"

"He's going to succeed Lord Topham at Strelsau," said she. "You couldn't have a nicer place, short of Paris."

"Strelsau! It's" said I, clutching at my brother.

"Oh, that doesn't matter!" exclaimed Rose impatiently. "Now, you will go, won't you?"

"I don't know that I care about it."

"Oh, you're too disappointing!"

"And I don't think I can go to Strelsau. My dear Rose, would it be—suitable?"

"Oh, nobody remembers that horrid old story now."

Upon this I took out of my pocket a portrait of the king of Ruritania. It had been taken a month or two before he ascended the throne, and he wore a beard. Moreover, the photograph did not make my point when I said, pointing it to Strelsau:

I let my handkerchief and tinguish grow again, and, as hair comes quickly on my face, they were special things. I got not inconvenience to them that I found myself in Paris and called on my friend George Feversham. My appearance with his face chiefly astonished for the number of unwilling but necessary disguises I had worn, and I recalled him unconvincingly to a lie told me that he had made up his mind that I had gone to the south of France or Mauban to Strelsau. The lady, it appeared, was back in Paris, but was living in great seclusion, and my friend, guessing found no difficulty in discounting. Did not all the world know of the treachery and death of Duke Michael? Nevertheless George took Bertram Bertrand be of good cheer, "for," said he flippantly, "a live ass is better than a dead duke." Then he turned on me and asked:

"What have you been doing to your mustache?"

"To tell the truth," I answered, assuming a sly air, "a man now and then has reasons for wishing to alter his appearance. But it's coming on very well again."

"What? Then I wasn't so far out? If not the fair Antoinette, there was a charmer."

"There is always a charmer," said I sententiously.

But George would not be satisfied till he had wormed out of me (he took much pride in his ingenuity) an absolutely imaginary love affair, attended with the proper sequence of accidents, which had kept me all this time in the peaceful regions of the Tyrol. In return for this narrative George regaled me with a great deal of what he called "inside information" (known only to diplomatists) as to the true course of events in Ruritania, the plots and counterplots. In his opinion, he told me, with a significant nod, there was more to be said for Black Michael than the public supposed, and he hinted at a well founded suspicion that the mysterious prisoner of Zenda, concerning whom a good many paragraphs had appeared, was not a man at all, but (here I had some ado not to smile) a woman disguised as a man, and that strife between the king and his brother for this imaginary lady's favor was at the bottom of their quarrel.

"Perhaps it was Mme. de Mauban herself," I suggested.

"No!" said George decisively. "Antoinette de Mauban was Jealous of her and betrayed the duke to the king for that reason. And, to confirm what I say, it's well known that the Princess Flavia is now extremely cold to the king after having been most affectionate."

At this point I changed the subject and escaped from George's "inspired" delusions. But if diplomatists never know anything more than they had succeeded in finding out in this instance they appear to me to be some what expensive luxuries.

While in Paris I wrote to Antoinette, though I did not venture to call upon her. I received in return a very affecting letter, in which she assured me that the king's generosity and kindness, no less than her regard for him, bound her conscience to absolute secrecy. She expressed the intention of settling in the country and withdrawing herself entirely from society. Whether she carried out her designs I have never heard, but as I have not met her or heard news of her for the this time it is probable that she did. There is no doubt that she was deeply attached to the Duke of Strelsau, and her conduct at the time of his death proved that no knowledge of the man's real character was enough to oust her regard for him out of her heart.

I had one more battle left to fight—a battle that would, I knew, be severe and was bound to end in my complete defeat. Was I not back from the Tyrol without having made any study of its inhabitants, institutions, scenery, fauna, flora or other features? Had I not wasted my time in my usual frivolous, good for nothing way? That was the aspect of the matter which, I was obliged to admit, would present itself to my sister-in-law, and against a verdict based on such evidence I had really no defense to offer... It may be supposed, then, that I presented myself in Park lane in a shamefaced, abecpish fashion. On the whole, my reception was not so alarming as I had feared. It turned out that I had done not what Rose wished, but—the next best thing—what she had prophesied. She had declared that I should make no notice, record no observations, gather no materials. My brother, on the other hand, had been weak enough to maintain that a really serious resolve had at length animated me.

When I returned empty handed, Rose was so occupied in trumpling over Burlesdon that she let me down quite easily, devoting the greater part of her reproaches to my failure to advise my friends of my whereabouts.

"We've wasted a lot of time trying to find you," she said.

"I know you have," said I. "Half our ambassadors have led weary lives on my account. George Feversham told me so. But why should you have been anxious? I can take care of myself."

"Oh, I don't know," she cried carelessly, "but I wanted to tell you about Sir Jacob Borrodaile. You know he's an ambassador—at least he will have in a month—and he wrote to say he hoped you would go with him."

"Sir Jacob Borrodaile!"

"He's going to succeed Lord Topham at Strelsau," said she. "You couldn't have a nicer place, short of Paris."

"Strelsau! It's" said I, clutching at my brother.

"Oh, that doesn't matter!" exclaimed Rose impatiently. "Now, you will go, won't you?"

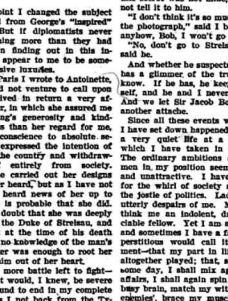
"I don't know that I care about it."

"Oh, you're too disappointing!"

"And I don't think I can go to Strelsau. My dear Rose, would it be—suitable?"

"Oh, nobody remembers that horrid old story now."

Upon this I took out of my pocket a portrait of the king of Ruritania. It had been taken a month or two before he ascended the throne, and he wore a beard. Moreover, the photograph did not make my point when I said, pointing it to Rose:



"Don't you think that's a very good likeness of Rudolf V., then?"

"Don't you think that's a very good likeness of Rudolf V., then?"

My sister-in-law looked at the portrait and then at me.

"Good gracious!" she said and flung the photograph down on the table. "Why, it's you, Bob!" she cried.

Burlesdon got up, went to a corner of the room and presently in a heap of newspapers found a copy of the Sketch with a copy of the Illustrated London News. Opening the paper, he displayed a double page engraving of the coronation of Rudolf V. at Strelsau. The photograph and the picture he held side by side. I sat at the table fronting them, and as I looked I grew absorbed. My eye traveled from my own portrait to Sapt, to Strakenzes, to the rich robes of the cardinal, to Black Michael's face, to the stately figure of the princess by his side. Long I looked and eagerly. I was roused by my brother's hand on my shoulder. He was gazing down at me like a fond father.

"That's a remarkable likeness, you see," said I. "I really think I had better not go to Ruritania."

Rose, though half convinced, would not abandon her position.

"It's just as you please," she said petulantly. "You don't want to do anything. Why, you might become an ambassador."

"I don't think I want to be an ambassador," said I.

"I suppose not," he said. "But I should know you from the man in the photograph."

"And not from the picture in the paper?"

"I should know the photograph from the picture; the picture's very like the photograph, but"—

"Well?"

"It's more like you," said my brother.

My brother is a good man and true, but, for all that he is a matter-of-fact man and mighty fond of his wife, he should know any secret of mine. But this secret was not mine, and I could not tell it to him.

"I don't think it's so much like me as you suppose," said I, coldly. "But, anyhow, Bob, I won't go to Strelsau."

"No, don't go to Strelsau, Rudolf," said he.

And whether he suspects anything or has a glimmer of the truth I do not know. If he has, he keeps it to himself, and he and I never refer to it. And we let Sir Jacob Borrodaile find another secretary.

Since all these events whose history I have set down happened I have lived a very regular life as a country gentleman by long black lashes, languorous and enticing. For one moment it passed as if under a spell. Later the girl dropped her fan, and he stooped to pick it up for her. As he handed it back the fingers touched her, and the contact thrilled him strangely.

As Yvonne's manner grew more and more mocking, Cynthia's grew more and more tender until Gates found himself pleading to her for consent after every rebuff from his promised bride.

"Of course I know she doesn't love me," Gates explained to Cynthia one day. "How could she? I am growing old. I am homely. But I am rich, and I want the best for my money, and so I want her—and I'm going to have her."

Cynthia's little hand on his arm quieted him.

"And is beauty the best?" she questioned softly.

He looked at the delicate face, alight with childish eagerness. The mutinous red mouth was quivering, the mysterious eyes were ablaze.

"Cynthia, not you!" he cried, his heart leaping. Then he opened his arms to her. "Sweetheart, you little witch, I don't know how it has come about, but it is you who're filling my days and nights—not Frances. Come."

"Oh, no," she warned, gliding away from him, "not until Frances has written giving you your freedom. But I'll tell her tonight, and then you can come openly to father and claim my hand."

* * * * * * *

On the day of Cynthia's wedding the guests, seeing the adoration in the eyes of Mr. Birney Gates, could not doubt the verity of her conquest, and she beamed with a pretty happiness. Frances, robed in soft, shimmering white, was radiant. Her dark eyes were suffused with a mysterious softness, as of a joy new heralded.

Our Debt to Ancient Greece.

Greece and Rome were at the opposite poles of the human world, and equally opposite are their influences upon modern times. Rome was practical, literal, legislative, Athenian Greece was intellectual, emotional, artistic, abounding in what may be called the forebrain versus the brain behind the ears. Rome's empire was lengthy, material, matter of fact, while Greece banked on the intellectual and spiritual, finding her greatest conquests in the realm of mind rather than in that of matter. Rome produced no great original things; her greatest men shine, like the moon, by borrowed light—light reflected from the sages of Athens. Rome taught men law, order, obedience, but the mother of ideas and sentiments was Greece. From the Eternal City we have inherited our jurisprudence, but it is from the City of the Violet Crown that we have derived our art, science and philosophy. In a word, to quote the substance of Dr. Johnson's saying, eliminate from our modern civilization all that we owe to Greece and the residue would be barbarism.

Poetry With a Sting in It.

On one occasion when William Hamilton Hayne was visiting Sumner Minturn Peck at the latter's place in Alabama the two poets strolled into the woods and paused to rest beneath the shadow of the pines.

"There are your favorite pines, Hayne," said Peck. "Let's dream a few poetic breaths in their shade."

The languid summer day had its effect on them, and they were soon snoring and dreaming away.

But suddenly both awoke and both started down the home road at top speed, shouting as they ran.

An army of yellow jackets had discovered them, and, not being partial to poetry, had forcibly and feelingly resented its intrusion on their domain.

Later, at supper, Peck asked:

"Did you make a poem, Hayne?"

"No," was the meek reply. "I made a pentlice."

"So did I," said Peck.

Not a Slip of the Tongue.

It is dangerous to pretend to knowledge one does not possess. A man of little education was once a guest at a dinner, during which a servant stumbled so that a roast tongue fell from the platter he was carrying. It was an embarrassing moment, but the quick witted host saved the day by remarking, "Never mind, gentlemen, it's only a 'lapsus lingua.'" This caused much laughter and applause, and instead of being spoiled the dinner was a great success. The boor, wishing to shine as a wit himself, shortly afterward gave a dinner, to which none of those present at the first dinner were invited. When the guests had been seated a servant entered bearing a beef roast. Just before reaching the table he stumbled and fell. The host, leaping to his feet, astonished the guests by exclaiming, "Never mind, gentlemen, it's only a 'lapsus lingua.'"

Got the Autograph.

At Carlsbad on one occasion Brahms' physician, Dr. Grunberger, asked the composer for his autograph for a young lady admirer, but Brahms scowled him for making a nuisance of himself and refused to give it. Some weeks later, at his departure from Carlsbad, Brahms handed to the doctor an envelope inscribed, "With the cordial thanks of Johannes Brahms." Noticing a broad grin on the doctor's face, he asked: "What makes you look so cheerful? You don't know yet what the envelope contains." "Nor do I care," retorted the doctor. "The envelope is the main thing. Much obliged for the autograph!"

The Phantom Fire Ship.

The traditional "fire ship" of the Chaleur bay, New Brunswick, appearing usually before a storm, has a basis of fact, according to a scientist. It is a hemispherical light, with the flat side toward the water, glowing sometimes without much change of form, but at other times rising into slender, moving columns, in which an excited imagination might recognize the flaming rigging of a ship. The general explanation offered is that this object is a manifestation of St. Elmo's fire, an electrical phenomenon, but the reason for its appearing only on or near the Chaleur bay is not known.

Children in Pliny's Day.

It was not a modern American writer who, discussing the children, wrote of them thus: "How many are there who will give place to a pen out of respect to his age and dignity? They are shrewd men already and know everything, so that in the acts of nobody, but take themselves for their own example." These were the words of Pliny the younger and in one of his famous letters during the first Christian century, but they will strongly apply to much of the young America of today.

How a Stone Varies.

A stone is usually considered to be fourteen pounds, but a butcher's stone of dead meat is only eight pounds, a stone of cheese is sixteen pounds, a stone of glass five pounds, while a stone of hemp runs to thirty-two pounds.—London Standard.

Perseverance.

Perseverance is more prevailing than violence, and many things which cannot be overcome when they are together yield themselves up when taken little by little.

Yes, Indeed.

"A woman makes a great change in a man's life."

"Yes, and she takes a great deal of change out of it too."

Was Also Ivory Experts.

The ivory dealer pointed to a half dozen rats gnawing among the yellow tusks and ivory fragments in the garret.

"They are quite tame, you see," he said. "Why shouldn't they be so? The fact is, they are on my payroll. They work for me. Their wages are a pound of cheese and a loaf of bread a week.

"Ivory dealers like rats, for rats are ivory's best judges, and without their help we should often want a higher price for a bad tusk than for a fine one."

He took a fragment of ivory from the floor and pointed to certain small furrows in its surface.

"The rats did that," he said. "Those furrows are a proof of the ivory's excellence. Rats gnaw the ivory that contains animal glue, or gelatin, a substance of which they are fond. And this substance it is that makes ivory excellent, yet a mere rat can't tell whether a tusk contains it or not. The rats can tell. They are ivory experts."

There Would Be a Vacancy.

"Genius is never appreciated in the lifetime of the man who possesses it," said the poet disconsolately. "Milton, Shakespeare and all the other men who have made our literature what it is—how much were they esteemed when alive?"

"Cheer up, my boy!" said his easy going friend, who had no soul for sentiment. "You'll be appreciated some day."

"Tablets have been put on the houses where they spent most of their lives, but that is of no moment to them. I wonder whether even that will be done for me? I suppose not. I shall leave no vacant place."

"Yes, you will. I can see the inscription in my mind's eye now."

"And what do you think will be inscribed upon it?" asked the poet, brightening up a little.

"'Rooms to Let,'" replied his friend. And the poet pined away.

The Worst of Education.

When the new and the old school meet, there is likely to be a clash of opinions, and so the miller, Brown, found the other day when Farmer Jackson sent his young son across to the mill with a sack of corn which he wished ground into meal. Like the miller, the mill was of the old, leisurely school, and only a tiny stream of meal trickled out. The young man waxed impatient.

"What a mill!" he said, with scorn. "Why, I could eat the meal quicker than this ramshackle old concern of yours can grind it!"

"Aye," said Miller Brown, "but how long couldst keep it up, lad?"

"Till I starved!" was the trenchant answer.

And when Miller Brown had puzzled out the sharp retort, he remark he concluded that lads nowadays were "gettin' a power too sharp wi' their tongues."—London Express.

The Scotch Sabbath.

An English artist, traveling professionally through Scotland, decided on Sunday to remain over Sunday in a small town in the north. To while away the time he walked out a short way in the environs, where the picturesque ruin of a castle met his eye. He asked a countryman who was passing to be so good as to tell him the name of the castle. The reply was somewhat startling. "It's no' the day to be asking sic things!"

Another good story of Scottish observance of the Sabbath is told by a clergyman. "A minister of the kirk declared in public that at a country hotel he wished the window to be so that he might get some fresh air, but the landlady would not allow it, saying, 'Ye can hae no fresh air here on the Sawbeth.'"

In the Days of the "Terror."

Some old French memoirs throw an interesting light on the manner in which the French republic came to bear the nickname "guillotine." During the days of the "white terror" there was an old woman called La Mère Marianne, whose office it was to mop up the pavement after an execution. In this capacity she attended the decapitation of the fair Mme. Marie Antoinette, as well as other distinguished victims. The gay beautiful royalists jeered at her under her familiar name, which came to be applied to the revolutionary party. Later the secret societies adopted it as a watchword, and "Marianne" came to be used as a revolutionary symbol even by the Italian carbonari.

Pressed Out.

Of all the extravagances caused by the assassination fever which many years ago was at its height, perhaps none so that of a Frenchman named Andre Pajon, who, dissatisfied with his name (he lived at Pajon a Rion (the seat of criminal justice in the province of Auvergne), felt bound by faithful destiny, assassinated a man in Auvergne and was actually hanged in the place to which the omen pointed.

Trapping an Elephant.

"Elephants are easily trapped," said a zoo keeper, "very easily trapped and very easily tamed. The trapper chooses a spot populous with elephants and digs a hole five feet deep and twenty feet square. He surrounds this hole with a high board fence erected in the place where he hangs a swing gate. Next he finds a herd of elephants, chooses the animal he wants, saddles it and makes it chase him. The man tears along on his nag, the elephant thunders close behind, and just at the gateway the man swerves to the right, but the elephant, too heavy to swerve, plunges ahead through the gate. He's mad at first, terribly mad. But they give him no food or drink, they build around the pit fires of damp wood that almost suffocate him with smoke, and they dase and stupefy him with shouts and banging of brass pans. The elephant is completely broken and subdued in three or four days. He comes forth and follows the trapper humbly and timidly, with tears in his eyes."

A Boy and a Thousand Dollars.

A New York judge gave his son $1,000, telling him to go to college and graduate. The son returned at the end of freshman year without a dollar and with several ugly habits. At the close of the vacation the judge told his son that he had done all he could for him. If he had wasted the money that was to have taken him through college, he might as well leave home and make his own way in the world. It was a rude awakening for the young man, but he knew that his father was right. And so strong was the good influence of his upright father that he did leave home to go to work in downright earnest. He went back to college, made his way through, graduated at the head of his class, studied law, became governor of the state of New York, entered the cabinet of the president of the United States and made a record for himself that the country will not willingly let die. It was William H. Seward.

A Fish Story.

"Trout protection! Nonsense!" said a gunner of local notoriety. "Trout are simply able to protect themselves. Look at their depredations among ducks, for example, and you will agree with me that it's the birds that need protection. It's a common thing for a trout to jump from the water, seize a duck by the neck, drag the unfortunate fowl into the depths sufficiently to leave its feet sticking in the water, where it can get no purchase upon the universe, and thus drown it. Then the trout picks the feathers from the bird, eats it at its leisure and swims away out of the jurisdiction of the courts. Are there any fishermen? None? Too bad. This would be a match for one of their fish stories."

English Plum Pudding.

For English plum pudding clean, wash and dry a pound of currants; stone a pound of raisins. Mix the currants, raisins, a pound of suet, chopped fine, three-quarters of a pound of stale breadcrumbs, a quarter of a pound of brown sugar, the grated rind of a lemon, half a pound of mixed candied orange peel, a quarter of a pound of flour, half of a grated nutmeg. Beat five eggs, add to them half a pint of orange juice, then pour over the dry ingredients and mix thoroughly. Pack into greased small kettles or molds. This will make about six pounds. Boil ten hours. Serve with hard sauce.

A Carlyle Comment.

A gentleman once happened to visit Carlyle just after a brilliant man of genius had left him. As they met at the door the man of genius said: "I have just been visiting poor Carlyle. He is a miserable wreck, I am sorry." As the second visitor greeted Carlyle he remarked, "So you've just had Mr. —— with you?" "Aye," was the answer of the "mere wreck," "and he thinks God Almighty never made such another!"

A Penny Saved.

When Benjamin Franklin wrote "A penny saved is a penny earned" he did not mean that a penny could be saved from our daily living or from our income. That is not "a penny saved." In the book "Les Miserables" Victor Hugo tells of criminal justice in the province of Auvergne, tell bound by faithful destiny, assassinated a man in Auvergne and was actually hanged in the place to which the omen pointed.

The Highest Skyscraper.

The tower to be built by the Metropolitan Life on the northwest corner of the block between Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth streets and Fourth and Madison avenues in New York city will be 658 feet above the sidewalk and 690½ feet above its foundation. The clock to be placed between the twenty-first and twenty-third stories will have hands twelve feet long. Offices on the forty-first floor will be in the same height as the lookout windows in the top of the Washington monument. An interesting point is cited by a writer in the Scientific American. The tower, being thirty feet higher than the Washington hills, will catch the rays of the sun after it has set behind the Orange mountains.

RAINS INEFFECTIVE.

Wonders That Moon Thous Do Not Dare to Use Them.

It is proposed to control the rain from the cockpits of the Lord Nelson type and the cruisers of the Minotaur class, says a London dispatch to the Philadelphia Ledger. The idea is a striking one and has played a prominent part in naval warfare and appeals to the popular imagination, but it is regarded as effective no longer. It came into use at sea with the Hotspur class. Those were battleships of 4,000 tons, with a speed of eight knots. A vessel of this displacement and speed might have many opportunities of ramming an adversary, but the service men of today regard the weapon as a troublesome incumbrance.

"Take a ship like this," said the captain of one of the cruisers this week. "Here is a hull with a dead weight of 14,000 tons and 6 masterworks speed of eighteen knots. Work out the momentum of such a blow as we could give, and the figures will make your brain reel. Before you can ram your ship you must catch her. With the high speed tactics of the present day this is practically an impossibility. You could only catch her if she were disabled, and no man would ram a disabled foe.

"Suppose, however, for the sake of argument, that you got home a square eighteen knot broadside blow. You would cut clean through your opponent. Nobody doubts that for a minute. But what else would there be in afterward? Your hull might sustain the impact, though I should predict a material bending out of your bow plates.

"Half the boilers, whether they were bow ended or water tubes, would blow up with the shock. Every steam pipe would give out. The bedding bolts of the main engines would be wrenched free, and the whole mass of machinery would be slung into the fore stokehold. Your heavy guns would jump clean out of their cradles. In fact, I would just as soon set light to the magazine room as use the ram in this ship, for similar result would be accomplished rather more quickly."

Sahara Growing Drier.

C. F. Gautier, a French explorer, is authority for the statement that the Sahara is continuously becoming drier to such an extent that the oases are perceptibly shrinking and the underpinning of dwellings in a relatively short time. He quotes historical records and physical signs to show that springs were at one time much more plentiful than now and that the extent of the patches where vegetation flourishes were much greater even fifty to a hundred years ago. As the climate of the region has undergone no change in perhaps thousands of years, he believes that the disappearance of the water must be due to purely mechanical causes. He considers that it is due to the continual advance of the great sand masses to the north, thus forming an impermeable barrier against the watershed of the Atlas mountains.

The First Oil Well.

With the death of James P. Smith of Titusville recently there passed the last of the group of men who appear in the famous Drake well picture, taken in the autumn of 1861 by John A. Mosher, the pioneer oil regular photographer. The group in the picture included Colonel Edwin L. Drake, the tie sixteenth century, by Lorenzo Ghiberti, set of a block of steel, presenting two grotesque female figures and ornamented with various masks and scrolls. Another costly key, which formerly belonged to the Medici family, is in the South Kensington museum, London. The upper part of the bow is made upon a square temple, inclosing a standing figure, exquisitely chiseled, holding a shield. The pipe consists of a column with a Corinthian capitol.

The Sphinx.

The word sphinx is from the Greek and means the strangler and was applied to a fabled creature of the Egyptians which had the body of a lion, the head of a man or an animal and two wings attached to it. Besides, in the Egyptian hieroglyphs the sphinx symbolized wisdom and power united. It has been supposed that the fact that orrange juice, then pour over the dry ingredients and mix thoroughly. COLLIER BROS.

What He Lost.

A traveling man was leaning against the counter in the hotel gazing disconsolately at the floor.

"Lose something?" queried the hotel clerk.

A nod of the head answered.

"Was it very valuable?"

Twice with the nod.

"Sure you had it when you came in here?"

A third nod. His face was growing wistful.

"You should have put it in the safe."

"Could not have done that very well."

His voice quivered.

The clerk stretched his neck and grated, "Why, what was it?"

"It was," the traveling man began, but he choked—"it was—my job."

"Oh, pardon me a minute, the phone is ringing." And the clerk tiptoed softly away. A dismal stillness reigned.

Onion as a Disinfectant.

There is now written a London correspondent, a stratum of common sense in the advice given by a north country teacher to her scholars "If you have cholera or scarlet fever in the house, put some onions under the bed and they will sweep away all disease," for the onion powred its virtue in a remarkable way years ago, when cholera raged throughout London. It was noticed with surprise that one of the most unsanitary districts—Saffron Hill and its neighborhood—was almost exempt from the visitation. The majority of the inhabitants being Italians were great onion eaters, and strings of this vegetable hung in unusual profusion on the ceilings in nearly every room. The medical officer of health could not find the cause, assuming as many victims, contagion a powerful antidote against cholera morbus and possibly other diseases.

PINE STOCK.

Jacob Parks and J. M. Joyce, of North Fredericksburgh, are in the city of Toronto this week in search of a ball to lead the Yarker team in search of a championship. Word of Mr. Parks' arrival in the city from the north reached a reporter on the Star, and The reporter, not to be left behind, sought out Mr. Joyce and learned that the two Fredericksburgh lads had arrived in the city on the previous day, and had already secured the services of a first baseman, a pitcher and a catcher. The first baseman is a man of 6 feet 2 inches in height, and is said to be a wonder at the initial sack. The pitcher is a man who has been in the league for years, and is said to be a star. The catcher is a man who has been in the league for years, and is said to be a star. The first baseman is a man of 6 feet 2 inches in height, and is said to be a wonder at the initial sack. You have Not One Reason for Not Using Zutoo

Some people think that all headache cures are alike—that they all undermine the health, even if not perceived at the time of taking them.

Well, we'll admit that some cures do this, those, for example, which contain opium, morphine, antipyrene or chloral.

But this is no reason why you should not use Zutoo.

Zutoo Tablets do not contain one iota of any of the drugs above mentioned. They do not contain a single ingredient that does not come from Old Mother Earth herself.

One ingredient is soda—just old-fashioned soda that our grandmothers used to take to settle the stomach when they had sick headache.

There is not one ingredient in Zutoo tablets that is not approved by both the British and American Pharmacopoeias. And the world has no higher authority in medicine than these.

Your family physician, even if a personal friend, would approve of and prescribe every ingredient.

There is absolutely no reason why you should not use Zutoo.

If you suffer from headache there is every reason why you should.

Taken in time, two tablets will ward off a headache. Taken later, they will stop it in twenty minutes, and leave you feeling bright and well in both mind and body.

It is Harmless as Soda

Personals

It is the desire of the publisher that all should take an interest in this column of The Beaver. If you have friends visiting you, or are going away for a trip, leave word or send it on a post card.

(Additional personals page 4.)

Mr. Orval S. Smith, Toronto, was in town on Monday, on his way to Parma, to spend the holidays with Mr. Albert Williamson.

Monday callers—Messrs. Alex. Denison, Selby; W. W. Adams, Newburgh; Mrs. Wm. Cooper, Newburgh Road; W. H. Scott, Kingston.

Dr. Forster, late of Rockwood Asylum, has been appointed assistant medical superintendent at London Asylum, in succession to Dr. Buchan.

Tuesday callers—Messrs. J. S. Lochhead, Centreville; C. P. Allen, Adolphustown; Edward McGuire, Erinsville.

Mr. H. J. Clarke is the new school inspector for South Hastings, Mr. W. McIntosh having resigned. He is a Belleville boy, a teacher in the Belleville high school.

Dr. Fred. Girvin, Stella, left last week for Halifax, sailing from there on the steamer Victoria for England, where he intends walking the hospitals.

Mr. Fred. Henry, sailing on the upper lakes during the past season, returned home last week.

Mr. W. D. Marr, Winnipeg, will spend Xmas at his old home in Tamworth. He is at present in Montreal, visiting his daughter, Mrs. John Marr.

Mrs. Wm. Kelly and sister, Miss Annie McGoun, visiting Mrs. W. A. Baker, for the past month, left on Tuesday for Chicago, where they will remain for a few weeks before leaving for The Bermudas, where they will spend the winter.

Mr. W. C. Jenkins returned from Odessa last week, having spent the past five weeks with Mrs. Jenkins at her father's, Mr. John Watts. We are pleased to state Mrs. Jenkins is recovering, and will likely be able to return to Napanee in a couple of weeks.

Miss Olive Robinson, South Napanee, has been engaged as teacher in Fairview school for the year 1908.

Rev. J. R. Conn, M.A., was in Kingston on Tuesday, attending a meeting of Presbytery.

Miss Blanche Calder was the guest of Mrs. Thos. Naylor, Desoronto, last week.

Mrs. M. O. Fraser and three children, Gladys, Mildred and Elizabeth, arrived in town last week from Wawanesa, Man., to spend the Christmas time with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Graham.

Mr. George Anson Aylesworth, Reeve of Newburgh, will sail to-day from St. John, N.B., per steamship Empress of Britain for London. During the next few months he will engage in emigration work for the Dominion Government.

Mr. Hutchins, Yarker, spent a few days last week at Portland, the guest of his aunt, Miss Maude Brooks.

Messrs. Wm. Fairbairn and Wm. Vine, of Winnipeg, returned to town last Friday, the former to spend the winter. Mr. Vine will return after the holidays.

Mr. David Edgar, Portland, Ore., is spending a few weeks in Lennox and Addington, visiting his mother and sisters, and renewing old acquaintances. It is eleven years since Mr. Edgar left Ontario, and since then he has traversed the northern regions of our Dominion and Yukon, going away beyond the Arctic circle. He gives much interesting information regarding his travels in the Polar regions.

Saturday callers—Messrs. T. W. Dunwoody, Albert; G. T. Sexsmith, Selby; C. W. McConnell, Robin; John Lockridge, Hinch; John B. Aylesworth, Newburgh; H. A. Cambridge, Odessa; Miss M. J. Mr. J. D. Andrew, New York, is the guest of Dr. and Mrs. Ward.

Mr. A. R. Wagar returned from Colorado Springs, Col., last week, after an absence of two years. He states that Mr. Asbury Gilmore, who is residing there, is quite restored to health. Mr. Wagar will remain until the 1st of June, with his parents in Enterprise.

Mr. David Edgar, of Portland, Oregon, is spending the holidays with friends in Camden and Belleville.

Miss Lena Hannah, Desmond, is spending a few weeks the guest of her sister, Mrs. Rufus Lewis, Hinch.

Friday callers—Messrs. A. D. Perry, North Fredericksburgh; J. E. Fitchett, and wife, Stillsville.

Miss Hattie Woods has returned to Kewbaugh, after a two years' absence at Glenwood Springs, Colorado, with relatives.

Mr. Jos Hamm, Selby Road, was at home to a large party of friends from the east country last week. Among the attractions to be remembered was a bear, he's alive.

Mr. James Reid, ex-M.P.P., Centreville, went to Rochester last week to spend the holidays, Mrs. Reid being already there.

Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Lewis, Hinch, and Miss Lena Hannah, Desmond, spent Saturday last in town.

Rev. W. H. Emery and son Seaborn, who were seriously injured in a runaway collision at Regina, returned home by the midnight train from the West. They have had a long journey, safely and with careful nursing and the beneficent influence of a happy home, should regain strength rapidly.

BICKNELL CORNERS.

(Per last week.)

Several of the farmers around here have sold hay at good prices, but we believe it will be cheaper later on.—Nelson Amey and John Simmons have been drawing hay to Camden East.—We are sorry to hear of George Wilson's illness, but hope he will recover soon.—Miss Ida Gaucher from Toronto, is stopping with him.—John Hawley has the threshing machine this week.—John Hinch passed through here, buying up cattle, and loaded a carload at Newburgh.—Miss Olive Emberly visited Miss Marion Stewart, on Sunday last.—John Judge made a trip to Yarker this week.—Linden Longmore came near having a runaway on Sunday. As he was coming home from church, his horse became frightened and his leg caught in the shaft, and so fell on the ground, which stopped him.—Fortunately, no harm was done to the animal.—Mr. and Mrs. Sewell and family visited at Alva Emberly's, last week.—John Simmons and wife visited at Albert Barrett's, last Tuesday.—Albert Lucas has moved to Yarker, for the winter.—Miss Lizzie Hawley is home from Model school, for a few days.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

BURGESS—IRISH.

One of those pleasing little events took place at the home of Mr. David Burgess, Parliament Road, on Wednesday, 4th, when his youngest daughter, Miss Ella M., and Mr. Edward Earle Irish, of Yarker, were joined together in the holy bonds of matrimony, by the Rev. J. R. Reid, in the presence of a few intimate friends. The bride wore a travelling suit of light grey tweed, and white silk blouse. Miss Grace Burgess, sister of the bride, acted as bridesmaid, and Mr. Wesley Burgess, brother of the groom, as groomsman. The ceremony was performed at the hour of seven o'clock. The bride received many handsome and useful gifts, among them one dozen silver teaspoons from the groom, and Mrs. Reid, Irish left on the 8.11 train for a short trip west, and on their return, after visiting Mr. Irish's parents at Centreville, to Yarker, where they will reside. The best wishes and congratulations of their many friends go with them.

HOOLIGAN IN NEW YORK.

The leading female role in "Hooligan in New York" is a blind girl who earns a living selling flowers in the streets of the great city. A supposed friend of her father has possession of property that rightfully belongs to her, and fearing that she may eventually secure it, he plots to murder her and thus make himself secure. She is rescued by Hooligan, and the villian is finally brought to justice. The character is a sympathetic one, and Miss Nellie La Fleur, who will be seen in it at Bruce Opera House, on Thursday, 19th Dec., is said to be the ideal. It is a peculiar fact that during the six years Miss La Fleur has been in the theatrical profession she has played no less than six blind girl parts, in "The Two Orphans", "Brother for Brother", "Under the City Lamps", "The Manicurist's Daughters", "Young Mrs. Winthrop", and "Hooligan in New York." She regards her present role as the best of them all, and refused a similar part in a new production which promises to remain the entire season on Broadway, to continue with "Hooligan in New York". LUKE BELL.

On Thursday morning, Oct. 31st, Luke Bell, a worthy descendant of U. E. Loyalist ancestry, quietly and peacefully passed away at the home of his son-in-law, Mr. Henry Ingram, Treas.-tor o. the County of Lennox, in the 78th year of his age of ninety years. He was stricken down with paralysis on Sunday, Oct. 27th, an attack from which he never rallied, although he was sensible almost to the last of everything that was transpiring around him, and realized from the very first that his end was fast approaching. He finally succumbed to the summons and breathed his last on the following Thursday morning, in the presence of his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Ingram and family and other relatives.

Mr. Bell was born in 1817, in the Township of Camden, in the County of Addington, was married in 1844 to the eldest daughter of the late Col. Samuel Clark, of Camden East. He was appointed Lieutenant to the 2d Battalion of the Addington Militia in 1847, took an active part in enrolling the reserve militia, and in 1859 was appointed Captain in No. 3 Company of the Regimental Division of Addington.

In the various rebellions encouraged and fostered by citizens of the United States, which in the early days of 1838 and succeeding years threatened the loss of Canada to the British crown, Mr. Bell, then in his early youth, participated as one of his country's defenders, and in conjunction with other gallant sons of Canada, was responsible for the preservation of that British connection and British liberty, which we as Canadians of the present day so highly prize.

In 1877 Mr. Bell with his family, removed to the west, settling near Petrolea, where he resided until 1904. Since that time he has been living with his daughter Augusta, wife of Henry Ingram, of Sarnia.

Deceased was a consistent member of the Methodist church, an enthusiastic member of the Orange body, and a life long Conservative. He was of a genial and humorous disposition, and possessed abundance of wit, was highly respected, and was extremely popular among a past generation of friends and neighbors, whom he outlived.

Deceased is survived by a son and three daughters, Charles, residing in the North West; Mrs. Henry Ingram, a resident of Sarnia, and Mrs. Nee, and an unmarried daughter, Nellie, both of whom live in Manitoba. The funeral took place from the residence of Mr. Henry Ingram, on Saturday afternoon, Nov. 3d. Rev. Mr. Ferrie, of Sarnia, conducted the services at the house, after which the remains were taken to the Petrolea cemetery, where they were interred along side his wife, who died in December, 1880.

DEATH OF HIGHLY RESPECTED CITIZEN.

Calgary, Alberta, 1st Dec.

Calgary lost a very promising young citizen yesterday afternoon in the untimely death of Morley F. Oliver, of the firm of Oliver Bros., druggists.

Some few weeks ago Morley Oliver was married to a Calgary girl, Miss Astley, and the happy couple left for the coast to spend their honeymoon. While enjoying a visit to the coast cities, Mr. Oliver contracted a severe cold, and returned to Calgary a sick man. Unable to attend to his duties for several days, he finally had to give in, and took to his bed. The doctors pulled him through a very severe attack of bronchial pneumonia, and he started to mend to their entire satisfaction, but a few days ago suffered a bad relapse, and though every possible effort was applied, he succumbed to the fatal disease about 1.30 yesterday afternoon.

Morley Oliver was one of Calgary's most popular citizens, quiet, unassuming, and a hard worker, of the description that Western Canada requires. He left his home, which is in Napanee, Ont., and came West to Calgary with his brother, Lorne, a few years ago. They opened up a drug and chemist's business, by careful attention to their work had built up a splendid trade.

Deceased was one of the most popular members of the Elk society of Canada, being the first provincial grand secretary of that order in Alberta.

In politics he was an officer of the Conservative party, in Calgary. In sports he took a great interest in Rugby circles, when a movement was started a couple of years ago to form a Rugby club in Calgary, he was one of the leading spirits in the organization.

Up to last night the funeral arrangements had not been made, but it is probable that the Elks will have charge of the funeral arrangements.

THE PROSPECTOR.

I played the Game with a steadfast hand,
With the rocks and the hills of clew;
While the flame of the sun in a northern land
Burned the gathered morn on the ice.

I played the game with a clean, strong mind,
With the law of man for guide;
When the hearts of the world were smitten blind
By the glare of the gain, and died.

I played the Game with a sturdy heart,
With the beasts of the bush for mates,
Till the flesh bled raw, and the lights went low,
And my hopes met the chill, hark fates.

I played the Game with a losing hand,
By the stakes I sought to claim;
And the darkness has dropped on my square of land,
But I know that I played the Game.

AND WHEREAS it is desirable that the Town Council should at once proceed with the said completion and extension of said Municipal Electric Light plant should be erected on the south of the said Town.

AND WHEREAS in order to complete it will be necessary to issue debentures of $10,000 as hereinafter mentioned, which is the amount of the debt intended to be created by this By-law, the proceeds of the said debentures to be applied to said purpose and no other.

AND WHEREAS it is desirable to issue the said debentures at one time and to make them payable in twenty years from the issue thereof, with the privilege of paying off any yearly sums during the period of twenty years, being the currency of the said debentures, said yearly sums being of such respective amounts that will be sufficient to pay the annual interest on the said debentures, and also to form a sinking fund for the payment of the said debentures at the end of the said period.

AND WHEREAS the total amount required to be raised annually by special rates for paying the said debt and interest thereon after provided is $967.45.

AND WHEREAS the amount of the whole rateable property of the Town of Napanee, according to the last revised Assessment Roll is $1,125,795.

AND WHEREAS the amount of the existing debenture debt of the said Municipality is $85,661.39, exclusive of local improvement debts secured to be specially assessed for, amounts, whereof no part or principal or of interest is in arrear.

THEREFORE the Municipal Council of the Corporation of the Town of Napanee enacts as follows:—

1. That for the purpose of raising the sum of $10,000 as aforesaid, debentures of the Town of Napanee to the amount in the sum of $10,000 as aforesaid, in the sums of $100 and $500 each, shall be issued by the Mayor of the said Municipality and be sealed with the Municipal seal and dated on the date of the issue thereof and shall bear interest at the rate of four per centum per annum, payable on the First day of March in each of the years 1908 to 1928 inclusive, at the office of the Treasurer of the Town of Napanee, with the interest on the said bonds hereby coupons attached for the payment of interest aforesaid.

2. IT shall be lawful for the Mayor of the said Municipality and he is hereby authorized and required to issue and sell the said debentures hereby authorized to be issued, and the same shall be signed by the Mayor and sealed with the Municipal seal and the Clerk of the said Municipality is hereby authorized and instructed to attend the seal of the said Municipality to the said debentures.

3. THAT during the currency of the said debentures there shall be raised annually by special rate, on all the rateable property of the Town of Napanee, the sum of $967.45 for the purpose of paying the amount due in each of the said years for principal and interest in respect of the said debt.

4. THAT this By-law shall take effect on the day of the final passing thereof.

Hay Bay Sunday School Entertainment.

Great preparations are being made for the Hay Bay S. S. entertainment to be held on Monday evening, Dec. 30th. The programme promises to be of exceeding interest, as is to be a children's entertainment, and those who enjoy hearing well trained children sing, recite and drill, cannot but be pleased. The entertainment begins at 8 p.m., and the admission is the ridiculously small sum of 15 cents.

Napanee's Cash Grocery

IF YOU PAY CASH, WHY PAY CREDIT PRICES?

We sell cash, of our goods come direct from the makers' factories, thus we have the freshest and best. We save you the middleman's or wholesaler's profit, and all the expenses of credit system, which results in 70 TO 80 PER CENT. OFF general and package Groceries.

Others may follow some of our prices or some one cut to divert your attention, but take the coal oil scandal as a sample. The cost of coal oil to retailers has not changed since last January, and those are the most ambitious to sell around cost now are the ones that were (and perhaps still are) the most determined to get you on the combine and restore the former retail price, 25c per gallon.

All our prices are always right.
We continue to give 20 per cent. on Yeast Soda, Blue, Butter Color, Dandruff Cure, Stove Blacking, Boot Polish.
10 per cent. off all kinds and prices of package Teas and package Breakfast Foods.
20 per cent per week compound interest on $1.60 for one year equals $141.61.

Why We Never Sold Coal Oil

Because Coal Oil and Groceries are not in the same class, and so far as we are concerned it matters not to us if coal oil is given away free. But we do sell Groceries of the best quality and at prices that will defy competition. Our system of buying enables us to buy quantities of Groceries as large as jobbing houses, therefore, we are in a position to give our customers better values for the same quality of groceries than they can get elsewhere.

THE ROBINSON CO. LIMITED | NAPANEE'S - - GREATEST STORE | THE ROBINSON CO. LIMITED

Only Nine Shopping Days Before Xmas.

And not only is the time short, but the fine, quaint, beautiful things we've found will be picked up quickly.

For the richest choice of Christmas things any store in Napanee ever had, come to us now.

SHOP IN THE MORNING—The store seems biggest then. Keep to the right in the busy aisles. There will be some elbowing, but elbowing is by pleasant people at Robinson's.

Judged by the way the holiday business has opened up, this year's business will break all precedent.

Rich and beautiful goods from all the world have been gathered. Over sixty-five thousand dollars' worth here right now.

Handkerchiefs for Gifts.

Every year we sell more and more fine handkerchiefs for gifts. The spirit of Christmas cheer is more than ever wrapped up in our splendid stock of fancy handkerchiefs. Many are done up in handsome boxes and help to make the handkerchiefs more attractive than ever.

In extent of assortments in reliable qualities and in fairness of prices this store has most to offer Christmas shoppers. You can judge us by handkerchiefs as well as by anything. Things are at their best now and the choicest will go first as a matter of course.

Come to the Store as often as you can. Bring those with you who haven't much sunshine in their lives. Bring the children too. It's an education for them, and it's all so bright and beautiful and jolly here.

Umbrellas for Men and Women.

Many of the handles and styles are quite different from what you will usually find, and the values are especially good. Your money never bought so much. But it isn't the cheapness that's the chief charm—it's the tastefulness of the styles and the excellence of the goods.

Men's Fur Lined Overcoats at February Prices

Prices for Fur Lined Overcoats usually touch their lowest point in February. But here's a chance to buy Fur Lined Overcoats—now—at prices that would be considered low later on. We bought and had these splendid coats made up for us during the summer. That is why we can sell these SPLENDID COATS at such remarkably low prices. Everyone is custom tailored. Investigation will prove. They make a beautiful Christmas gift.

Saturday Night Sale of Pillow Tops, 2 for 25c.

To morrow night (Dec. 14th) we will place on sale every pillow top in the house,

2 for 25 cts.

Or one cord and tassel and one pillow top same price.

Time, 7.30 o'clock. These were 25c and 35c in the regular way.

Belts For Christmas.

In the whole range of small gifts nothing is more sensible and more acceptable than a handsome belt of which we're showing many attractive new styles. In fact, we can insure you absolute exclusiveness in many things for women's wear—which, in another way of saying, we get the very best of new things as fast as introduced.

We're devoting more attention each season to Ladies' Neckwear and Belts, both of which fit in with the Christmas spirit. We know values and we know goods, and you may depend on it that anything that goes out from here is full first-class.

Do Your Christmas Shopping Early.

Thereby making the work easy on the hundreds who toil. You will find the store as rich in gift things as it will be at all. Richer, for many very choice things will be bought up early and put away mysteriously to await the great gift day.

Children's Suits at Big Reductions.

We have an immense stock of Children's and Boys' Suits—far too many in fact. We are therefore making it especially easy to buy the little chap a new suit for Christmas.

Prices are about as follows on all odd numbers: 5.00 Suits are 4.00, 4.00 Suits are 3.00, 3.50 Suits are 2.75, and some Suits are reduced from 2.00 and 2.25 to 1.50. Come and see.

Men's Fur Collars at Reduced Prices.

And our Tailoring Department will adjust them properly to your coat without any charge whatever.

Men's and Boys' Overcoats and Suits Reduced, Many of Them From 20 to 30 per cent.

In every size we have a number of Overcoats and Suits that are the last ones left of some of the very best selling lines of the season. These we have marked down regardless of what they cost us, to a price that will clear them out. You will be fortunate to get one. The greatest number of the Overcoats are in sizes 38, 39 up to 32, and the Men's in sizes 40, 42 and 44, but some in all sizes.

Women's Neckwear for Christmas.

We're showing a number of late novelties in ladies' Neckwear that would make very desirable Christmas presents. Direct connections with the leading sources of supply give us quick advantage in regard to style, and fast as new things go on sale they are snapped up. For that reason we urge immediate selection of both Neckwear and Belts if you want styles that are out of the ordinary, and which must be picked up now or missed for the season.

A Special in Skirts for Very Large Women.

We have about 18 Skirts in plain cloth, black and navy, waist sizes 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36 inches, good wide width. Skirts with ample fullness at hips. Special price $3.00.

Get a pencil and a sheet of paper; sit down comfortably, and plan your Christmas Gifts.

Men's House Coats on Sale.

Our stock of House Jackets is pretty badly broken up as to range of sizes. To clear them quickly now we have put the odd ones at two prices:
At $2.50 were $3.50 to $4.00.
At $4.00 were $5.00 to $6.00.

Seasonable Gloves and Mitts for Men.

There isn't such another Glove service anywhere near here.
Men's Lined Gloves, 1.00 to 2.50.
Men's Unlined Gloves 1 00 to 2.00.
Men's Mitts, lined and nnlined, 50c to 2.50.
Men's Woolen Gloves, 50c.
Boys' Gloves and Mitts, 35c up to 1.25.

Skirts, Coats and Fur Lined Coats Made to Order for Xmas.

Don't hesitate to order for Xmas on account of not knowing size. With our system of keeping track of business transactions in our Dressmaking, Tailoring, Ready-to-Wear and Fur Making Departments, we have an accurate record of customers' measurements. You may order by mail if you wish.

This store is full of suggestions for Xmas buyers. Interior displays are all arranged for easy shopping. You, your friends and children are welcome to make this great store your headquarters. If you want help in choosing Xmas gifts, do not hesitate to ask us for information.

Handsome Voile Skirts, Black

We just wish we could show you our Black Voile Skirts. We are justly proud of them. Those who buy them will be too. They are all made by experts who know how to handle Voiles as they should be handled. Stitching is true, trimming is unique, fit is perfect. Prices, 7.50 to 20.00.

Ready-to-Wear Carpets Rugs.

The modern homes are running largely to the use of Rugs. We are showing twice as many as any previous season. We also notice that people are buying better qualities.

The approaching holiday season with all its family reunions, social gatherings, etc, means more use for rich and decorative floor coverings. The deep rich pile goods are at their best in Royal Axminster, Wilton and Velvet Rugs. We invite you to see what a wealth of assortment and values we are showing. Keep Rugs in mind for Christmas buying.

Men's Christmas Neckwear.

An almost endless variety of Neckwear at 50c, picked out by men who know right styles for men—so women may choose for their men folks with certainty as to pleasing. Each Tie or several will be put in a neat box if desired.

Our stock of 25c Neckwear, also 2 for 25c Neckwear, for men is as large as most city stores carry. An immense range to choose from.

Boys' Reefers.

We have too many in the small sizes for boys 3 to 8 years old. We have reduced them to less than maker's price. Ask to see them.

Table Linens for Christmas.

Christmas and New Years is the time that the best Linens in the house are brought into use. Every woman is a lover of fine Linens. If you ask her she will tell you there is always room for more. Our window displays during the week gave the people a pretty good idea of the class of Linen we keep. Fine assortments to choose from in

PATTERN TABLE CLOTHS, NAPKINS,
TEA CLOTHS,
DOYLIES,
TRAY CLOTHS,
SIDEBOARD COVERS.

Silk Petticoat, Silk Waist, or Silk Dress.

WHICH?

The great majority of women dearly love the swish of Silk. Silk is the Queen of Dress Fabrics. It will please when other fabrics may be doubtful. All ages wear black. The younger people sometimes prefer colors. Whether you decide to buy Ready-to-wear or piece goods, rely on us for dependable quality.

Silk Petticoats, $3 to $10. Silk Waists, $3 to $12.50. Black Silk Dresses, $13.50 to $25.
Silk Dress Patterns of 15 yds., $7.50 to $22.50. Silk Waist Patterns, $2 to $8.

A tickling cough, from any cause, is quickly stopped by Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. And it is so thoroughly harmless and safe that Dr. Shoop tells mothers everywhere to give it without hesitation, even to very young babes. The wholesome green leaves and tender stems of a tiny shrub growing remotely in the Alpine forests of Switzerland are the doctor's "Cure." It calms the cough, heals the sore and sensitive bronchial membranes. No opium, no chloroform, nothing harsh used to injure or suppress. Simply a resinous plant extract, that helps to heal nothing more. The Shoop's red box with the Dotter upon. "The Sore Red Herb." Ask for Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. For sale by T. B. Wallace.

SAYS It Is FACT.

T. B. WALLACE CONFIRMS GUARANTEE ON HYOMEI, CURE FOR CATARRH.

The question having been raised as to whether or no T. B. Wallace will refund the money if a Hyomei outfit does not do all that is claimed for it in curing catarrh, he wants to state positively that this guarantee is an absolute fact. A guarantee that is to the effect that can be offered as to the curative powers of but few all catarrhal troubles. You do not risk a cent in testing its healing virtues, T. B. Wallace takes all the risk.

If you have catarrh, try this wonderful medicated air of Hyomei. It does not drug or nauseate the stomach, but is breathed through a neat pocket inhaler that comes with every outfit, so that its medication reaches the most remote air cells in the nose, throat and lungs, where any catarrhal germs may be living. It quickly destroys them, heals and soothes the irritated mucous membrane and vitalizes the tissues so that catarrh is no longer possible. You can lose nothing by trying Hyomei as a trial, nothing but the catarrh and that is good riddance.

The price of the complete outfit is but $1.00; nothing if it fails to cure. Get an outfit from T. B. Wallace to-day and begin its use at once.

GRAND COWS.

The following is the large milk and butter record made at Willowdale Farm, North Frederickshurgh, by three registered H. F. cows, age respectfully 5, 4 and 3 years, for 6 months, 1907:

July, cheese.....	30 55
August, cheese.....	27 76
September, cheese.....	28 46
October, cheese.....	23 92
October, butter.....	9 10
November, butter.....	20 16
Estimated value of whole milk for home use, and whey and skim milk for feeding 6 months....	42 60
Total.....	$238 45

Brother farmer, breed and feed right, and you then keep your cows on the top shelf and share in the extra profits.

Yours faithfully,

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

CURE

Sick Headache and many of the troublesome and dangerous diseases to which the human system is subject, have their origin in a disordered liver. Within their small compass will be found a remedy for all such troubles.

SICK

Headache, Bilious Headache, Dizziness, Constipation, Indigestion, Sallow Skin, Pain in the Side, Torpid Liver, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Coated Tongue, Loss of Appetite, Dyspepsia, Cramps and Distress after Eating, are promptly relieved and permanently cured by these Little Pills.

HEAD

Actuated by this admirable principle they have gained a reputation which no other medicine has ever attained, and which they will maintain. Those who once try them will find they are just the pills they want when they need anything to do with biliousness.

ACHE

In the hands of an experienced physician they will be found to be the most valuable medicine ever known. Carter's Little Liver Pills are very small and very easy to take. One or two pills make a dose. They are entirely vegetable and do not gripe or purge, but by their gentle action please all who use them.

A CURE FOR FEVER AND AGUE—Farmelee's Vegetable Pills are compounded for use in any climate, and they will be found to preserve their powers in any latitude. In fever and ague they act upon the secretions and neutralize the poison which has found its way into the blood. They correct the impurities which find entrance into the system through drinking water or food and if used as a preventive fevers are avoided.

JUST THE THING THAT'S WANTED.—A pill that acts upon the stomach and yet is so compounded that certain ingredients of it preserve their power to act upon the intestinal canals, so as to clear them of excreta the retention of which cannot but be hurtful, was long looked for by the medical profession. It was found in Parmelee's Vegetable Pills which are the result of much expert study, and are scientifically prepared as a laxative and an alterative in one.

Sudden transition from a hot to a cold temperature, exposure to rain, sitting in a draught, unseasonable substitution of light for heavy clothing are fruitful causes of colds, and the resultant cough so perilous to persons of weak lungs. Dr. Edward Everett Hale, discussing a rather finicky attack that had been made on certain recent statements, smiled and said:—

"But who or what is blameless? It is like the case of the Scottish hen.

"An old Scottish woman wished to sell a hen to a neighbor.

"But tell me, the neighbor said, 'is she a thegither a guid bird? Has she got nae faults, nae faults at a'?'

"Awell, Margot," the other old woman admitted, "she has got one fault. She will lay on the Lord's Day."

GREAT MEDICINE.—Tonti, one of the pioneers of French Canada, lost a hand and wore an iron hook as a substitute. He was in the habit of losing the ears of refractory Indians with this iron hand, and they soon remarked that it was "great medicine." Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil is great medicine; it takes hold of pain with an iron hand and knocks it out of the system.

BOVRIL

Contains the life-sustaining elements of

B E E F

Beef extracts contain only the flavor and stimulating elements of beef—the nutritives and bone are lost in the making. Baron Liebig, the inventor of beef extracts, admitted that. He said "It is but a condiment and stimulant, containing no matter capable of sustaining life."

That is where BOVRIL differs from beef extracts.

BOVRIL does contain the nourishment and life-sustaining elements of beef as well as its rich flavor.

BOVRIL gives strength and nourishment to the invalid. With its help you can make left-over scraps into delicious consommes, bouillons and soups with very little trouble.

BOVRIL is the true economist in the home kitchen.

LEARN DRESSMAKING BY MAIL

In Your Spare Time at Home,

Or Take a Personal Course at School.

It costs all to learn, we teach on cash or instalments and teach a personal class at school in dressmaking, tailoring, millinery and cutting. These lessons teach how to cut, fit and make any garment, from the plainest shirt waist to the most elaborate dress. The whole system is from one course. We have taught thousands successfully and guarantee to give $500 to anyone we have learned from the ages of 14 to 60 who cannot learn dressmaking as thoroughly as a course teaches it if you work in sheets for twelve months, as we employ no one to solicit subscriptions. This is the only experienced system of dressmaking and is certified by the leading dressmakers in every country. Write at once for our free booklet and you can one-hour for a Address

Clippings from the Kingston Whig. —The concert and tea given in the Methodist church at Portsmouth, on Wednesday evening, proved a great success. The church was crowded to the doors, and the affair was voted the best ever held in the history of the congregation. It was given through the kindness of Mr. T. F. Wood, of Kingston, who made all the arrangements for both the tea and concert. Before the concert was brought to a close a most pleasant affair took place, when Mr. Wood presented Rev. J. B. Eger with a purse of money, amounting to $50.00. Mr. Eger made a most suitable reply. The food was consequently very highly for his generosity to the church.

WORSE THAN ONIONS.

BAD BREATH FROM INDIGESTION CANNOT BE OVERCOME WITH PERFUMES.

All of us suffer from bad breath—some times our own, but oftener that of our friends.

Nine-tenths of this bad breath comes from some stomach trouble, and cannot be overcome by breath perfumes or any other palliative measure.

If you occasionally have a bad breath, if there is heartburn, faulness and acid gulpings of undigested food; if the stomach burns or smarts; if there is sleeplessness, nervousness, headache or any other of the many symptoms of indigestion, use Mi-o-na stomach tablets and get well.

Mi-o-na is not a mere digestive nor a physic, but a tonic remedy that strengthens the muscles of the stomach and bowels so that the flow of gastric juices is increased, and the food is digested naturally and does not stay in the stomach to ferment and poison the breath. If Mr. B. Wallace has seen so many cures made by Mi-o-na stomach tablets that they give a guarantee with every 50 cent box that the money will be refunded if the remedy fails to give satisfaction. He takes the whole risk, and a box of Mi-o-na will not cost you a penny unless it cures you.

TORTURED DAY AND NIGHT.

ZAM-BUK CURES PILES.

That there is no end to the healing powers of Zam-Buk is being demonstrated every day. Mr. Julius Glazier, of Denbigh, Ont., was tortured day and night with blind bleeding piles, so bad that he says: "I could find no comfort standing, sitting or lying down, and was unable to do any work. One day my eyes rested upon a little sample box of Zam-Buk. I asked it up and read the words, CURES PILES. I started using Zam-Buk that night, and before I could purchase a large box I was already cured, and HAVE NOT BEEN TROUBLED SINCE. You may publish this if you wish for the benefit of other sufferers." This is only one of the many cases where Zam-Buk has healed piles when all else failed. Why do you go on suffering when such a splendid remedy is near at hand?

Zam-Buk heals sores, cures eczema, skin eruptions, ulcers, ringworm, itch, barber's rash, blood poison, bad leg, salt rheum, abrasions, abscesses, cuts, burns, scalds and all skin injuries and diseases. Of all stores and druggists at 50 cents, or from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. 3 boxes for $1.25.

Rings, rings, rings, from $1.00 up to any price. All solid gold and guaranteed. F. CHINNECK'S Jewelry Store.

TELLS HOW TO MIX IT.

A well-known authority on Rheumatism gives the readers of a large New York daily paper the following valuable, yet simple and harmless prescription, which one can easily prepare at home:

Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounce.

Mix by shaking well in a bottle, and take a teaspoonful after each meal and at bedtime.

He states that the ingredients can be obtained from any good prescription pharmacy at small cost, and, being of vegetable extraction, are harmless to take.

This pleasant mixture, it takes regularly for a few days, is said to overcome almost any case of Rheumatism. The pain and swelling, it is claimed, disappears with each dose, until permanent results are obtained, and without injuring the stomach. While there are many so-called Rheumatism remedies, patent medicines, etc., some of which do give relief, few really give permanent results, and the above will, no doubt, be greatly appreciated by many sufferers here at the time.

Inquiry at the drug stores of this neighborhood elicits the information that these drugs are harmless and can be procured separately, or the druggists here will mix the prescription for our readers if asked to.

TRAFFORD.

AN EXCELLENT THING.

Habitual constipation and stomach trouble are such dread enemies of our race that anything which will give a degree of permanent relief will be greatly welcomed. The following simple and harmless ingredients, all of which are strictly of vegetable origin, have been found invaluable by eminent physicians: Compound Fluid Extract of Rhubarb half an ounce, Fluid Extract of Mandrake two drams, Hyperdin one ounce, and enough good Peppermint water to fill a four ounce bottle. Shake well and take a teaspoonful three times a day, before meals and at bed time, followed by a glass of water

WM. GRANGE HAWLEY.

A widely known and highly respected resident of the Township of Ernestown, Newburgh Road, died on Wednesday, 11th Dec., in his seventy-second year. Deceased had been ill for over a year, and bore his intense suffering with Christian fortitude. He was a faithful member of Trinity Methodist church, a kind and indulgent husband and father, and will be sincerely mourned by a host of friends. Besides his bereaved wife, he leaves four children, Stanford Hawley, Desoronto; John F. Hawley, Napanee; Roland Hawley, on the homestead, and Mrs. Geo. H. Perry, Napanee. The funeral will take place this afternoon at 2 o'clock.

SCORES HAYCOCK.

Mr. Uriah Wilson last Friday complained in parliament of Mr. Haycock, Inspector of Binding Twine. Did the Government sanction his conduct in appearing on the public platform at Napanee and making a strong Liberal speech in the campaign of 1904? He reviewed this gentleman's career and election activities. He charged him with attempted electoral corruption in his (Mr. Wilson's) riding, but this was before his appointment, when, said Mr. Wilson, he narrowly escaped being classified as a bar-room loafer.

Mr. Fielding agreed that it was entirely improper for Mr. Haycock or any other official receiving a living income from the Government to take any part in politics beyond quietly casting a vote.

Sleighs, sleighs, from 35c to $4.50. All steel runners and frames. Something the boys will not break, and sleighs will run further than the other fellows, at BOYLE & SON'S.

The Band concert in Merrill's Hall was a decided success, both socially and financially.

The snow storm of Saturday and Sunday was the heaviest known here for a few years.

Mr. Robert returned on Saturday with his team, after a successful summer with Stair on the Bay.

E. J. Dopking is improving nicely under the skillful care of Dr. Carscallen.

Mr. Philip Wiseman and Miss Nancy Wiseman were in town on Monday.

Mr. Jacob Mouck, of Tamworth, was in town on Monday.

Don't forget the anniversary services in the Methodist church, on Sunday, the 22d, and the dinner on Christmas night.

Miss Lillian Davey and brother Wellington attended the wedding of their cousin at Wilton, on Wednesday.

We are pleased to know that Miss Price has been re-engaged for another year, and Miss Stevens, of Napanee, has been engaged for the junior department.

The Conquest of Canaan

By BOOTH TARKINGTON.

Copyright, 1905, by Harper & Brothers.

CHAPTER I.

A DRY snow had fallen steadily throughout the still night, so that when a cold, upper wind cleared the sky gloriously in the morning the incongruous Indiana town shone in a white memory—roof, ledge and earth as evenly covered as by moonlight. There was no thaw. Only where the line of trains followed the big bend of the frozen river, their distant chimneys like exclamation points on a blank page, was there a first threat against the supreme whiteness. The wind passed quickly and on high, for the shouting of the school children had ceased at 9 o'clock with pitiful suddenness, so sleigh bells laughed out on the air, and the muffling of the thoroughfares wrought an unaccustomed peace like that of Sunday. This was the phenomenon which afforded the opening of the morning debate of the sages in the wide counters of the National House.

Only such substantives as have so far failed to visit Canaan do not know that the National House is on the Main street side of the Courthouse square and has the advantage of being within two minutes' walk of the railroad station, which is in plain sight of the windows, an inestimable benefit to the conversation of the aged men who congregate there windows on this white morning even as they do in summer to hold arguments at all corners the cane seated chairs on the pavement outside.

Mail time had come to mean that bright hour when they all got their feet on the brass rod which protected the sills of the two big windows, with the steam radiators sizzling like kettles against the side wall. Mr. Jonas Taber, who had sold his hardware business magnificently (not magnificently for his nephew, the purchaser) some ten years before, was usually, in spite of the fact that he remained a bachelor at seventy-nine, the last to settle down with the others; though often the first to reach the hotel, which he always entered by a side door, because he did not believe in the treating system. And it was Mr. Askew Arp, only seventy-five, but already a thoroughly capable cynic, who almost invariably opened the argument," and it was he who discovered the sinister intention behind the weather of this particular morning.

The malevolence of his voice and manner was shocked his finger at the town beyond the windows and exclaimed, with a bitter laugh, "Look at it!" was so surprise to his companions "Just look at it! I tell you the devil is mighty smart! Ha, ha! Mighty smart!"

Through custom it was the duty of Squire Buckalew (justice of the peace in 1858) to be the first to take up Mr. Arp. The others looked to him for it. Therefore he asked sharply:

"What's the devil got to do with snow?"

"Everything to do with it, sir," Mr. Arp returned. "It's plain as day to anybody with eyes and sense."

"Then let us have a part in it, too," said Buckalew, "if you're got either."

"By the Almighty, squire—" Mr. Arp began in a fury with sudden heat—"if I'd lived as long as you—"

"You have," interrupted the other, stung. "Twelve years ago."

NAPANEE AMATEUR ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION.

An organization meeting of the Association was held at the Council Chamber, Napanee, on Tuesday evening last. Large representative gathering of the members was present. It was decided to assume the name of the Napanee Amateur Athletic Association and to form an association to ultimately encourage and maintain all classes of athletics and sports in the Town of Napanee during the whole year and as soon as possible arrange for a club room in connection with the gymnasium, where the social side of the club may be looked after. It is expected that this Association will prave to be a benefit to the best interests of athletics in the town and take the place of a much needed men's club, and the desire is to make the membership fee $1.00, so as to put the Association upon a good, sound financial basis and make it a common meeting ground of all citizens, who wish to take advantage of the club and to engage in healthy exercise and manly sports.

It was decided to obtain a proper room for a gymnasium and secure all necessary appliances to equip a gymnasium in the immediate future. Very desirable rooms have been offered the Club in the Brisco House block, which, for the present, will probably be used until more expensive and suitable quarters can be obtained, which, no doubt, will be found in a few months.

The following officers were elected: President, Mr. G. F. Ruttan; Vice-president, Dr. R. C. Cartwright; Secretary-Treasurer, Mr. W. H. Barker, Accountant of the Merchants Bank.

The following gentlemen were named as committee to make preliminary arrangements: Mr. G. F. Ruttan, Dr. R. C. Cartwright, Mr. J. B. Allison, Mr. J. J. Graham, Mr. C. A. Jones, F. Pruden, Mr. Battle, Mr. C. M. Warner, Mr. W. A. Graham, Mr. W. H. Barker. This Committee will also draft a constitution to be submitted at a future meeting of the Association.

It was decided to allow the membership fee to stand, as at present, at 45.00 until the next meeting of the Association, when, no doubt, the fee will probably be increased to $10.00 so that those wishing to avail themselves of the charter membership within the next two weeks, can give their names in Mr. Barker at the Merchants Bank, and take advantage of the cheaper membership fee and all members are requested to pay their membership fees to Mr. Barker as soon as possible so as to give the committee funds to secure the necessary equipment.

The meeting was adjourned subject to the call of the President and probably will meet again immediately after the New Year, and it is expected that the gymnasium will be in working order in a few days.

The following list of gentlemen, who have become members of the Club ensures that it will be undertaken:

G. F. Ruttan,	A. F. Chinneck,
H. C. Cartwright,	W. A. Ashley,
J. J. Graham,	W. A. Graham,

SON-JURY SITTINGS.

This court was opened before Mr. Justice MacMahon on Monday, and was concluded Wednesday morning. The following are the cases tried:

Craven vs. Howard.—An action brought by Thos. Craven, of Frederickburgh, against Stephen Howard, Sophinsburg, for the balance due of $340.00 on a quantity of hay sold and delivered to the defendant. Defendant counter-claimed that the plaintiff had not kept to the contract, and that the hay was not good. Judgment for plaintiff for $356.00 and costs of suit, and counter-claim dismissed without costs. Herrington, Warner & Grange, for Plaintiff; F. M. Young, of Picton, for Defendant.

Doupe vs. Doupe.—An action for support and maintenance of a child of the law brought by Susannah Doupe, of Camden, against Samuel S. Doupe and Edmund W. Lockhead, of Camden East. It was settled, the plaintiff to be paid $200 per annum quarterly, the defendant Lockhead, and each party to pay his own cost. John McIntyre, K.C., for Plaintiff; J. L. Whiting, K.C., for Defendant Doupe; Herrington, Warner & Grange, for Defendant Lockhead.

Miller vs. Evans.—This was an action in connection with Cobalt mining lands, and after several witnesses had been summoned, a settlement was effected, the defendant paying the plaintiff $800 in cash and a promissory note for $200 payable in one year. Each party to pay his own costs. J. L. Whiting, K.C., and W. A. Grange for Plaintiff; H. D. Gamble, K.C., Toronto, for Defendant.

Rose vs. Rose.—An action brought by Mr. Watson and others, on behalf of themselves and all the other creditors of J. Almon Gordanier's estate, wife, to set aside certain deeds of property in Camden East and Village of Camden East. Judgment reserved. N. F. Paterson, K.C., Owen Sound, and D. H. Preston, K.C., for Plaintiffs; Fred Hodgins, K.C., Toronto, and U. M. Wilson, for Defendant.

NEWS NOTES.

United Canada, Ottawa, says that Mr. Aylesworth's hearing is so little improved that he will shortly resign his portfolio, and proceed to Germany for special treatment.

Lord Kilvir, the foremost scientist of the day, died at Glasgow, Scotland, on Tuesday.

The Grand Trunk Railway will apply for leave to appeal against the two-cent fare order to the Privy Council.

The Bank of Commerce at Kingston had to employ safe-drillers from Toronto to open the safe, owing to a clerk having locked up the combination figures.

Philip Kelgeman of Tweed, on trial at Belleville, for three days on a charge of assaulting two little girls, was found guilty by a jury. Sentence was reserved.

NEWBURGH.

The meeting of the Farmers' Institute in Finkle's Hall, on Wednesday evening of last week, was well attended. Mr. J. B. Aylesworth, for so many years an officer of the Institute, and this year's President, was in the chair, and the delegation consisted of Dr. Reed, of Georgetown, and Mr. Glendenning, of Manilla. The chief address in the evening was by Mr. Glendenning on farm decoration, and he dealt ably with such matters as lawns, hedges, driveways, house-painting, thus showing the importance from every point of view of the farm presenting an attractive appearance. Brief addresses were given by Messrs. Dunwoody and Denyes. In the afternoon the attendance was smaller. The regrettable feature of the Institute meetings is that these afternoon sessions, at which the more practical subjects are discussed, are not generally attended by the farmers, and the object of the delegation is thus to a large degree defeated.

Mr. Warren Meacham left on Friday for Whitby, to attend the annual convocation of the Whitby Collegiate Institute and on the following day went on to Gravenhurst, where he will undergo treatment in the Sanitarium.

The Village Council, feeling the necessity of the presence of an official of the law, at large gatherings in Finkle's Hall, and of the request of the Board of Education, appointed Mr. J. H. Patterson to act as constable at the High School Commencement Exercises on Friday (Friday) evening. It is hoped that this is preliminary to the making of a permanent appointment of this kind.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred. Hill and family leave on Saturday for Montreal where they will spend Christmas week with relatives.

DECEMBER BRIDE.

A pretty house wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. P. E. R. Mitchell, Napanee, on Saturday, Nov. 16th, when their daughter Eva, became the bride of Dr. Jas. Mitchell, North Battleford, Sask., the Rev. H. Bake, B.A., President of the Bay of Quinte Conference, officiating. The bride, who was unattended, wore a handsome imported gown of white net over taffeta, and carried a large bouquet of white roses. The wedding march was played by Miss Pauline Kinnston. The spacious rooms were beautifully decorated with cut flowers. The happy couple left on the evening train on an extended tour through eastern Ontario and Quebec, the bride travelling in a suit of brown broadcloth, hat and gloves to match, and wore a handsome set of mink furs. We unite with our many readers in wishing the newly married couple a happy and prosperous life. In Mrs. Mitchell the Dr. has a helpmate whose social and intellectual qualities will ever prove to be of the greatest assistance to him. Both the bride and groom are former graduates of Queen's University, Kingston.

Dulness Cannot be Cured.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that we cannot cure with Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

The Best Flour

Dafoe's Nonesuch, Dafoe's Manitoba Patent

By numerous tests by the best bakers the above mentioned grades have been proven to be the best flours in the market.

When buying flour, ask for Dafoe's, and positively refuse any flour not milled by them. Remember that you can purchase cheaper than from the Western mills, which have to be transported thousands of miles at great expense, and you know when it reaches you is of inferior quality.

The grocer complains if the farmer or the merchant sends to Toronto or to outside points for an article he can get at the home store just as good. Be fair to yourself and to buy flour from mills hundreds of miles away, and why? You can manufacture more money than you can purchase the same grades for, every bag of which is guaranteed.

Chelsea Cornmeal and Buckwheat Flour always on hand. Feed grinding a specialty. Highest cash price paid for wheat. Remember that the best Anthracite Coal is also in the market for the purchase of all kinds of grain.

Ask for prices at the Big Mill, before purchasing your Flour, Feed or Coal.

DIED IN BRITISH COLUMBIA.

Word was received in Kingston, on Monday morning, of the death of William J. Neilson, aged twenty-eight years, eldest son of James S. Neilson, of Big Island, which occurred on Saturday ago, and was employed in the office of P. Burns' big packing house, at Calgary. Some few weeks ago, he was transferred to the company's office at Kamloops. Inflammatory rheumatism was the cause of his death, and he had only been ill a few days. He was well known in Kingston and at Stella, and his death is deeply regretted. He was a bright and active young man. Previous to his going west, he was employed as a traveller for H. W. Kelly, Kingston. The remains will be brought home, and interment will take place at Amherst Island.—Whig.

There's not the slightest risk of losing your money when you buy a dollar Hy-o-nei outfit to cure catarrh, as T. B. Wallace will refund your money if the treatment fails.

JOHN CHRISTIE.

Toronto, Canada, December 9th, 1907.—John Christie, manufacturers' agent, with offices at 5 King street West, this city, died very suddenly on December 9th of heart failure while in Detroit on a business trip. Mr. Christie was fifty-one years of age, was born in Milton, Ontario, and resided in Toronto for the last twenty years. He was formerly connected with the Napanee Paper Company, but for a number of years had been a broker for pulp for large eastern Canadian mills. He traveled extensively and was well known to pulp and paper men in both the United States and Canada. A widow and four children survive.

ANNUAL MEETING OF RURAL SCHOOLS.

Annual meetings in rural schools are usually held on the last Wednesday of December, but as that day this year is Christmas, the meetings will convene on Thursday, 26th. The act reads: "A meeting of the ratepayers of every school section shall be held annually on the last Wednesday of December, or, if such Wednesday be a holiday, then on the next day following."

GAS REDUCED 50c. A THOUSAND.

Commencing Jan. 1st, 1908, the price of Gas will be as follows:

Gas used for Light—$2.00 a thousand feet gross. 25c discount on every thousand feet burnt, provided bill is paid on or before the 12th of the month in which bill is rendered.

Fuel Gas—$1.50 a thousand feet gross. 25c discount when bill is paid on or before the 12th of the month in which bill is rendered.

$2.65 when Light and Fuel Gas are burnt off the one meter.

It is the intention of the management to reduce the Gas still further as soon as the number of consumers reaches three hundred. 49c

Thomas Nixon, Deseronto, sued the Grand Valley Lumber Company for $200 damages, lost in wages through the cancellation of a contract entered into with the Grand Valley Lumber Company. He won at Belleville court.

Arthur Jackson, who was sentenced to seven years imprisonment at Woodstock on a robbery charge, told Judge Finkle that he would have something to say to the whole community when he came out. For this he was called back and given an additional two years.

SAIL, HO! JACK LONDON.

It is probable that Jack London will achieve as wide a reputation as a yachter and journalist as he has as a novelist. Already he is well on his way around the world in the 74-foot boat Snark. The voyage promises to be romantic and perilous, for the crew of the little boat consists only of Jack London, his wife and a lone Japanese. Mr. London is seeing the strange places of the earth at the instance of the Woman's Home Companion, in which publication he will begin to appear in letters from the places and people written at the time on the spot.

Cough Caution

Never, positively never poison your lungs. If any cough or cold from a simple cold only—you should instantly heal, soothe, and ease the inflamed bronchial tubes. Don't blindly suppress it with a coughing poison. It's strange how many things will come a-hoot. For twenty years Dr. Shoop has undeniably warned people not to take cough mixtures or prescriptions containing Opium, Morphine or Chloroform. Don't make the mistake in the thought—I expect it's safe. You'll find these poisons are in your Cough Mixtures." Good! Very good! Hoping for the best is inconsistent. Mothers, should insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. No poison marks on Dr. Shoop's labels—and none in the medicine, else it must by law be on the label. And it's not only safe, but it is said to help those that know it best, a truly remarkable cough remedy. Use it unreservedly and confidently with your children. Insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. Compare carefully the wrapper package with others and note the difference. No poison marks there! You can always be on the safe side by demanding

GOT HIS HAIR BACK.

Was Perfectly Bald When He Started to Use Newbro's Herpicide.

Frederick Munnell, Maryland block, Butte, Montana, bought a bottle of Newbro's Herpicide, April 6, '99, and began to use it for entire baldness. The hair follicles in his scalp were not dead and in 120 days he had hair all over his head. On July 2 he writes, "and today my hair is as thick and luxuriant as any one could wish." Newbro's Herpicide works on an old principle and with a new discovery—destroy the cause and you remove the effect. Herpicide destroys the germ that causes dandruff, falling hair, and finally baldness, so that with the cause the effect cannot remain. Stops falling hair at once and new growth starts. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c. in stamps for sample to the Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.

The Conquest of Canaan

By BOOTH TARKINGTON,

Author of "Cherry," "Monsieur Beaucaire," Etc.

Copyright, 1905, by Harper Bros.

"If I'd lived as long as you," Mr. Arp repented unwiningly in a louder voice, "and had followed Satan's trail as long as you have and yet couldn't recognize it when I see it I'd git converted and vote 'Prohibitionist.'"

"I don't see it," interjected Uncle Joe Davey in his querulous voice. (He was the patriarch of them all.) "I can't find no cloven hoof prints in the snow."

"Ah! over it, sir!" cried the cynic. "All over it! Old Satan loves tricks like this. Here's a town that's just one squirmin' mass of lies and envy and vice and wickedness and corruption"—

"Hold on!" exclaimed Colonel Fillcroft. "That's a slander upon our hearths and our government. Why, when I was in the council"—

"It wasn't a bit worse [illegible]," Mr. Arp continued unreasonably. "Just look how the devil fools us. He drops down this here virgin sanctum on the Canaan and makes it look as good as you pretend you think it is—as good as the Sunday school room of a country church, though that"—he went off on a tangent venomously—"is generally only another whitted sepulcher, and the superintendent's mighty apt to have a bottle of whisky hid behind the organ and"—

"Look here, Eskew," said Jonas Tabor, "that's got nothin' to do with"—

"Why ain't it? Answer me!" cried Mr. Arp, continuing without pause. "Why ain't it? Can't you wait till I git through? You listen to me, and when I'm ready I'll listen to"—

"See here," began the colonel, making himself heard over three others, "I want to ask you"—

"No, sir!" Mr. Arp pounded the floor irascibly with his hickory stick. "You can't ask me anything. How can you tell that I'm not going to answer your question without your asking it till I've got through? You listen first. I say, here's a town of nearly 20,000 inhabitants, every last one of 'em—men, women and children—selfish, and cowardly and sinful if you could see their innermost natures; a town of the ugliest and worst built houses in the world and governed by a lot of saloon keepers, though I hope I'll never get down to where the ministers can run it. And the devil comes along and in a night—why, all you got to do is look at it! You'd think we needn't ever trouble to make it better. That's what the devil wants us to do—wants us to rest easy about it and palmin' up to look like a heaven of peace and purity and sanctified spirits. Snowfall like this would of'ntide Lot turn the angel out of doors and say that the old home was good enough for him. Gomorrah would of looked like a Puritan village, though I'll bet my last dollar that there was a lot, and a whole lot, that never been told about Puritan villages. A lot that"—

"What never was?" interrupted Mr. Peter Shilsbury, whose granddaughter had lately announced her discovery that the Bradburys were descended from Miles Standish. "What wasn't told about Puritan villages?"

"Can't you wait?" Mr. Arp's accents were those of pain. "Haven't I got any right to present my side of the case? Ain't we restrained enough to allow of a little speech here? How can we ever git anywhere in an argument like this unless we let one man talk at a time? How"—

"Go on with your statement," said Uncle Joe Davey impatiently.

Mr. Arp's grievance was increased. "Now, listen to you! How many more interruptions are comin'? I'll listen to the other side, but I've got to state mine first, haven't I? If I don't make my point clear, what's the use of the argument? Argumentation is only the companion of two sides of a question, and you have to see what the first side is before you can compare it with the other one, don't you? Are you all agreed to that?"

"Yes, yes," said the colonel. "Go ahead. We won't interrupt until you're through."

The "argument" grew heated. Half a dozen tidy quarrels arose. All the sages went at it fiercely except Roger Tabor, who stole quietly away. The aged men were enjoying themselves thoroughly, especially those who quarreled. Naturally the frail bark of the topic which had been launched and whirled about by too many side currents to remain long in sight and soon became derelict, while the intellectual dolphins dove and tumbled in the depths. At the end of twenty minutes Mr. Arp emerged upon the surface, and in his mouth was this:

"Tell me, why ain't the church—why ain't the church and the rest of the believers in a future life looked to for immortality at the other end of life too? If we're immortal we always have been. Then why don't they ever speculate on what we were before we were born? It's because they're too blame selfish; don't care a hoppedle about what was. All they want is to go on livin' forever."

Mr. Arp's voice had risen to an acrid triumphancy, when it suddenly faltered, relapsed to a murmur and then to a stricken silence as a tall, fat man of overpowering aspect threw open the outer door near by and crossed the lobby to the clerk's desk. As love fell upon the sages with this advent. They were hushed and after a movement in their chairs, with a strange effect of bundling, sat disconcerted and attentive, like schoolboys at the entrance of the master.

The personage had a big, fat, pink face and a heavily undershot jaw, what whitlieh beard he wore following his double chin somewhat after the manner displayed in the portraits of Henry VIII. His eyes, very bright under puffed upper lids, were intolerant and insultingly penetrating despite their small size. Their irritability held a kind of hotness, and yet the personage exuded frost, not of the weather, all about him. You could not imagine man or angel daring to greet this being genially—sooner throw a kiss to Mount Pilatus!

"Mr. Brown," he said, with ponderous hostility, in a bull bass to the clerk—the kind of voice which would have made an express train leave the track and go round the other way—"do you bear me?"

"Oh, yes, judge!" the clerk replied swiftly in tones as unlike those which he used for strangers transients as a collector's voice in his ladylove's is unlike that which he propels at delinquents.

"Do you see that snow?" asked the personage threateningly.

"Yes, judge." Mr. Brown essayed a placating smile. "Yes, indeed, Judge Pike."

"Has your employer, the manager of this hotel, seen that snow?" pursued the personage, with a gesture of unspeakable solemn menace.

"Yes, sir. I think so. Yes, sir."

"Do you think he fully understands that I am the proprietor of this building?"

"Certain, judge, cer"—

"You will inform him that I do not intend to be discommoded by his negligence as I pass to my offices. Tell him from me that unless he keeps the sidewalks in front of this hotel clear of snow I will cancel his lease. Then present condition is outrageous. Do you understand me? Outrageous! Do you hear?"

"Yes, judge, I do so," answered the clerk, hoarse with respect. "I'll see to it this minute, Judge Pike."

"You had better." The personage turned himself about and began a grim progress toward the door by which he had entered, his eyes fixing themselves angrily upon the conclave at the windows.

He nodded to the only man of substance among them, Jonas Tabor, and shut the door behind him with majestic insult. He was Canaan's millionaire.

Naturally Jonas Tabor was the first to speak. "Judge Pike's lookin' mighty well," he said admiringly.

"Yes, he is," responded Squire Buckalew, with deference; "mighty well."

"There's a party at the judge's tonight, ain't there, Mr. Bradbury? I b'lieve Mr. Pike's givin' for the young folks. Quite a doin's, I hear."

"There's nothing doin' while I'm ruining Canaan," Mr. Arp declared morosely—"these entertainments they have now-adays. Spend all the money on the orchestra—band from Indianapolis, chicken salad and darky waiters from Chicago"—

A decrepit hack or two, a couple of old fashioned surreys and a few "cutunders" drove by from the 10:45 train. Some of the newly arrived and their valises, the hotel omnibus depositing several commercial travelers at the door. A solitary figure came from the station on foot, and when it appeared within fair range of the window, Uncle Joe Davey, who had been hovered on the flanks of the combat, first removed his spectacles and wiped them, and though disturbing the vision they offered him, then, replacing them, scanned anew the approaching figure and offered a sentiment apt:

"My Lord A'mighty," he gasped, "what's this?"

"What's this?" Look there!"

They looked. A truce came involuntarily, and they sat in parolytic silence as the figure made its stately and sensational progress along Main street.

It was that of a tall gentleman, cheerfully, though somewhat with reserved, enduring his nineteenth winter. His long and slender face he wore smiling, beneath an accurately cut plaster of dark hair correcting his forehead, a fashion followed by many youths of that year. This perfect banq

FREE TO YOU AND EVERY SISTER SUFFERING FROM WOMEN'S AILMENTS.

I have found a simple, safe home cure, by means treatment with full instructions to any sufferer from female weakness, that has in fact, and would be glad to do it, and would be glad to tell you how to cure yourselves at home without the use of drugs, doctors, or expensive electric appliances. What we women know from experience, we know that many of our sex suffer unnecessarily, because they do not know a treatment is so safe and sure. Don't suffer another day from any form of female trouble, displacement or irregularity of the organs, Bearing Down Feelings, Nervousness, Creeping feeling up the spine, Melancholy, Hot flashes, Dizziness, Weakness, Kidney and bladder troubles where caused by weaknesses peculiar to our sex.

I want to send you a complete 10 days' treatment entirely free, so I can prove to you how you can cure yourself at home easily, quickly and surely. Simply send me your name and address and I will send you a 10 days' treatment entirely free, by return mail. It will cost you only 2 cents a week, or less than two cents a day. It will not interfere with your work or occupation, and a few days' use should convince you that you have found a cure for yourself, entirely free, in this newspaper, by return mail. I will also send you free of cost, my book—"WOMAN'S OWN MEDICAL ADVISER"—with explanatory illustrations showing why women suffer, and how they can easily cure themselves at home. Every woman should have it, and learn to think for herself. Then when the doctor says you must undergo an operation, you can decide for yourself. Thousands of women have cured themselves with my home remedy. It cures all, and is pleasant. To Mothers of Daughters, I will explain a simple home treatment which speedily and effectually cures Leucorrhœa, Irregularities and painful or Scanty Menstruation, which if neglected often leads to organic disease. Many cases of Nervousness and fainting can be relieved at once by using it. Don't suffer another day from any of these troubles, but write me to-day, and you will bless the day you read this. Write to-day, as you may not see this offer again. Address

For that Dandruff

There is one thing that will cure it—Ayer's Hair Vigor. It is a regular scalp-medicine. It quickly destroys the germs which cause this disease. The unhealthy scalp becomes healthy. The dandruff disappears, and is disappeared. A healthy scalp means a great deal to you—healthy hair, no dandruff, no pimples, no eruptions.

"The best kind of a testimonial—"Sold for over sixty years."

ROBBERS IN NAPANEE

NOT CONFINED TO COAL OIL DEALERS.

The leading storemen have agreed to Spend $5,000.00

if necessary to force us out of the town so they can restore former high prices. It would pay them if $5,000.00 would do it; but as about $12,000.00 was spent in 18 months in a similar unsuccessful attempt in Picton, $5,000.00 seems insignificant.

Though one of our competitors explains why he was not in the coal oil combine, we challenge them to explain why they have not reduced Sugar and Rolled Oats at about manufacturer's cost in car load lots, if it is not similar to the oil scandal, which after selling below cost presented to us a newly signed illegal combination agreement, which only lacked our signature to complete the raise in prices.

We don't wish to publish cost of groceries as we were forced to do on coal oil, but have not made a price that did not still leave us in the cash grocery a sufficient profit to continue such prices for generations, and still afford to meet some of our competitors' cost price bills.

All our prices are always right.

We continue to give 25 per cent. off Yeast, Soda, Blue, Butter Color, Diamond Dyes, Electric Bone Polish.

10 per cent. off all kinds and prices of Package Teas and package Breakfast Foods.

10 per cent. per week on all interest on $1.00 for one year equals $141.68.

5,000 FACTS ABOUT CANADA.

A new edition has already been called for of the booklet containing "5,000 Facts About Canada," complied by Frank Yeigh, of Toronto, and issued by the Canadian Facts Publishing Co. of that city at 25 cents per copy. Nearly 20,000 have been sold in the few weeks since its appearance, the demand therefor coming not only from every part of Canada and the United States, but the British Isles and Empire. The publication certainly measures up to its claim of being "worth its weight in Yukon gold or Cobalt silver," and a copy should be in the hands of every intelligent Canadian.

PALACE ROAD CHEESE FACTORY.

A meeting of the patrons of the Palace Road cheese factory, W. F. Gerow, proprietor, was held at the factory on the afternoon of December 18th. J. N. Unger was elected Chairman, and S. C. S. Meikle, Secretary. The offer of Mr. Gerow, to draw the milk, manufacture the cheese, pay the instructor on cheese and pay the secretary and treasurer, for two cents per pound of cheese, was accepted. It was held that the cheese on the board to the factory responsible holder, and that the season of the factory be kept at the Crown Bank. The officers elected were, W. F. Gerow, Salesman; W. N. Lott and S. C. S. Meikle, Auditors; M. N. Empey, Secty.-Treas.

DECEMBER BRIDE.

A pretty home wedding took place at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. James Vine, Gosport, on Wednesday evening, 11th Dec., when their eldest daughter, Dorothy Bernice, was united in the bonds of matrimony to Mr. Wm. J. VanDusen, son of Mr and Mrs. F. W. VanDusen, Napanee. The bride looked beautiful in a gown of white silk, carried a bouquet of white and pink carnations, and was given away by her brother, Mr. Wm. Vine, of Winnipeg, who came home for the marriage. The bride and groom were unattended. After the ceremony a bountiful supper was served, about seventy invited guests partaking. The couple were married under an arch of evergreens. The happy young couple left on the midnight train from Napanee for Toronto and other western points. A large number of beautiful and useful presents attested the popularity of the bride.

LENNOX LIBERALS.

Owing to the new floor in the town hall not being completed, the Liberal meeting on Wednesday afternoon was held in the Opera House. The hall was packed, and amongst the crowd were many Conservatives. Dr. Vrooman, President of the Liberal Association, was called to preside, and opened the meeting with a few remarks. Mr. J. A. Symington was asked to take the floor. The speakers were, Messrs. M. S. Madole, A. G. Mowat, leader of the Opposition, and Mr. Sam. Clark, M.P.P., Cobourg. Mr. Mowat is a vigorous, magnetic speaker, and carries his audience with him, no matter how fallacious his arguments may be. Mr. Clark also created much enthusiasm and ably defended the late Ross Government from his standpoint of view.

At the close of the meeting Mr. M. S. Madole was the unanimous choice of those present for their candidate at the next provincial election, which he accepted.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR.

Dear Sir.—Will you kindly give me a little space for a correction? At the public meeting of Dec. 6th I stated that the amount of taxes collected to December 6th on the 1907 roll was $21,300.43, and the amount collected in the 1906 roll after Jan. 1st, 1907, $25,765.86. I find that in getting the figures from the treasurer the items were transposed, and consequently $25,765.86 is the amount collected in 1907 roll to Dec. 5th. This amount is considerably in excess of the amount collected to that date in 1906. The total amount on the roll of 1907 is $30,287.48. Yours, T. W. SIMPSON.

Saturday, November 30th

SEWAGE REPORT.

December 6th, 1907.

To the Mayor and Council of the Town of Napanee.

Gentlemen,—I visited Napanee on the 18th November, for the purpose of examining the situation of the town and conferring with a Committee of the Council with a view to advising you with respect to drainage and disposal of sewage. I was driven over the town by your Committee and shown the plan of sewerage which you are carrying out, and I obtained information on various matters, affecting the sanitary condition of the Town, from members of the Council and other citizens.

The natural outlet for the sewage is the Napanee River, and I am given to understand, the Provincial Board of Health will consent to treatment in septic tanks, and permission to pump the sewage to flow into the river; this consent renders the disposal of the sewage simple and inexpensive both in first cost and operation in comparison to the usual requirements for inland towns.

The location of the tanks should be such, that sewage from all parts of the town can be conveniently conveyed to them by gravitation. The situation selected for the outfall of the main trunk sewer by the Engineer who planned the System, will, I believe, answer these conditions, and is therefore certain [illegible] bacteria, which thrive in the absence of air, work on the animal and vegetable solids in the sewage, liquifying and turning them into gasses and preventing to a large extent the formation of sludge. The gases escape, the effluent which results, has been deprived of at least fifty per cent. of the organic matter, and a small amount of sludge deposited is practically non-putrescible. The tanks should provide for twenty-four hours discharge of sewage. Napanee, when completely sewered, should not discharge more than fifty gallons of sewage per capita, or say 150,000 gallons per twenty-four hours. This estimate is based on the experience of the Town of Berlin, which discharged 422,000 gallons of sewage per day for the month of October. We may assume that for a number of years the total quantity of sewage will not exceed 75,000 gallons. I would therefore recommend two tanks of capacity of 37,500 gallons each; if built of concrete 50 feet long by 16 feet wide, depth 6½ feet, walls 16 in. at top, 24 in. at bottom, floor 8 in., and roof 4 in. thick, reinforced with steel, the cost would be $2,000 each. Under necessity demands, other units of the same size may be added to the Works.

The Sewerage System, as designed and of which some detached sewers have been constructed, is intended for the carriage of sewage only, and, if surface water is admitted, the sewers will be found too small. Provision of some sort should, in the future, be made for storm drainage. In a Town like Napanee it will not suffice to allow the Water to run in open ditches along the side of the street; just as soon as systematic improvement of the roadways begins, then the storm water must be carried under ground. These drains for storm water are not necessarily large or costly because they may be discharged in the natural watercourses as soon as an outlet is found, and may continue in an open channel till the river is reached.

It would appear that the present filthy state of the river is due more to factory wastes than to domestic sewage. These factories should not be allowed to discharge raw sewage into the river.

The absence of a System of Waterworks for the supply of water for domestic purposes, in my opinion, affects the health of the community at the present time more directly than the lack of sewerage. In a Town situated on the ground that Napanee has been, the soil becomes impregnated with filth from privy vaults, and it is probable that in the case of the majority of the wells is more or less contaminated to some extent. I am informed that none of the samples of water tested recently were free from pollution. In view of these facts it is not difficult to surmise the cause of the late outbreak of typhoid. Judging from the information I was able to gather in the limited time at my disposal, there is in the town a very good system of Waterworks for fire protection; the distribution of water mains is better than usual in places of this size, the source of water supply is from the river above the falls. While this source is not everything to be desired for domestic purposes, in the absence of any better water, I believe it could be made perfectly satisfactory by filtering. The cities of Chatham and St. Thomas obtain satisfactory water from the River Thames and Kettle River respectively, neither of which streams can be compared with the Napanee River with respect to purity.

I have not sufficient data to supply you with an estimate of cost for the proposed System of a Waterworks System, but I have no doubt that the existing system could be purchased and extended so as to supply potable water for such a sum that the revenue would render it a profitable investment. This revenue would increase with the extension of the Sewerage system.

With regard to the cost of the sewerage system, it is customary to provide from the General Fund, only the cost of the disposal works and such trunk sewers as is necessary to connect the system with the works. The different lateral sewers are constructed under the Local Improvement Act and the cost charged to the property abutting on the street, on the frontage plan.

Respectfully submitted,
WM. MAHLON DAVIS.

To discern and deal immediately with causes and overcome them, rather than to battle with effects after the disease has secured a lodgment, is the chief aim of the medical man, and Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup is the result of patient study along this particular line. At the first appearance of a cold the Syrup will be found a most efficient remedy, arresting development and speedily healing the affected parts, so that the ailment disappears.

WORSE THAN ONIONS

BAD BREATH FROM INDIGESTION CANNOT BE OVERCOME WITH PERFUMES.

All of us suffer from bad breath—sometimes our own, but oftener that of our friends.

Nine-tenths of this bad breath comes from some stomach trouble, and cannot be overcome by breath perfumes or any other palliative measure.

If you occasionally have a bad breath; if there is heart-burn, flatulence and acid gulpings of undigested food; if the stomach burns or smarts; if there is sleeplessness, nervousness, headache or any other of the many symptoms of indigestion, use Mi-o-na stomach tablets and get well.

Mi-o-na is not a mere digestive nor a physic, but a tonic remedy that strengthens the muscles of the stomach and digestive so that the flow of gastric juices is increased, and the food is digested naturally and does not stay in the stomach to ferment and poison the breath.

T. B. Wallace has seen so many cures made by Mi-o-na stomach tablets that they give a guarantee with every 50 cent box that the money will be refunded if the remedy fails to give satisfaction. He takes the whole risk, and a box of Mi-o-na will not cost you a penny unless it cures you.

At the trial of General Stoessel, General Kuroyatkin testified that if the Japs had made a vigorous assault on Port Arthur at the opening of the war, the fortress must have fallen.

Hepburn Bros. Picture, have purchased the str. Reliance from the Rathbun Company, which next season will be engaged in the coal carrying trade.

DESMOND.

There was no service here on Sunday last on account of the stormy weather. Miss Marion Stewart, Camden East, spent a few days visiting Miss Annie Bell and other friends.—Mr. L. E. Shaddick has been engaged to teach school here for the coming year.—A few of the neighbors enjoyed themselves at an oyster supper at Mr. Ed. Dowdle's, on Friday evening.—Miss Lena Halladay, The Maples, is spending a few weeks the guest of her sister, Mrs. R. Lewis, of Hinch.—Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Bell and Mrs. L. Switzer and Mr. Richard spent Friday evening at Mr. J. W. Bell's.—Mr. Albert Macdonald spent last week in Napanee, writing up for the exams. for renewal of certificate.—Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Hager at Mr. Percy Card's, on Friday evening.—Miss Marion Stewart and Miss Annie Bell and brother Fraser were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Levi Evans, on Thursday evening.—Mr. W. J. Hannah spent a few days visiting friends at Erinsville.—Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Lee, Yarker, spent a few days at Mr. Joshua Switzer's.—Mr. and Mrs. Alex. SAYS IT IS FACT.

T. B. WALLACE CONFIRMS GUARANTEE ON HYOMEI CURE FOR CATARRH.

The question having been raised as to whether or no T. B. Wallace will refund the money if a Hyomei outfit does not do all that is claimed for it in curing catarrh, he wants to state positively that this guarantee is an absolute fact. He wants to say this in the best proof that can be offered as to the curative powers of Hyomei in all catarrhal troubles.

You do not risk a cent in testing its healing virtues, T. B. Wallace takes all the risk.

If you have catarrh, try this wonderful medicated air of Hyomei. It does not drug or derange the stomach, but is breathed through a neat pocket inhaler that comes with every outfit, so that its medication reaches the most remote air cells in the nose, throat and lungs, where any catarrhal germs may be lurking. It quickly destroys them, heals and soothes the irritated mucous membrane and vitalizes the tissues so that catarrh is no longer possible. You can look on this as being given a truthful, honest talk, but the catarrh and that is good riddance.

The price of the complete outfit is but $1.00; nothing if it fails to cure. Get an outfit from T. B. Wallace to-day and begin its use at once.

A BUSY TEN DOLLAR BILL.

Mr. Brown keeps a boarding house. Around the table sat his wife, Mrs. Brown; the village milliner, Mrs. Jordan; a drummer, Mr. Jordan, a carpenter; and Mr. Hadley, a flour, feed and lumber merchant. Mr. Brown had a ten-dollar note out at his pocket and handed it to Mrs. Brown with the remark that there was that amount left toward the $20 he promised her. Mrs. Brown handed the bill to Mrs. Jordan, the milliner, saying: "That pays for my new bonnet." Mrs. Jordan drew in ten passed it to Mr. Jordan remarking it would pay for the carpenter work he had done for her. Mr. Jordan handed it to Mr. Hadley, requesting his receipted bill for flour, feed and lumber. Mr. Hadley gave the bill back to Mr. Brown, saying: "That pays $10 on my board." Mr. Brown again passed it to Mrs. Brown remarking that he had now paid her the $20 he had promised her. She in turn passed Mr. Black to settle her bread and pastry account. Mr. Black handed it to Mr. Hadley, asking credit for the remaining $1 would pay for the carpenter work he had done for her. Mr. Hadley passed it back to Mr. Brown requesting his receipted bill for flour, feed and lumber. Mr. Hadley gave the bill back to Mr. Brown, saying: "That pays $10 on my board." Mr. Brown again passed it to Mrs. Brown remarking that he had now paid her the $20 he had promised her. She in turn passed Mr. Black to settle her bread and pastry account. Mr. Black handed it to Mr. Hadley, asking credit for the remaining $1 would pay for the carpenter work he had done for her. Mr. Jordan handed it to Mr. Hadley,

MODERN METHODS.

HOW THEY HAVE IMPROVED A STANDARD REMEDY.

In the 17th Century a wave of excitement swept over England and France, when the medical profession discovered such wonderful curative elements in the cod's liver.

In the 18th Century cod liver oil was imported and used extensively by physicians in this country, but it was found to be adulterated to a great extent, and the useless fatty oil which enveloped the medicinal elements, a great hindrance to its medicinal value.

In 1855 a famous physician from the Hague went to Norway and after ten years of experiment and research produced a light brown oil from the cods' livers which was said to be more valuable than the pale yellow oil, but the taste and odor was so offensive that it frequently caused such nausea that it made it impossible.

The most valuable discovery, however, was later made by two eminent French chemists, who after years of research discovered an extractive and concentrating process, by which all of the medicinal, healing and body building elements of the cod's liver are separated from the useless nauseating oil, these recovered medicinal elements combined with peptonate-of-iron make the most powerful and valuable cod liver preparation which the world has ever known.

Vinol is so rich in the elements of life that it imparts vigor to all debilitated systems, and almost every case is excelled as a remedy for all pulmonary troubles.

Try Vinol on our guarantee to return your money if it fails to give satisfaction. T. B. Wallace, Druggist, Napanee, Ont.

THE HORSE HELPED HIM OUT.

I once got lost on a Manitoba prairie and eventually pulled out by trusting to the intelligence, or homing instinct, or whatever it may be, of the horse which drew the buckboard. I was chicken shooting, and had driven far into the trailless prairie, when I discovered that I was peculiar twilight in the far North which is very baffling.- A tenderfoot might have been quite alarmed, but really, when in reality every trifling prominence of a prairie country is distorted and indistinct. I pulled up in a sea of grass and thought it out. I was certain Winnipeg lay about west by south of where I was, but the horse evinced a decided tendency to veer off in the opposite direction. My friend in harness, and I say friend advisedly, proved to be a fine animal. He got his head and at once veered eastward, and his confident action hinted that he knew where he was drifting. After covering about three miles, he abruptly pulled up at a prairie house. I got out and in the dim light examined the harness, finding all right, for need be I could walk. I was difficult, the horse pounded straight ahead till I saw the gleam of electric lights in the long rows of which only Winnipeg could boast.

GIVE THIS TO YOURSELF.

Many who have long suffered from constipation and stomach troubles will obtain welcome relief by taking a prescription, the ingredients of which are as follows: Compound tincture of rhubarb, four drams; fluid extract of mandrake, two drams; hepariclin, one ounce; and enough good peppermint water to fill a four ounce bottle. Shake well and take a teaspoonful three times a day before meals and at bedtime, followed by a glass of water. These harmless vegetable ingredients have given excellent results in many cases, and are highly recommended by eminent physicians. They can be purchased at any drug store, and are well worth trying.

THE TEDDY BEARS' CHRISTMAS TREE

Crackers For Christmas.

By WALTON WILLIAMS.

THERE are several kinds of crackers, including whip crackers, but one of the most interesting is what may be termed the fireless cracker. This is usually somewhat in the shape of a firecracker, and it is loaded, though not with an explosive which requires fire to set it off. The cracker now under discussion is the long paper covered tube, with fringed ends, which we see frequently at dinners or evening parties, containing favors for the guests. You catch it by the ends and pull hard, and it opens with a pop. It crackes; hence the name cracker. The contents may be a grotesque cap for you to wear at dinner, a Japanese paper napkin for luncheon use, a silk handkerchief to carry home or a Christmas trinket. This kind of cracker is very popular.

In England there is one "crackery" which manufactures and markets 17,000,000 crackers every year. Nearly all the workers employed are girls. One set of girls attends to the making of the cracker proper, while other sets make the fringes, print the labels and pictures and stuff the contents inside. Still others paste the labels and the great variety of pictures on the outside of the crackers. A "crackery" getting ready for the Christmas demand is a hive of industry. The one mentioned employs about 700 girls, whose deft fingers collectively turn out thousands of crackes a day. Special machines are used for making the fringes, printing the pictures and cutting out the caps, masks and other surprises which the crackers contain.

Crackers furnish great fun at a social entertainment. There is always the agreeable anticipation of cracking open the hidden mystery and finding out what it may be. As in firecrackers, there is a great diversity of sizes and styles in the fireless cracker. Occasionally one is made as large as one of the cracker girls, and it requires the strength of two men pulling each at one end to crack it. The pop in this cracker, of course, is correspondingly loud. But the giant fireless cracker is merely a freak, like the gigantic cigar that is used for advertising purposes, but never smoked, being so big that it would require the puffing powers of several moderate smokers combined.

PASTING ON THE PICTURES.

The Boxer Boxed.

HER name was Mary Boutwell. She came from old Puritan stock on her father's side and from a colonial Virginian family on her mother's. She had the tall and forceful figure of her New England forbears added to the tender grace of the southern woman, and with these she had the beauty of sweet brown eyes, waving brown hair and such a color and complexion that they might be called fairy gifts; also she had visions of a career.

She was not left unsought. An anxious line of admirers filed through the wide gates of the old plantation home and walked up between the box hedges to the wide veranda, where Mary genially sat with her maiden aunt, the latter making wonderful devices in tatting, and Mary, with her easel before her, perfunctorily making sketches which she rarely finished, but which her aunt religiously preserved.

The Boutwell plantation had been a large one before the war, but under the inefficient care of the aunt had dwindled steadily. Miss Boutwell had unlimited power as guardian to buy, sell, mortgage or borrow and lend. The first warning of the final calamity came along late in the fall and was in the shape of a threatened foreclosure of the mortgage on the last of the once vast possessions—the big and almost empty house. Mary had spent money lavishly in college and gave and lent as her generous aunt had done in ignorance of the real state of things. On the 1st of January this money must be paid. The aunt had been notified, but let the matter drag, as she felt that something would turn up to save their home. Mary was trying to understand the situation, but in vain.

And the young men came a-wooing.

They were all made welcome by the romantic aunt and all invited to dinner or supper, with the old open handed liberality, but Mary showed no favor to any one. But that is not saying that she did not think often of Bert Allen. She could appreciate his character. She had just come from college, where much stress was laid upon mental attainment, and she wondered how it was that a young man only a clerk in a lawyer's office could have learned so much. She knew that he had lived all his life here, that his parents had died poor after the devastating war, that he had had a bitter struggle, but she could not understand how he had learned so much that the other young men were totally ignorant of—art, for instance, art from its first inception to the present day, in all its branches and ramifications.

What she did not take into account was that Bert had known her from infancy and that for her sake and to be able to properly appreciate her career he gave every moment he could spare to the study of all that books could teach him and that when he had business north he fairly haunted the art galleries and picture stores and studios. His heart sank as the conviction was forced upon him that it would be many years before Mary could hope for success, if ever, for somehow he began to see that, while she had undoubtable talent, she was not a genius, and he knew that she had not the power or steady and continuous work, which sometimes almost equals real genius. And he felt, too, that he could plan a career for Mary that would be far more satisfying to her than the painting of mediocre pictures, but he dared not give voice to his thought.

The autumn passed, while Bert tried to invent to find some way to further his own cause with Mary and to save her home. The week before Christmas had come before he could do more than sigh over the hopelessness of it all.

Mary had determined to have a Christmas such as she had seen in the college and at the homes of her schoolmates—a big tree and presents for all.

Bert rode out every day as soon as his duties were done to help Mary in the decoration of her tree, and they all anticipated much pleasure. After the children had gone home with their presents the young folks were to have games and a supper and a good old fashioned Virginia reel.

MARY READ THE LETTER.

Christmas fell on Saturday this year. Bert had expected to be there every evening during the week to help, but Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday passed without a word from him, nor did he come.

At first Mary was surprised, then hurt, then indignant. He should have sent her word at least if he had not intended to come, and she went about with a heightened color, but with a heavier heart than the occasion warranted or she realized. The skies were dark and the house gloomy, and she was growing very tired of the whole thing since Bert had not come to help. He was so capable and so cheery! Well, she had lived twenty years without him and doubtless would not die if he did not come at all.

The reason of Bert's apparent defection was that Mr. Burnside, his employer, was dangerously ill. He was alone in the world, having no relative living, and it became Bert's duty to remain with him and take care of him, for Mr. Burnside could not bear Bert to leave him. Bert had written to Mary, and, with the strange generosity which strikes any man when it regards the woman he loves, Bert gave an old negro a dollar to take the letter. The dollar and a saloon proved too much for the old man, and the next morning he was carried to the calaboose, while the letter lay a soaked scrap of paper in the mud.

Mary loved dogs. Bert knew this and had intended to give her a superb St. Bernard dog as her Christmas gift. This noble creature was in a small neighboring place to which there was no railroad, and Bert had had his friend make a large box in which to bring him to Mary's home. The box was large and really quite handsome and was provided with air holes. The splendid dog would be taken in it to the plantation and set on the veranda in daylight, or, at least, that was Bert's plan. A letter was written and inclosed in a strong envelope, which was also to contain the key to the padlock, and in Bert's pockets were tacks and a hammer to fasten it on the top of the box.

Friday afternoon Mr. Burnside passed away in the arms of his young clerk. The old man had sincerely loved Bert, and Bert loved him, though still somewhat in awe of him. Bert was truly grieved, but "men must work," so Bert hastily gave the necessary orders for the funeral Sunday, and then he rushed to his friend to see about shipping the dog so that it should reach Mary's home at the precise time.

When Bert reached the little town he went to the express office and by unusual offers managed to persuade them that the dog be delivered as he wished.

"TAKE ME INSTEAD OF HIM."

though they would have to ride nearly all night. But there was a moon. They were to follow as soon as they could hitch up.

But when Bert reached his friend he found him in bed, so he would have to get the dog ready for shipment himself. He went to the stable and found the box. It was large and roomy and had soft hay on the bottom. But Prince Roland was as big as a man, and Bert began to wonder if this box would be large enough for so enormous a dog to turn in. He tacked the letter containing the key to the self locking padlock on the top, and then he thought he would get in himself and see if it was large enough. He found it quite roomy enough, and the warmth was agreeable. He lay down and curled around in a comfortable position, while wondering what Mary would say to the dog and fell sound asleep. He was worn out with three nights of watching, and he slept so soundly that he knew nothing of what took place after.

What did happen was this: The man came for the dog, found the big box with the padlock on, snapped that shut as they saw what in the semidarkness they thought was the dog and loaded it in the wagon. The weight and subdued snoring made them feel sure the big animal was asleep inside.

Mary and her household were all astir, as this was Christmas morning, and there was much to do. Through the dim light of the early dawn they saw two men tugging an immense box to lift it carefully out.

Mary sent two other men to help, and the strange looking box was brought to the veranda. She wondered what it could be.

The expressman took his receipt book to Mary, who mechanically signed it while she looked at the awkward box askance.

"I reckon it's a dawg," said one of the men. The other then pried off the tacks that held the letter and handed it to Mary, saying:

"If you'll take out that there key we'll take him out."

The men both had a faint fear that the dog was dead, as he had made no sound, though coming over the rough road they had traveled and with their ears handled as they were they could not have heard it had he barked. Mary gave them the key and read the letter. It was:

Dear Miss Mary—I beg you to accept the one you will find in this box as your Christmas gift. He will love and protect you and be devoted to you alone as long as he lives, asking but a little of your priceless love in return. Wishing you a merry Christmas. BERT ALLEN.

Somehow her heart grew lighter, her cheeks grew red and her eyes sparkled. So he had not forgotten her.

"We will take him out for you," said one of the men again.

"Go and get a big piece of meat and a basin of water, Billy, and then we will open the box. He will be strange at first," said Mary, while her aunt looked afraid.

"Oh, I know the dawg. He's a fine animal," said the first expressman. "He's as gentle as a kitten, and he's young, but as big as a man."

By this time the water and meat had come, and the expressmen opened the box, but to their surprise they found a man in it. He made no reply to their questions. They finally got him out, and then he proved to be Bert Allen, limp, pale and scarcely able to stand.

He tried to collect his senses and understand how he came to be here on Mary's veranda. At last he saw and recognized the letter in Mary's hand and stammered:

"Miss Mary, I don't know how it has happened that I am here in the place of Prince Roland, but if you read the letter over and take me instead of him for your Christmas gift—"

"It is too cold out here, Mary, bring him into the sitting room by the fire, and I'll tell Dinah to hurry the breakfast. And you, men, come out and have some hot coffee." This from the aunt, who was quick enough to see that the best thing to do was to give the young people a chance to talk it over.

The upshot of it all was that Bert stayed and helped with the tree and also that there was a wedding in May, when Mary deliberately abandoned her career and settled down for life as a happy wife and mother. Bert inherited a comfortable fortune from Mr. Burnside, and so with "neither poverty nor great riches" they were very happy. Mary keeps in the garret the big box where once the boxer was boxed.

A Christmas Story

CHRISTMAS CAROLS.

The First One Was Sung Nearly Two Thousand Years Ago.

The first Christmas carol was sung to the startled shepherds of Judnea nearly 2,000 years ago. It voiced the praises of the Newly Born, and it rang out on the frosty air:

"Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men."

This is sung today by all Christendom to celebrate the birth of the Christ. The first carol has been repeated yearly by all mankind.

Many have been the meanings given to the word "carol," but the simplest comes from the Latin derivation "caralare," which literally translated means "to sing songs of joy."

Christmas is the first joyous festival of the Christian church, and carols are the songs of joy sung at this festival. And, though the word carol is used for the Easter hymn and songs of other festivals, it rightfully belongs to the Christmas one alone.

The history of the carol in England, and even today well-nigh in England for the majority of our carols—has been varied from arelen to reign. In early days the Chapel Royal choir sang carols at court. There is a record of a Christmas kept by Henry VII. when the singers "sang a carol." Queen Elizabeth kept Christmas in right royal fashion "with the singing of carols and with dancing." Charles I. ordered the nobility and gentry to keep open house on Christmas day at the country seats and bade them sing "carols and joyous music." But Puritanism did away with "all observations of the five and twentieth day of December, commonly called Christmas day," and the Scotch parliament in 1583 decreed against the "singing of carols without or within kirks and all silk others superstitions and papistical rites."

During the last few years a marked change has been observed in the matter of Christmas carols in England and in our own country. The great number of writers of music in England are one and all writers of church music, and the carol has been one of their proudest compositions.

Carol writing has been successfully tried by Sullivan, Stainer, Barnby, Monks, Dykes, George William Warren, Gerrit Smith, John Hyatt Brewer, Homer N. Bartlett, Frederick Grant Gleason, Harry Rowe Shelley and others.

The Christmas carols of the 1,800 years have changed greatly. At one time they were only waassails, to be sung over the punch bowl of the dissolute kings, but the carol of today takes highest rank in music.—New York Telegram.

The Christmas Filler.

"Say, Jones," said the busy editor, who was making up a page of Christmas features and needed several small items to piece out the columns, "do you know of any good Christmas fillers?"

"I know of one excellent Christmas filler," promptly replied the ready man.

"Ah! What?"

"Turkey."

A Natural Mistake.

Crawford—Do you know what your wife bought for herself for Christmas?

Crabshaw—No; I saw it, but I could not make out whether it was a lamp shade or a picture hat.—Judge.

Xmas Xplained.

"Papa, why do some of the newspapers always spell it Xmas?" inquired Wistful Willie.

"Because, my son, it is so Xpensive."

Once Enough.

"Christmas comes but once a year."

"I'm glad of that," said pepper. "For two would break us up. I fear, since mommer's such a shopper."

SLEIGH BELLS.

A Christmas Sleigh Ride.

By FRANK H. SWEET.

Copyright, INC, by Frank H. Sweet.

HEY started from the old farm gate,
The happiest boys alive,
With Rob, the roan, and Rust, his mate,
And Uncle Jack to drive.
The snow was packed that Christmas time,
The moon was round and clear,
And when the bells began to chime

They all began to cheer.
Chime, chime, chime, chime—such a merry lead
Sleighing in the moonlight along the river road!

They passed the lonely cider mill
That's falling all apart.
The hermit heard them on the hill;
It warmed his frozen heart.
They cheered at every farmhouse gray,
With window panes aglow.
Within, the farmer's wife would say,
"Well, well, I want to know!"
Chime, chime, chime, chime—such a noisy load
Speeding by the homesteads along the river road!

"BOYS WILL BE BOYS."

The river shone as ivy sheet
As o'er the bridge they flew.
Then down the quiet village street
Their Christmas horns they blew.
The sober people's smiled and said,
"We'll have to give them leave—
Boys will be boys—to make a noise,
Because it's Christmas eve!"
Chime, chime, chime, chime—such a lively load
Scattering songs and laughter along the river road!

But now it's growing hard to keep Awake, and now it seems
The very bells have gone to sleep,
And jingle in their dreams.
The lane at last, the fields form gate
creaks,
And grandma cries: "It's Jack!
Why, what a pack of apple cheeks
These boys have brought us back!"
Chime, chime, chime, chime—such a hungry load,
Rosy from the Christmas ride along the river road!

"Not a bit," replied Eskew. "He went east to college last fall."

"Do they make the boys wear them clothes?" persisted Bradbury. "Is it some kind of uniform?"

"I don't care what it is!" said Jonas Tabor, "if I was Henry Louden I wouldn't let him wear 'em around here."

"Oh, you wouldn't, wouldn't you, Jonas?" Mr. Arp employed the accents of sarcasm. "I'd like to see Henry Louden try to interfere with Gene Bantry. Fanny 'd lock the old fool up in the cellar."

The lofty vision lurched out of view. "I reckon," said the colonel, leaning forward to see the last of it—"I reckon

It was that of a tall gentleman enduring his nineteenth winter.

Henry Louden's about the saddest case of abused stepfather I ever saw."

"It's his own fault," said Mr. Arp—"twice not havin' sense enough not to marry. Him with a son of his own too!"

"Yes," assented the colonel, "marryin' a widow with a son of her own, and that widow Fanny!"

"Wasn't it just the same with her first husband, Bantry?" Mr. Davey asked, not for information, as he immediately answered himself. "You bet it was! Didn't she always rule the roost? Yes, she did. She made a god of Gene from the day he was born, Bantry's house was run for him, like Louden's is now."

"And look," exclaimed Mr. Arp, with satisfaction, "at the way he's turned out!"

"He ain't turned out at all yet. He's too young," said Bradbury. "Besides, clothes don't make the man."

"Wasn't he smokin' a cigarette?" cried Eskew triumphantly. "That was final.

"It's a pity Henry Louden can't do something for his own son," said Mr. Bradbury. "Why don't he send him away to college?"

"Fanny won't let him," chuckled Mr. Arp mischievously. "Takes all their spare change to keep Gene there in style. I don't blame her. Gene certainly sets the fool, but that Joe Louden is the smartest boy I ever saw in an ornery world full."

"He always was kind of mischievous," admitted Buckelew. "I don't think he's mean, though, and it does seem kind of not just right that Joe's father's money Bantry didn't leave anything to speak of—has to go to keepin' Gene on the fat of the land, with Joe gettin' up at half past 4 to carry papers, and him goin' on nineteen years old."

"It's all he's fit for!" exclaimed Eskew. "He's low down, I tell ye. Ain't it only last week Judge Pike caught him shootin' craps with Pike's nigger driver and some other nigger hired men in the alley back of Pike's barn."

"You ever hear that boy Joe talk politics?" asked Uncle Joe Davey, crossing a cough with a chuckle. "He hasn't so full of notions for running this town, and state, too, it's a wonder it don't bust. Henry Louden told me he's see Joe set around and study the hour how to save $3,000,000 for the state in two years."

"And the best he can do for himself," added Eskew, "is deliverin' the Daily Tocsin on a second hand Star bicycle and gamblin' with niggers and riffraff! Noue of the nice young folks invite him to their doin's any more."

"That don't bother he's got so shabby he's quit goin' with 'em," said Buckelew.

"No, it isn't," snapped Mr. Arp. "It's because he's so low down. He's no more in a town outcast. There ain't any one of the girls 'd have a thing to do with him, except that rip-ratin' tomboy next door to Louden's, and the others case I have much to do with her neither, I can tell ye. That Arie Tabor—"

Colonel Fitzcroft caught him surreptitiously by the arm. "Sh, Eskew!" he whispered. "Look out what you're sayin'."

"You needn't mind me," Jonas Tabor spoke up crisply. "I washed my hands of all responsibility for Roger's branch of the family long ago. Never was one of 'em had the energy or brains to make a decent livin', beginning with Roger—not one worth his salt. I set Roger's son up in business, and all the return he ever made me was to go into bankruptcy and take to drink, till he died a sot. Xhe his wife did of shame. I done all I could when I handed him over my store, and I don't expect to hit a finger for 'em again. Ariel Tabor's my grandniece, but she didn't set like it, and you can say any thing you like about her for what I care. The last time I spoke to her was a year and a half ago, and I don't reckon I'll ever trouble to again."

"How was that, Jonas?" quickly inquired Mr. Davey, who, being the eldest of the party, was the most curious. "What-happened?"

"She was out in the street, up on that high bicycle of Joe Louden's. He was teachin' her to ride, an' she was sittin' on it like a man does. I stopped and told her she wasn't respectable. Sixteen years old, goin' on seventeen!"

"What did she say?"

"Laughed!" said Jonas, his voice becoming louder as the recital of his wrongs renewed their sting in his soul. "Laughed!"

"What did you do?"

"I went up to her and told her she wasn't a decent girl and shook the wheel." Mr. Tabor illustrated by seizing the lapels of Joe Davey and shaking him. "I told her if her grandfather had any spunk she'd git an old fashioned hidin' for behavin' that way. And I shook the wheel again." Here Mr. Tabor, forgetting in the wrath incited by the recollection that he had not to do with an inanimate object, swung the gasping and helpless Mr. Davey rapidly back and forth in his chair. "I took it good and hard!"

"What did she do then?" asked Peter Bradbury.

"Fell on me," replied Jonas violently. "On purpose!"

"It wish she'd killed ye," said Mr. Davey in a shaking voice as, released, he sank back in his chair.

"On purpose!" repeated Jonas. "And smashed a straw hat I hadn't had three months! All to pieces! So it couldn't be fixed!"

"And what then?" pursued Bradbury.

"She ran," replied Jonas bitterly—"ran! And Joe Louden—Joe Louden!—He pussed and gulped.

"What did he do?" Peter leaned forward in his chair eagerly.

The narrator of the outrage gulped again and opened and shut his mouth before responding.

"He let I didn't pay for a broken spoke on his wheel he'd have to sue me!"

CHAPTER II.

MAIN street, already muffled by the snow, added to its quietude a frozen hush where the wonder bearing youth pursued its course among its white, straight way. None was there in wilou impertinence overmastered assedoinness of wise years found the sight in time to jeer with effect. No "Trab's boy" gathered courage to extort in the thoroughfare a scene of mockery and of joy.

And now that expression he wore—the indulgent amusement of a man of the world—began to abate somewhat as he slow signs of chagrin. It became fluently grave, as of a high conventionality. Only, a cramped muscle, as he approached the Pike "mansion."

It was a big, smooth stone faced house, typical of the seventies, though it make an outrageously insistent manifest, capped by a cupola and starred out of long windows with curious and ornamental slates. Two vast iron dogs guarded death gray, twins of the same breed, stood on opposite sides of the front walk, their backs toward it and each other, their bodies in profile to the street, their heads bowed, however, so that they gazed upon the pavement, yet gazed without emotion. Two large oaks stood sentinel at the top of the steps leading to the front door. They also were twins and of the same interesting breed. Boards honored beyond the deer by cuts of black paint and shellac. It was to be remarked that these dark were of no distinguishable species or breed, yet they were unmistakably dogs. The dullest must have recognized them as such at a glance, which was perhaps natural. It was a hideous house, important looking, cold, yet harshly aggressive, and it sat in the middle of its field of snowy lawn like a rich, fat man engaged and sitting straight up in bed to sweat.

And yet there was one charming thing about this ugly house. Somewhere there were lettings of lace at the porch with keyey canvas, evidently for festal purposes. Looking out from between these strips of the curtains of the rosy and delicate face of a pretty girl, smiling upon Eugene Bantry as he passed. It was an enchantingly pretty face, all the youth and prettiness there for your very first glance, elaborately pretty, like the splendid profusion of hair about and above it, another colored hair, upon which so much time had been spent that a circle of large, round curls rose above the mass of it like golden bubbles tipping a coronet.

The girl's fingers were pressed thoughtfully against her chin as Eugene strode into view. Immediately her eyes widened and brightened. By swung along the fence with the handsomest appearance of unconsciousness until he reached a point opposite her. Then he turned his head as if haphazardly and met her eyes. At once she flung out her hand toward him, waving him a greeting, a gesture which as her fingers did been near her lips was a birthday kiss for him. He crooked an elbow and with a one, two, three military movement removed his small brimmed cap, extending it to full arm's length at the shoulder level, returned it to his head with the grand precision. This was also new to Canaan. He was letting Mamie Pike have it all at once.

The impression was as large as he could have desired. She remained at the opening in the canvas and watched him until he wrapped himself about round the next corner and disappeared into a cross street. As for Eugene, he was calm with a great calm and very red.

He had not covered a great distance, however, before his gravity was replaced by his former smiling look of the landed gentleman amused by the innocent pastimes of the peasants, though they was no one in sight except the wrens. Several times he took out a cigarette and put it back, but at last, when he had passed the house a second time and she, not perceiving him, retired indoors without knowing her best by far, he took a cigarette from his pocket, and, coming to the corner of the town, the perfect quiet of which made the sound he heard as he opened the pocket gate of a half ago, and I don't reckon I'll ever trouble to again."

"Eugene stopped, with the gate half open.

Out of the winter skeleton of a grape arbor at one side of the four square brick house a brown faced girl of seventeen precipitated herself through the air in the midst of a shower of torn cardboard which she threw before her, as she leaped. She lit upon her toes and headed for the gate at top speed, pursued by a pale young man whose thin arms strove spasmodically to reach her. Scattering snow behind them, hair flying, the pair sped on like two tattered branches before a high wind, for, as they came nearer each of whom, in the tensity of their flight, they took no note, it was to be seen that both were so shabbily dressed as to be almost ragged.

The girl ran beautifully, but a faster foot was behind her and, though she dodged and evaded like a creature of the woods, the reaching hand fell upon the loose sleeve of her frail blouse, and fell flightly. She gave a wrench of free sy. The antique fabric refused the strain, and it was the sleeve came away, but not to its owner's release, for she had been brought round by the jerk, so that, agile as she had shown herself, the pursuer threw an arm about her neck before she could twist away and held her.

There was a sharp struggle as short as it was brief. Neither of these extraordinary wrestlers spoke. They fought. Victory hung in the balance for perhaps four seconds. Then the girl was thrown heavily upon her back in such a turmoil of snow that she seemed to be the nucleus of a white comet. She struggled to get up, plying knee and elbow with a very anguish of determination, but her opponent held her, pinioned both her wrists with one hand and with the other rubbed great handfuls of snow into her face, sparing neither mouth nor eyes.

"You will!" he cried. "You will tear up my pictures! A dirty trick, and you got washed for it!"

Half suffocated, choking, gasping, she still fought on, squirming and kicking with such spirit that the people of them appeared to the beholder like figures of mist writhing in a fountain of snow.

More violence was to mar the peace of morning. Unexpectedly attacked from the rear, the conqueror was seized by the nape of the neck and one wrist and jerked to his feet, simultaneously receiving a succession of blows from his assailant. Interested by an entirely natural curiosity, he essayed to turn his head to see who this might be, but a rain of his former arm and the pressure of strong fingers under his ear constrained him to remain as he was. Therefore, abandoning the moment incognito, he resorted calmly to explanations.

"She tore up a picture of mine," he said, reasonably, "a picture which is not apparent emotion. "She seemed to think because she'd drawn it herself that it was worth a cent."

There was a slight whimsical drop at the corner of his mouth as he spoke, something which had been thought characteristic of him. He was an odd looking boy, not ill made, though very slim and not tall. His pallor was clear and even, as though constitutional; the features were delicate, almost childlike, but they were very slightly distorted, through nervous habit, to an expression at once wistful and humorous; one eyebrow was a shade higher than the other, one side of the mouth slightly drawn down; the eyelids twitched a little, habitually; the fine, blue eyes themselves were almost comically reproachful—the look of a puppy who thinks you would not have beaten him if you had known what was in his heart. All of this was in the quality of his voice, too, as he spoke, to his invisible captor, with an air of detachment from any personal feeling:

"What peculiar shoes you wear! I don't think I ever felt any so pointed before."

The rescuing knight took no thought of uttering a word. He encouraged damsel to arise; instead he tightened his grip upon the prisoner's neck unconsciously, and uttered not tears—started from the latter's eyes.

"You miserable little muff!" said the conqueror. "What the devil do you mean making this scene on our front lawn?"

"Hey, it's Eugene!" exclaimed the helpless one. "They didn't expect you till tonight. When did you get in?"

"Just in time to give you a lesson, my buck," replied Bantry grimly. "A good time for that, my playful stepbrother."

He began to twist the other's wrist, a treatment of bone and ligament in the application of which schoolboys and even freshmen are experts, but Eugene made the torture acute and was apparently enjoying the work with unbridled enthusiasm. Another order of warning, he received an astounding blow upon the left ear, which had been entirely indiscriminated one hand his hat flying and himself reeling, so great was the surprise and shock of it. It was not a slap, not an open handed push—nothing like it—but a fierce, well delivered blow from a clinched fist with the knuckles behind it, and it was the girl who had given it.

"Don't you dare to touch Joe!" she cried passionately. "Don't you lay a finger on him!"

Furious and red, he staggered round to look at her.

"You wretched little wildcat, what do you mean by that?" he broke out.

"Don't you touch Joe!" she panted. "Don't you!—" Her breath caught and there was a break in her voice as she faced him. She could not finish the repetition of that cry. "Don't you touch Joe!"

But there was no break in the spirit, that passion of protection which had kept her from uttering a sound as she flung herself upon the enemy. Eugene, however, was not to be silenced. Recovering his hat with a gesture picked up his stick and touched his temple once with it.

"Don't you dare to touch Joe!" she cried.

"Carry that into the house," he said indifferently to his stepbrother.

"Don't you do it!" said the girl hotly between her clenched teeth.

Eugene turned toward her, waving the sharp edge of a small, neatly moving his eyes from her face, he produced with deliberation a flat silver box from a pocket, took therefrom a cigarette, replaced the box, extracted a smaller silver box from another pocket, shook out of it a flame, inserted the cigarette—this is a splendid sentence, which he finally broke to say haughtily, but particular disdain:

"Ariel Tabor, go home!"

The girl's teeth stopped chattering, her lips remaining parted; she shook the hair out of her eyes and stared at him as if she did not understand, but Joe Louden, who had picked up the banjo case obediently, burst into cheerful laughter.

"That's it, Gene," he cried gayly. "That's the way to talk to her!"

"Shut up, you rascal," replied Eugene, not turning to him. "Do you think I'm trying to be amusing?"

"I don't know what you mean by 'slow it,'" Joe began, "but if"—

"I mean," interrupted the other, not relaxing his faintly smiling stare at the girl—"I mean that Ariel Tabor is to go home. Really we can't have this kind of thing occurring upon our front lawn!"

The flush upon her wet cheeks deepened and became dark. Even her arm grew redder as she gazed back at him. In his eyes was patent his complete realization of the figure she cut, of this bare arm, of the strewn hair, of the fallen stocking, of the ragged shoulder of her blouse, of her patched short skirt, of the whole disheveled little figure. He was the master of the house, and he was sending her home as ill he saved children are sent home by neighbors.

The immobile, amused superiority of this proprietor of silver boxes, this wearer of strange and brilliant garments, became slightly intensified as he pointed to the fallen sleeve, a rag of red and snow, lying near her feet.

"You might take that with you?" he said interrogatively.

Her gaze had not wavered in meeting his, but at this her eyelashes began to wink uncontrollably, her chin to tremble. She bent over the sleeve and picked it up before Joe Louden, who had started toward her, could do it for her. Then turning, he bend still bent so that her face was hidden from both of them, she ran out of the gate.

Ariel ran along the fence until she came to the next gate, which opened upon a walk leading to a shabby, meandering old house of one story, with a very long, low porch, once painted white, running the full length of the front. Ariel sprang upon the porch and disappeared within the house.

Joe stood looking after her, his eyelashes winking as had hers. "You ought'n to have treated her that way," he said huskily.

"Pick up that banjo case again and come on," commanded Mr. Bantry tartly.

"Where's the mater?"

Joe stared at him. "Where's what?"

"The mater!" was the frowning reply.

"Oh, yes, I know!" said Joe, looking at his stepbrother curiously. "I've seen her names are not supposed to be mentioned indiscriminately."

"It's only," said Joe, "that I wanted to say that there's a dance at their house tonight. I suppose you'll be going?"

"Certainly. Are you?"

Both knew that the question was needless, but Joe answered gently:

"Oh, no, of course not." He leaned over and fumbled with one foot as if to fasten a loose shoestring. "She wouldn't be very likely to ask me."

"Well, what about it?"

"Only that—that Arie Tabor's going."

"Indeed!" Eugene poised on the stairs, which he had begun to ascend. "Very interesting."

"I thought," continued Joe hopefully, straightening up and looking at him, "maybe you'd dance with her. I don't believe many will ask her—I'm afraid they won't—because—I've only seen her once, it would kind of make you sorry for her, because—The only times I've seen her she was crying, and I thought maybe you'd dance with her,

A WYOMING HOLD-UP

A CHRISTMAS STORY

BY ALICE LOUISE LEE

COPYRIGHT, 1906, BY ALICE LOUISE LEE

EVERYTHING had gone wrong with Kathryn Shellbourne since she started from Philadelphia on a wild goose chase after a Christmas dinner and a ranch dance at the Y-open-A, and when she arrived at Cody Christmas eve common sense had almost abdicated in favor of a disordered imagination.

The trains had belated her two days; a blue goggled easterner who occupied the section opposite hers across the aisle filled her ears with the dangers of cross country travel in Wyoming on account of the strife between the cattle and sheep men; then unfortunately she found the little town of Cody excited over a holdup in the bank that morning.

Therefore it was a fear smitten young woman who tremblingly signed the register at the Irma and asked for a room.

"Do you want it for the night or until the Meeteetse stage goes out?" inquired the clerk, surveying with satisfaction the fall, graceful figure clad in dark blue, fur trimmed broad-cloth.

Kathryn's eyes traveled slowly around the office from group to group of men excitedly discussing the affair of the morning. She had thought her cup of trouble quite full, but there was now a possible calamity which would run it over.

"Is the clerk she replied vaguely, "that's open?"

"We'll, which?" the clerk demanded.

Kathryn flushed. "Excuse me, yes, I'll take it for the night and then—if"—Across her blue eyes made a circuit of the room.

They were searching for a man large of limb and tall of stature, with scant iron gray hair and full beard, who was further distinguished by a triangular patch above his left eye. She had never seen him, but she had studied a photograph in her possession until she could not mistake the original, and the original was not there.

Her lips trembled as she followed the porter to her room. At the door she turned and pressed a bill into the man's hand. "Porter, is there a man in the hotel that has a scar over his left eye and not much hair?"

The porter, ignoring the ambiguity of the speech, opened his hand and looked correctly at its contents. Don't know, miss, but I'll find out." Then he hesitated. "Want me to give him this?" indicating the bill.

"Why, no!" ejaculated the girl in amazement, and the bill again changed hands.

The next instant she dropped into the only chair in the room and gazed at her pit given tip, halfway between laughter and tears. "Now, by this sign I know I'm outside the pale of civilization," she said aloud, "where porters won't take tips!"

Resolutely winking back a tear, she took from her suit case a letter and re-read parts of it. Mrs. Stetson, mistress of the Y-open-A, had written:

"There's nothing out here to fear, dear—nothing at all. Of course the sheep and cattle men are having a little fling, but that means no danger to you. Royal will meet you at the Irma with a carriage—I'll just slip his photo in so you'll recognize him. You know how wild I have been to have you meet him. He's a dear boy, Kate, but as sensitive and quick as a girl, and I think that already—well, of course, I've raved about you so much he's prepared to like you just a little.

"P. S.—If Royal shouldn't be there, take the stage to Meeteetse. It's perfectly safe, only a bit tiresome for a thirty mile ride, as it makes the trip at night. And at Meeteetse take the Kirwin stage, which will set you down at our door. But—"

She was interrupted by a tap on the door. It was the porter. "Say, miss, there's a man with a scar over his left eye and bald, but"—the messenger looked uneasy—"he's on the barroom floor all in."

"Oh," ejaculated Kathryn, "I knew that can't be the one I'm looking for. He probably has not come."

"But," began the porter hopefully, "there's a man in the parlor wantin' to see Miss Shellbourne. That's you, ain't it?"

Kathryn gasped. "Yes, but—porter—has he a scar"—

"Smooth mug and no scar," anticipated the porter, "and a heap of hair. Says tell you Mrs. Stetson's brother-in-law would like to see you."

The porter departed, leaving Kathryn quaking. "Says he's Mrs. Stetson's brother-in-law—with no scar!" Her head swam. She sounded danger and abduction in the region of the parlor, to which, inwardly confused, but outwardly composed, she descended.

Under the hanging lamp stood a man who bore no resemblance to the photograph. He was tall and muscular, but not stout. His face was smooth, dark and fearless, his eyes black and steady.

He came forward with his hand half outstretched, but it dropped heavily before the girl's manner—Kathryn had decided on her course. This was no ordinary villain. He must be dealt with warily. She would be brief and decided.

Therefore when the man stammered, "I'm Tex Boyd, Stetson," she inclined her head coldly and did not contradict.

But when he added in scarcely distinguishable words, "You you wish to start for the ranch tonight?" she announced with an air which cut like a whiplash, "I have decided to go tonight and by stage."

The blood flooded the man's face. He drew some six feet of brawn and bone up haughtily, while his eyes blazed in a way not good to see, but their fire was lost on Kathryn.

She had turned without another word and walked swiftly out of the parlor to the office. As she stopped in front of the desk there was a bright spot on either cheek. "I want to take the Meeteetse stage," she said to the clerk in a voice which suddenly shook.

He surveyed her from under locked brows. Truly, the ways of easterners were past fathoming out. "You'll have to get busy, ma'am, for it's out here now ready to start. Jim," he vouchsafed to a fur coated individual who at that moment swung the door at the end of the counter, "here's a lady to go in the stage."

Jim drew near, his breath revealing the kind of refreshment served beyond the swing door. He informed her with every evidence of confidence and good will that the Meeteetse stage was due to strike the trail in just ten minutes.

Followed by the porter, Kathryn again climbed the stairs. Her knees failed her, and a feeling of faintness assailed her. "It's the effect of the altitude," she told herself bravely, although a better explanation was found in the presence of the man leaning against the office door and following her with a pair of angry and perplexed eyes. "The villain!" she breathed and then stole another glance. He was certainly a handsome one.

She had resolved on a desperate move. Shutting her teeth firmly and resisting a desire to shut her eyes, she removed a small revolver from her suit case and slipped it tremblingly into the bosom of her dress. "If he follows me," she whispered and shivered. At intervals for a month she had practiced with that revolver, and, barring a constant fear of it, she felt proficient in its use since she had mastered the art of pulling the trigger.

"Pair night, ma'am, but cold," volunteered the stage driver as he tucked her mustedily away in the back seat of the stage and surrounded her with boxes and bags galore.

Kathryn's hand flew to her hat as the stage was jerked violently forward. A fleeting backward glance revealed a tall figure in a fur coat and hat standing beside one of the porch pillars, and the light streaming out of the office door fell on a smooth, dark face. The stranger was evidently equipped for traveling.

"Git out of here! Hi, there, Rambler, this ain't no time to rest! Fool, you keep your heels in place or you'll lose 'em some of these days. Git out of here!"

The horses "got out" on a run. Just as they passed the last shack and turned into the Meeteetse road Kathryn heard sounds of drunkard shouts and cries, hoarse laughter and the notes of a song. Then she was whirled out on the wild steppe and fled from the prairie.

"You will fall in love with the west," Belle had written in a burst of enthusiasm, and choose to remain with the rest of the freight in the end of the long, uncovered wagon, was far from feeling any tender friendship for the driver, who was accompanied by a bottle, alarmed her. The belief that she was being followed terrified her, while the limitless wastes through which they were moving made her heart ache with loneliness.

A sharp wind carried the dust in eddies around the wagon, leaving a long dirt alr trail behind them. The moon, bright and full, arose out of a dreary distance in the east and moved toward a dreary distance in the west. It shone on a wilderness of sagebrush, which Kathryn's vivid imagination peopled with belligerent sheep herders and bank robbers. On and on and on for hours Fool and Rambler carried the stage, disputing the right of way with each other at intervals unheeded by the nodding driver. Hour after hour the only sound of life was the monotonous clank of the trace chains and the dull thud of hoofs on the hard ground.

"I shall die," thought Kathryn, setting her teeth to prevent them from chattering. It seemed ages since she had left home and safety behind and projected herself into this land of terror and danger. Back in God's country it was Christmas eve, with cheer and comfort. The family were collected now in the library around the Christmas tree singing Christmas carols and distributing gifts. And here was she beset with evils on all sides. The threatened tears were checked by a sound on the back trail. She thought she saw a shapeless, shadowy thing moving in the moonlight.

They had been traveling through the bad lands of the basin, the sandy mesas and cañons, through which the wagon creaked and groaned like a thing of life. The driver was awake and making wavering attempts to guide the horses, which strenuously objected to making the almost perpendicular descents. They likewise objected to the equally perpendicular ascents.

"I shall certainly be killed," shivered Kathryn aloud as the stage trembled on the edge of a high mesa and then plunged down a sliding, dust deep decline into the Oregon cañon. Fool sat on her haunches and, slipping at Rambler's neck, slid down. Rambler, pawing, scrambling and kicking followed half a length behind in a cloud of dust, while the brake, gripping iron on iron, screamed an ear racking accompaniment. At the bottom of the gulch the horses stopped with such record as to dislodge Kathryn from her barricade of boxes and drop her against the front seat.

The next moment she stood on the ground, shaking with cold and terror.

"Hie—holding a bit," explained the driver affably. He pinned the reins between his knees and leisurely lit a cigar. "Better get in, ma'am," he politely suggested, "or you'll get left. These animals are good—ble—travelers, but a bit mustain. They're here yet, but the Lord only knows where they'll be in a minute. I don't."

"What—what will they do?" faltered Kathryn.

The driver threw the brake back. "I don't know, ma'am, can't say. That white un may—hic—kick over the traces, while roan lays down and rests awhile. Better git in while they're peaceful and you—hic—have the chance."

"Oh, what a shame to drive such horses!" cried Kathryn in despair. "I'm afraid to get in and I'm afraid not to. Oh, dear, what shall I do?"

"Well, in this country we do what—hic—we have to," was the consoling assurance. "And I'll warn you, ma'am, once it seems necess take it into their heads to hit the trail on the up—hic—I can't get 'em back after you until tomorrow. They've got the western spirit, ma'am," proudly, "the independence and go ahead."

The half tipsy John grinned and rested one foot on top of the dashboard. Kathryn glanced at the elevation from which they had come and saw something which at once decided her. There defined against the sky on the top of a mesa appeared two horses, a carriage with the top laid back and the erect figure of a man for outed and prairie.

"I'll get in" she cried hastily, stepping forward. The roan saw the movement and chose to be alarmed. The next instant there was a mad plunge through the coulee and a scramble up the other side.

The driver's voice floated back, loudly cheerful, "Wish you'd taken my advice sooner, ma'am." His words were lost in a cloud of dust and Kathryn stood alone in the midst of Big Horn basin listening to the rapid thud of the runaway horses' feet.

"Slowly, boys," she heard a deep voice say, and two Indian ponies slid down the incline and stopped before her.

Their driver sprang from the carriage and lifted his cap courteously, although his voice was decided. "It's fortunate I followed the stage directly, because behind us"—

"I shall not ride with you!" gasped Kathryn.

Far behind them arose a confusion of sounds, which caused the man to listen intently a moment. Then—

"You will kindly get into the buggy at once."

There was a note of brusque masterfulness in the tone, which caused Kathryn's anger to mount above her fear. With numb fingers she drew out her little gun and gripped it desperately in both hands.

"I can shoot you," she declared indignantly, fumbling for the trigger.

The next instant she stood empty handed, while her revolver disappeared somewhere inside the big fur coat. "You are probably unaware you were holding the butt end of that gun toward me!" its possessor remarked in a voice unmistakably choked with amusement. Then the amusement faded. "Pardon me, but this is no time for child's play," he added as the sounds back of them became louder.

THE NEXT INSTANT SHE STOOD EMPTY HANDED.

Dexterously and unexpectedly he picked Kathryn up, set her in the carriage and was beside her before she could utter a protest.

"I'm sorry, but there's no time to lose," he said, looking into her eyes with such apologetic brown ones that the girl's fear of him turned into an angry bewilderment.

As the ponies rose to the next mesa the sounds on the back trail resolved themselves into the shouts and laughter of many men. Never were the sounds of human voices more welcome to Kathryn. "I am going to appeal to those men for aid," she declared in a spirited voice. "They may be western gentlemen!"

Her abductor's face went red, and he made no reply for a moment. Then he said quietly: "That is according to what your ideas of gentlemanliness may be. They are drunken sheep herders on their way to Meeteetse, and it's my intention to give them a wide berth."

"Oh!" The spirit oozed out of Kathryn's voice. She glanced at the profile beside her, the strong mouth and firm chin. He certainly looked like a gentleman himself, she thought, but how could she explain his actions. Everything was unreal and contradictory in this awful western land, from porters that refused tips to attractive men who abducted defenseless women without appearing to enjoy the operation in the least.

In the silence which followed she began to realize how cold she was. The wind sucked through the gulches and drove over the hills, chilling her through and through. Her shivers aroused her companion, who gently drew the fur robe up, tucking it securely around her. Then, without apology or ceremony, he gathered her numb fingers into his left hand and warmed them.

His gentleness contrasted strangely with his late peremptory action; and added to the unreality of the situation. "It's all a dream," thought Kathryn, her head dropping drowsily. "Perhaps I'll wake and find he isn't a villain but a very"—

When she awoke she gazed about in bewilderment. The sun was painting the east in gorgeous colors, and at the right in a misty distance arose the peaks of the Shoshone mountains. Meeteetse lay behind them, and down at the left, near the road, Wood river chattered among its stones. Suddenly a dawning recollection brought the blood surging into her cheeks. She raised her hands to adjust her velvet toque, at the same time meeting a pair of dark eyes containing an expression which filled her with confusion as she glanced involuntarily at the fur clad shoulder against which she had been sleeping.

"I wish you a most delightful Christmas," her companion said quietly, his eyes on the ponies.

Her heart leaped in sudden hope. She tried to speak, but her lips were parched and stiff, and it was an instant before she could whisper, "Where—where am I going to spend it?"

Her abductor turned quickly and looked at her. There was a touch of anger and wonder in his voice. "I suppose here at the Y-open-A ranch."

She strained her eyes in silence down Wood river valley, where a collection of buildings appeared in the midst of a group of trees. The ponies turned sharply from the highway and stopped before a large gate. Their driver laid the reins in Kathryn's hands and sprang to the ground. Swinging back the gate, he said briefly, "This is the Y-open-A."

Down the field a pony galloped bearing a well known figure, and Kathryn sat stupid, scarcely believing the evidence of her own senses. Behind her sounded a shrill whistle, and at the signal the horses started, and she found herself driving alone to meet the mistress of the ranch.

"I couldn't wait, Kathryn," called Belle. "A merry Christmas to you, dear, and a happy time among us." Mrs. Stetson wheeled her horse, and the two clasped hands.

Kathryn could not speak, but Belle, chattering and laughing, did not notice.

The ponies stopped in the midst of a collection of low buildings, and Belle, dismounting, threw her pony's reins over his head and carried her friend into the house.

"Oh, you dear, you are nearly dead!" she cried, hustling about. "Come right out in the kitchen, and we'll put your feet into the oven and get you a hot drink. And, dear, I can't wait to ask it—how did you like Royal?"

"Where was he?" asked Kathryn, finding her voice for the first time. "Oh, I have had such a dreadful time!"

The outer door opened and a voice preceded the speaker, an anxious voice. "I say, Belle, what the devil alls Royal? He"—

The speaker came into sight, a corpulent man with a scar over his left eye.

"Dear, this is my husband!"—began Belle, but she got no further.

"Your husband!" Kathryn gasped. "That photograph, then, is of him."

Belle began to laugh, but her husband's face wore a troubled look, and he glanced uneasily out of the window.

"Oh, Kathryn," Belle exclaimed, "wasn't that a funny mistake! I never discovered it until this morning."

Kathryn arose tragically. "Funny!" she breathed. "Oh, Belle, how could you? It has made such a mess of things and frightened me nearly to death!"

A look of enlightenment passed over Mr. Stetson's face. "I wonder," he said hesitatingly, "if this has anything to do with Royal's actions. At present he's making the trail bot up Kirwin way."

"What?" cried Belle.

"Fact," admitted Stetson. "He strode down to the stable looking like a thunder cloud, flung a saddle on Get-up and, remarking incidentally that he was going to look at gold mines until Miss Shelbourne returned east, was off."

"Oh, dear, oh, dear!" cried Belle. She dropped into a chair and looked resentfully at Kathryn. "What have you done to Royal?"

"What haven't I done?" moaned Kathryn. "And all the while he was saving me from"— She clasped her hands together and turned imploringly to Stetson. "Please bring him back."

Stetson scratched his head doubtfully. "You don't know Royal. He'd not come for anything I could say!"

Kathryn glanced out of the window at Belle's saddled pony, and a sudden impulse occurred to her. A bright red spot burned on each cheek. "Which way is Kirwin?" she asked abruptly.

Stetson pointed. Kathryn pulled on her gloves as she crossed the room.

"Are you"—cried Belle breathlessly.

"I am," returned Kathryn quietly. "You recollect that I am a good horsewoman."

Five minutes later she was flying along a broken track on the road to the mountains, while Stetson scratched his head again and laughed. "That's west grit," he declared approvingly.

To Kathryn it was not a question of grit, but of justice. The man who had protected her against her will and in the face of her insults should spend Christmas with her at the Y-open-A ranch if she had power to bring him back. On and on flew her pony until she sighted a horseman ahead, riding at the easy gait which betokened a long distance to travel.

"Royal!" she cried, unconsciously using the name by which she had heard him called. "Royal, please wait."

He turned in the saddle, stopped his horse and slowly urged the animal across the road. His face was pale under its tan, and his eyes contained an expression of surprise as he watched the approaching girl.

"I came after you," she said abruptly, reining in her horse.

"Well?" His voice was still relentless, but not his eyes.

"It's all a miserable mistake," she began. "Belle sent the wrong photograph. I acted badly, I know; but, oh, I was so frightened! I believed"—a dusk swept over her face—"that you were running away with me."

Suddenly the ludicrous side appeared, and the sunshine broke out in every curve and dimple of her face. Her laughter rang infectiously, and Royal joined in it as he replied, "Oh, but I wanted to badly in spite of the fact that I might have been shot!"

Kathryn's eyes fell, but the dimples did not retreat. "Then will you come back now and not wait until Miss Shelbourne leaves east?"

There was a pause. Royal passed his hand over tired eyes and spoke in a low voice. "I'll go back if you wish it," and there was an emphasis on the "if" which increased the color in Kathryn's face. He ungloved his hand and held it out.

Quietly the girl laid hers within it and repeated steadily, "Yes, I wish it."

Christmas Cards.

The first Christmas card ever published was issued in 1846 by a London doner named Joseph Crandall. Crandall was indebted for his idea to Sir Henry Cole and employed the famous artist J. C. Horsley to make the design. It was lithographed by Jobbins of Warwick court and colored by hand. About 1,000 cards were sold. Such was the small beginning of what has grown to be a gigantic industry. Every Christmas after 1846 cards of some sort were put upon the market, but it was not until 1862 that they came into general favor. Then Goodall & Son of London began to publish cards inscribed simply "A Merry Christmas" and "A Happy New Year" and in illuminated form, and the following year robins, holly branches, embossed figures and landscapes were added. With the succeeding years the popularity of the holiday cards increased, and the cards grew more elaborate until they have attained their present gorgeousness.

Individuality In Gifts.

The personality of the giver expressed in the wrappings about the Christmas gift is valuable to the recipient of the offering. After all, it is the spirit of the giver rather than the gift itself which gives the greatest pleasure. The favorite ribbon, the slip of mistletoe, the color of the tissue paper covering, the card which bears the Christmas greeting, all express love and well-wishing.

COWBOYS' BOOTS.

Why the Plainsman Want High and Sharp Pointed Heels.

In Olathe, Kan., there is a factory which makes 200 pairs of cowboy boots each week. Each pair of these boots is made to order. The company has a catalogue, which it sends to the cattle ranches throughout the southwest. It tells the cowboys how to take measurements of their own feet. These are sent to the factory and the boots made and sent out.

A cowboy boot is in a distinct class by itself. The leg must be decorated with fancy lines and curves sewed into the leather, and, above everything else, the heel must be at least two inches high, must curve inward from the back, and the bottom of the heel must be very small.

A cowboy takes especial pride in two things—his hat and his boots. He often pays $50 for his hat, and the best of the cowboy boots cost from $8 to $16. The ordinary shoemaker cannot make boots to suit a true cowboy; he cannot get the heels right, and so the cowboy sends away for them and pays a big price and express charges besides.

The factory in Olathe employs fifty men. All of the work is done by hand, and some of the shoemakers were brought from Germany and England especially to work in that factory.

Cowboys say they have high and sharp pointed heels t- their boots not because of vanity and pride, but as a matter of convenience. The high heels prevent the boot from passing through the stirrups, and they are also a brace when on the ground roping an animal. As the steer pulls to get away the cowboy sinks his sharp heels into the sod, and this prevents him from slipping.—Kansas City Star.

How the Timber Goes.

An idea of the rapidity with which the timber is disappearing from some sections of Pennsylvania can be obtained from the following figures, which refer to the timber cutting on the Hicks run tract in Clearfield county: Original size of tract, 9,000 acres; timber cut the first two years, 3,000 acres; still standing, 6,000 acres; amount of timber cut, 50,000,000 feet; amount standing, 200,000,000 feet; daily capacity of sawmill, 200,000 feet; daily shipments, fifteen carloads; amount of timber in Hicks run yard, 6,000,000 feet; time of operation, two years; estimated time to cut standing timber, four years; number of men employed, 500 to 1,000.

Prophetic.

Achilleion, the beautiful palace built for the late Empress Elizabeth of Austria at Corfu, at a cost of $5,000,000, has been purchased by a German-German syndicate, which will convert it into a hotel and sanitarium. The palace, which is of pure white marble, was designed by the Italian architect S. Carito. It contains 128 rooms and a chapel, situated in fine grounds planted with 25,000 rare rose trees. In 1896, when the empress left her palace for the last time, it is said, she was burst into tears and said to one of the ladies of her suit, "Something in my heart tells me that I shall never return here again." She was murdered at Geneva soon after.

India Rubber Bait.

According to a Troy fisherman, the latest triumph of Yankee genius is an India rubber fish worm. It is said to be a remarkably good imitation of the common earth worm, is indestructible and in actual use proves as alluring to the fishes as the genuine article. The old fisherman will be quick to see its advantages. One can equip himself for a day's sport without digging over a whole garden in search for bait. A handful of India rubber worms will last him a whole season, and there will be no necessity for pulling up the line every few minutes to see if the small fry nibblers have left the hook bare.—St. Louis Republic.

"If I could have got to Paris for just one month."

had a bad name in the place of local while. It grew in the first place out of shabbiness and mischief, but it did grew, and if people keep on giving him a bad name the time will come when he'll live up to it. He's not any worse than I am, and I guess my own name isn't too good—for a girl. And yet, so far, there's nothing against him except his bad name."

"I'm afraid there is," said Roger. "It doesn't look very well for a young man of his age to be doing no better than delivering papers."

"If gives him time to study law," she answered quickly. "If he clerked all day in a store he couldn't."

"I didn't know he was studying now. I thought I'd heard that he was in a lawyer's office for a few weeks last year and was turned out for setting fire to it with a pipe."

"It was an accident," she interposed.

"But some pretty important papers were burned, and after that none of the other lawyers would have him."

"He's not in an office," she admitted. "I didn't mean that. But he studies a great deal. He goes to the courts all the time they're in session, and he's bought some books of his own."

"Well, perhaps," he assented, "but they say he gambles and drinks and that last week Judge Pike threatened to have him arrested for throwing dice with some negroes behind the Judge's stable."

"What of it? I'm about the only nice person in town that will have anything to do with him—and nobody except you thinks I'm very nice!"

"Ariel, Ariel!"

"I know all about his gambling with darkies," she continued excitedly, her voice rising, "and I know that he goes to saloons and that he's an intimate friend of half the riffraff in town. And I know the reason for it, too, because he's told me. He wants to know them, to understand them, and he says some day they'll make him a power, and help me to help them!"

The old man laughed helplessly. "But I won't let him bring you home, big Ariel."

She came to him slowly and laid her hands upon his shoulders. Grandfather and granddaughter were nearly of the same height, and she looked squarely into his eyes. "Then you mustn't say it is because you want to come for me, not because I mustn't come with Joe."

"But I think it is a little because you mustn't come with Joe," he answered, "especially from the Pikes'. Don't you see that it mightn't be well for Joe himself if the judge should happen to see him? I understand he warned the boy to keep away from the neighborhood entirely or he would have him locked up for dice throwing. The judge is a dry, unforgiving man, you know, and as determined in matters like that as he is reliable."

"I'm glad I've got it on that ground," she said replied, her eyes softening. "I think you'll have a voice for me yourself, I think."

"Very well," it on that ground," he returned, "and you here.

"Then it will send Joe word and get him to meet us. The other place is—"

It was the supper hour not only for the rich, but everywhere in Canaan, and the smell of red streets here and there down and around corners the smell of things frying. The dining room windows of all the houses threw bright patches on the grass of the side yards, the windows of other rooms, except those of the kitchens, were dark, for the rule of the place was Puritanical in thrift, as in all things, and the good housekeepers disputed every record of the meters with unhappy gas collectors.

There was a better hour to meet in town than Mrs. Louden, or a thriftier, but hers was one of the few houses in Canaan that evening which showed bright lights in the front rooms while the family were at supper. It was proof of the agitation caused by the arrival of Eugene that she forgot to turn out the gas in her parlor and in the chamber she entered a library on her way to the evening meal.

Joe escaped as soon as he could, though not before the recital of his latest sins had been set before Eugene in detail, in mass and in all of their depth, breadth and thickness. His father spoke but once after nodding heavily to confirm all points of Mrs. Louden's recital.

"You better see my influence you've got with your brother," he said to Eugene, "to make him come to time. I can't do anything with him. If he gets in trouble, he needn't come to me! I'll never help him again. I'm tired of it!"

Joe's movements throughout the earlier part of that evening are of uncertain report. It is known that he made a partial payment of 46 cents at a secondhand book store for a number of volumes, "Grindstaff on Torts" and some others, which he had negotiated on the installment system. It is also believed that he won 28 cents playing seven-up in the little room behind Louie Farbach's bar, but these things are of little import compared to the established fact that at 11 o'clock he was one of the ball guests at the Pike mansion. He took no active part in the festivities for not a dance of the dancers. His was, on the contrary, the role of a quiet observer. He lay stretched at full length upon the floor of the inclosed porch—one of the strips of canvas was later found to have been loosened—wedged between the outer railing and a row of palms in green tubs.

It was not to play eavesdropper that the uninvited Joe had come. He was not there to listen, and it is possible that had the curtains of other windows afforded him the chance to behold the dance he might not have risked the dangers of his present position. He had not the slightest interest in the whispered coquetries that he heard. He watched only to catch now and then over the shoulders of the dancers a fitful glimpse of a pretty head that flitted across the window or the amber hair of Mamie Pike. He shivered in the drafts, and the floor of the porch was cement, painful to elbow and knee, the space where he lay cramped and narrow, but the golden bubbles of her hair, the shimmer of her dainty pink dress and the fluffy wave of her lace scarf as she crossed and recrossed the window left him apparently in no discontent. He watched with parted lips, his pale cheeks reddening when the dancers' slippers were his. At last she came out to the veranda with Eugene and sat upon a little divan, so close to that daring wilding in the shadow, he reached out a trembling hand and let his fingers rest upon the end of her scarf, which had fallen from her shoulders and touched the floor. She sat with her back to him, as did Eugene.

"You have changed, I think, since last summer," he heard her say reflectively.

"For the worse, ma cherie?" Joe's expression might have been worth seeing when Eugene said "ma cherie," for it was known in the Louden household that Mr. Hastry had failed to pass his examination in the French language.

"No," she answered. "But you have seen so much and accomplished so much since then. You have become so polished and so"— She paused and then continued: "But perhaps I'd better not say it. You might be offended."

"No. I want you to say it." he returned confidently, and the confidence was fully justified, for she said:

"Well, then, I mean that you have become so, to speak, caught a man of the world. Now I've said it! You are offended, aren't you?"

"No! Of all; not at all," replied Mr. Hastry, preventing by a masterful effort his pleasure from showing in his face.

"Then I'm—glad," she whispered, and Joe saw his stepbrother touch her hand, but she rose quickly. "There's the music," she cried happily. "It's a waltz, and it's yours."

Joe heard her little high heels tapping gayly toward the window and followed by the heavier tread of Eugene, but he did not watch them go.

He lay on his back with the hand that had touched Mamie's scarf pressed across his closed eyes.

The music of the waltz was of the old fashioned swingingly sorrowful sort, and it would be hard to say how long it was after that before he could hear the air played without a recurrence of the bitterness of that moment. The sophisticated rudhes of rhythms was in such second with a faint sound of weeping which he heard near him presently that for a little while he believed this sound to be part of the music and part of himself. Then it became more distinct, and he raised himself on one elbow to look about.

Very close to him, sitting upon the divan in the shadow, was a girl wearing a dress of beautiful silk. She was crying softly, her face in her hands.

CHAPTER IV.

ARIEL had worked all the afternoon over her mother's wedding dress, and when her mother's wedding guests and two hours were required by her toilet for the dance. She curled her hair finely, burning it in a hot iron in a slate pencil bottled over a lamp chimney, and she placed above one ear three or four large artificial roses, taken from an old hat of her mother's, which she had found in a trunk in the storeroom. Possessing no slippers, she carefully blacked and polished her shoes, which had been clumsily resoled, and fastened into the strings of each small rosettes of red ribbon, after which she practiced swinging the train of her skirt until she was proud of her manipulation of it. She had no power, but found in her grandfather's room a lump of magnesia that he was in the habit of taking for heartburn and rubbed it over and over her brown face and hands. Then a lingering gaze into her small mirror gave her joy at last. She yearned so hard to see herself charming that she did see herself so. Admiration came, and she told herself that she was more attractive to look at than she had ever been in her life and that there was no sight in the night to be sought for like other girls.

It was in the Pike dressing room that the evening began to come. There was a big cheval glass at one end of the room, and she faced it when her turn came, and the mirror was popular—with a sinking spirit. There was the contrast, like a picture pasted and framed. The other girls all wore their hair after the fashion introduced in Canaan by Mamie Pike the week before on her return from a visit to Chicago. None of them had "crimped" and none had bedecked their tresses with artificial flowers. Her alterations of the wedding dress had not been successful; the skirt was too short in front and higher on one side than the other, showing too plainly the heavy soled shoes, which had lost their polish in the walk through the snow. The ribbon rosettes were fully revealed, and as she glanced at their reflection she heard the words. "Look at that train and those rosettes!" whispered behind her and saw in the mirror two pretty young women turn away with their handkerchiefs over their mouths and retreat hurriedly to an alcove. All the rest in the room except Ariel's were in dainty kid or satin slippers of the color of the dresses from which they alternated with Ariel's shoes and hers.

She went away from the mirror and pretended to be busy with a fan, that she might not be seen.

Ariel sat in one of the chairs against the wall and watched the dance with the smile of eager and bewildered interest. In Canaan no parents, no guardians, no one ever went to dances. The sights to dances the jealousies of youth. Ariel sat consequently alone. She was unfamiliar with her to do. It was not an easy matter.

Once or twice between the dances she saw Miss Pike's grandfather, who was one of the superheroes, glancing at the same time in her own direction, but Ariel could see that the old man's proved unsuccessful, until at last Mamie approached her leading Reuben Fliterott's partly by the hand, partly by his will power. Norbert was an exceedingly fat boy and at the present moment looked as patient as the labor. Then he asked Ariel if she was "engaged for the next dances" and, Mamie having fitted action to word, stood upon one side her waiting for the music to begin. Ariel was grateful for this.

The orchestra flourished into "La Paloma;" he put his arm mournfully about her waist, and her right hand with his left, carried her arm out to a right right angle, beginning to pump and balance time. The music came false starts and then got away. Ariel danced badly; she lapped and did not stop, but they persevered bumping against other couples continually.

She caught her partner making a burlesque face of suffering over her shoulder and, turning her head quickly, saw that Mamie had just reconstructed it. Eugene Bantry, flying expertly by with Mamie, was bestowing upon Mr. Fliterott a similarly commiserative wink. The next instant she tripped in her train and fell to the floor, at Eugene's feet, carrying her partner with her.

There was a bout of laughter. The poor hostess stopped Eugene, who would have gone on, and he had no choice but to stoop to Ariel's assistance.

"It seems to be a habit of mine," she said, laughing loudly.

She did not appear to see the hand he offered, but got to her feet without help and walked quickly away with Norbert, who proceeded to live up to the character he had given himself.

Perhaps we had better not try it again," she laughed.

"Well, I should think not," he returned, with the frankest gloom. With the air of conducting her home he took her to the chair against the wall whence he had brought her. There his responsibility for her ceased to cease. "Will you excuse me?" he asked, and there was no doubt that he felt that he had been given more than his share that evening, even though he was fat.

Ariel had eight more dances, intermissions, that same chair, in which, it began to seem, she was to live out the rest of her life. Now and then if she thought people were looking at her as they passed she tried to laugh and nod gaily, as if still amused over her mishap.

After a long time she rose and, laughing cheerfully to Mr. Flitcroft, who was standing in the doorway and regarding her with pity, stepped out quickly into the hall, where she almost ran into her greatuncle, Jonas Tabor. He was going toward the big front doors with John Pike, having just come out of the latter's library, down the hall.

Jonas was breathing heavily and was shockingly pale, though his eyes were very bright. He turned his back upon his granddaughter sharply and went out of the door. Ariel turned from him quite as abruptly and re-entered the room whence she had come. She laughed again to her fat friend as she passed him and, still laughing, went toward the final chair, when her eyes caught sight of Eugene Bantry and Mamie coming in through the window. She went to the window and looked out. The porch seemed deserted, and was faintly illuminated by a few Japanese lanterns. She sprang out, dropped upon the divan and, burying her face in her hands, cried heartbrokenly. Presently she felt something alive touch her foot, and, her breath catching with alarm, she started to rise. A thin hand, issuing from a shabby sleeve, had stolen out between two of the green tubs and was pressing upon one of her shoes.

"Sh!" said Joe. "Don't make a noise! What were you crying about?"

"Nothing," she said, the tears not ceasing to gather in her eyes.

"I want to know what it was," he insisted. "Didn't the fools ask you to dance? Well, what do you care about that for?"

"I don't," she answered; "I don't. Then suddenly, without being able to prevent it, she sobbed.

She gave way all at once to a gust of sorrow and bitterness. She bent far over and caught his hand and held it against her wet cheek. "Oh, Joe," she whispered brokenly, "I think we have such hard lives, you and I! It doesn't seem right while we're so young! Why can't we be like the others? Why can't we have some of the fun?"

He withdrew his hand with the embarrassment and shame he would have felt had she been a boy. "Get out!" he said feebly.

She did not seem to notice, but, still stooping, rested her elbows on her knees and her face in her hands. "I try so hard to have fun, to be like the rest, and it's always a mistake, always, always, always!" She reched herself slightly from side to side. "It was a fool, it's the truth, or I wouldn't have come tonight. I want to be attractive. I want to be in things. I want to laugh like they do."

"I'll tell you something!" Joe whispered, chuckling desperately. "Gene made me unpack his trunk, and I don't believe he's as great a man at college as he is here. I opened one of his books, and some one had written in it, 'Prigmaiso Bantry' in Class Try-to-Be!' He'd never noticed, and you ought to have heard him go on! You'd have just died, Ariel. I almost bust wide open. It was a mean trick in me, but I couldn't help showing it to him,"

Joe's object was obtained. She stopped crying that, wiping her eyes, she laughed. Then she leaned graver. "You're jealous of Eugene," she said.

He considered this for a moment, but it he answered thoughtfully: "I say. But I wouldn't think about it, anyway. Somebody or that personage and I wouldn't talk about him to any one but you."

"You must go away," she said anxiously. "Oh, please, Joe!"

"Not yet, I want"—

She coughed loudly. Eugene and Mamie Pike had come to the window, with the evident intention of occupying the seats; they were standing and engaged with threads in her sleeve, they turned away and disappeared.

They made three false starts and then got away.

Other couples looked out from time to time and, finding the solitary figure in possession, retreated abruptly to seek stairways and remote corners for the things they were impelled to say.

And so Ariel held the porch for three dances and three intermissions, occupying a great part of the time with entreaties that her obdurate and reckless companion should go. When for the fourth time the music sounded, her agitation had so increased that she was visibly trembling. "I can't stand it, Joe," she said, bending over him. "I don't know what would happen if they found you. You've got to go!"

"No; I haven't," he chuckled. "They haven't even distributed the supper yet."

"And you take all the chances," she said slowly, "just to see her pass that window a few times."

"What chances?"

"Of what the judge will do if any one sees you."

"Nothing, because if any one saw me I'd leave."

"Please go."

"Not till"—

"Sh!"

A colored waiter, smiling graciously, came out upon the porch bearing a tray of salad, hot oysters and coffee. Ariel shook her head.

"I don't want any," she murmured.

The waiter turned away in pity and was re-entering the window, when a passionate whisper fell upon his ear as well as upon Ariel's.

"Take it!"

"Ma'am?" said the waiter.

"I've changed my mind," she replied quickly. The waiter, his elation restored, gave of his viands with the superfluous bounty loved by his race when distributing the product of the wealthy.

When he had gone, "Give me everything that's hot," said Joe. "You can keep the salad."

"I couldn't eat it or anything else," she answered, thrusting the plate between the palms.

For a time there was silence. From within the house came the continuous babble of voices and laughter, the clink of cutlery on china. The young people spent a long time over their supper. By and by the waiter returned to the veranda, deposited a plate of colored ices upon Ariel's knees with a noble gesture and departed.

"No ice for me," said Joe.

"Won't you please go now?" she entreated.

"It wouldn't be good manners," he responded. "They might think I only came for supper."

"Head me back the things. The waiter might come for them any minute."

"Take them, then. You'll see that jealous hand ruined my appetite."

A bottle shaped figure appeared in the window, and she had no time to take the plate and cup which were being pushed through the palm leaves. She whispered a syllable of warning, and the dishes were hurriedly withdrawn as Norbert Fliteroft, wearing a solemn expression of injury, came out upon the veranda.

He halted suddenly. "What's that?" he asked, with suspicion.

"Nothing," answered Ariel sharply. "Where?"

"Behind those palms."

"Probably your own shadow," she laughed; "or it might have been a draft moving the leaves."

He did not seem satisfied, but stared hard at the spot where the dishes had disappeared, meantime edging back cautiously nearer the window.

"They want you," he said, after a pause. "Some one's come for you."

"Oh, is grandfather waiting?" She rose at the same time letting her handkerchief fall. She stooped to pick it up with her face away from Norbert and toward the palms, whispering tremulously, but with passionate urgency, "Please go!"

It isn't your grandfather that has come for you," said the fat one slowly. "It is old Eskew Arp. Something's happened."

She looked at him for a moment, beginning to tremble violently, her eyes growing wide with fright.

"Is my grandfather—is he sick?"

"You better go and see. Old Eskew's waiting in the hall. He'll tell you."

She was by him and through the window instantly. Norbert did not follow her, he remained for several moments looking earnestly at the palms; then he stepped through the window and peered into a youth was standing in the dancing across the room.

"There's somebody coming who is there, please," he whispered when his friend reached him. "Go and tell Judge Pike to come outside the porch. Don't tell anybody else, just the judge that he doesn't get away. Then tell him to get his revolver and come to me."

Meanwhile Ariel had found Mr. Arp waiting in the hall talking in a low voice to Eugene.

"Your grandfather's all right," he told the frightened girl quickly. "He sent me after you, that's all. Just hurry and get your things."

She was with him again in a moment and, seizing the old man's arm, hurried him down the steps and toward the street almost at a run.

"You're not telling me the truth," she said—"you're not telling me the truth!"

"Nothing has happened to Roger," panted Mr. Arp. "Nothing to mind, I mean. Here! We're going this way, next door! They had come to the gate, and as she turned to the right he pulled her round sharply to the left. "We're not going to your house."

"Where are we going?"

"We're going to your Uncle Jonas'."

"Why?" she cried in suspense and bewilderment. "What do you want to take me there for? Don't you know that he's stopped speaking to me?"

"Yes," said the old man grimly, with something of the look he wore when delivering a clincher at the National House; "he's stopped speaking to everybody."

CHAPTER V.

THE Canaan Daily Tocsin of the following morning "ventured the assertion" upon its front page that "the scene at the Pike mansion was one of unalloyed festivity, music and mirth; a fairy bower of airy figures wafting here and there to the throb of waits strains; a veritable temple of Terpsichore, shining forth with a myriad of lights, which, together with the generous profusion of floral decorations and the mingled delights afforded by Minds' orchestra of Indianapolis and Caterer Jones of Chicago, was in all likelihood never heretofore surpassed in elegance in our city. Only one incident," the Tocsin remarked, referred in otherwise perfect occasion, and out of regard for the culprit's family connections, who are prominent in our social world, we withhold his name. Suffice it to say that through the vigilance of Mr. Norbert Fliteroft, grandson of Colonel A. A. Fliteroft, who proved himself a thorough Lecoq (the celebrated French detective, the rascal was seized and recognized. Mr. Fliteroft, having discovered him in hiding, had a cordon of waiters drawn up around his hiding place, which was the charmingly decorated side pantas of the Pike mansion, and sent for Judge Pike, who came upon the instant by surprise. He evaded the judge's indignant grasp, but received a well merited blow over the head from a waiter within the light fantastic throng, about his person while pretending to approach the hiding place casually. Attracted by the scene by the cries of Mr. Fliteroft, who, standing behind Judge Pike, accidentally received a blow from the same weapon, all the guests of the evening sprang to view the scene, only to behold the culprit leap through a convenient screen, the stripe of canvas which inclosed the piazza. He was seized by the colored coachman of the Jones' garden, and immediately pounced upon by the cordon of Caterer Jones' dusky assistants from chicken pie alley, who patrols outside. Unfortunately after a brief struggle he managed to trip Warden and, the others stumbling upon the prostrate body of the latter, to make his escape in the darkness."

Not quite a mile above the northern most of the factories on the water front there projected into the river near the end, of the crescent bend above the town a long pier, relic of steamboat days, rotting now and many years fallen from its maritime uses. About midway of its length stood a large, crazy shed, long ago utilized as a freight storeroom. This had been patched and repaired into a dangerous looking veranda attached to it, overhanging the water. Above the doorway was placed a sign whereon might be read, in faded letters, "Beaver Beach Mike's Place." The shore end of the pier was so ruinous that passage was forbidden by a notice, and a gate, which presented no appearance so temporary as well as insecure that one might have supposed its office to be something in the nature of a drawbridge. From these a narrow path ran through a marsh left by the receding river to a country road of desolate appearance. Here there was a rough inclosure or corral, with some tumbledown sheds where cattle are offered on the night of Joseph Louden's disgrace for a number of shaggy teams attached to those decrepit and most vehicles known picturesquely and accurately as night hawks.

By 3 o'clock joy at Mike's place had become beyond question unconfined, and the tokens of it were audible for a long distance in all directions. If, however, there is any sound where no ear bears, silence rested upon the countryside until an hour later. Then a lonely figure came shivering from the direction of the town not by the road, but slinking through the snow upon the frozen river. It came slowly, as though very tired, and cautiously, too, often turning its head to look behind. Finally it reached the pier and stopped as if to listen.

LETTER OF CONDOLENCE.

At the last regular meeting of the Royal Black Preceptory, held at Centreville, on Dec. 18th, it was resolved that a letter of Condolence be drafted and forwarded to Sir Knight J. F. Diamond, in the recent loss of his beloved wife.

To Mr. J. F. Diamond.—

We, the officers and members of the Royal Black Knights of Ireland, assembled in session, wish to express our sincere sympathy for you in your recent sad bereavement. Dear brother, we are indeed truly sorry that such a blow should have happened to you, and as a warning to all of us, how very uncertain life is. May the Divine Ruler of the Universe who directs our destiny, and causes all things to work together for our good though we may not perceive it at the time, support and console you in this hour of sorrow, in the devout prayer of your brother Sir Knights.

Signed on behalf of the Royal Black Preceptory.

NEWBURGH.

The seating capacity of Finkle's Music Hall was quite inadequate to accommodate the crowd who turned out on Friday night last, to enjoy the entertainment given by the High School Literary Society, in connection with the Commencement exercises of the school. Every foot of space was occupied and many had to stand during the whole evening. The entertainment was worthy of the crowd, the students doing themselves much credit in a varied programme. Mr. T. A. Dunwoody, Chairman of the Board of Education, presided, and found it not always an easy task to perfectly control so large a crowd. A number of people are still pondering the answers to some of his conundrums propounded between numbers. The programme was introduced and as excellently rendered, although difficult piano duets by the two pianists of the Society, Misses Johnson and Scriver. Misses Beaman and Finkle similarly opened Part II of the programme later. The Glee Club of mixed voices rendered three choruses in admirable style, and the Boys' Glee Club fairly brought down the house in their two numbers, responding to an encore each time. Miss Marie Johnston and Miss Florence Wagar were the elocutionists of the evening, and pleased the audience immensely. There were vocal solos by Miss Aleta Scriver and Marcella Finn and Mr. Percy Nesbit, and all were deservedly well received. Miss Etta Lewis, one of the youngest pupils of the school, won rounds of applause for her violin solo rendered in a masterly manner for so young a musician. A recitation duett of violin and piano by Mr. Percy Nesbit and Miss Louise Beeman was thoroughly appreciated and enjoyed. The dramatic feature of the programme was the presentation of three scenes of Charles Mair's "Tecumseh", a performance that deserves specially favorable mention. Eleven of the Form III. pupils composed the cast and every one showed "to good advantage." Special mention may be made of the impersonations of the Prophet, brother of Tecumseh, by Mr. John Perry, who presented this role with a fire and vigor that could not well be surpassed by an admirable performance. Miss Olive Switzer, as Tecumseh's wife Manatee, and Miss Aleta Scriver, as Monetta, the wife of Roland Spafford, Clayton Kehoe, Arthur Hanes and Percy Williams. The costuming of the play was good. Mr. D. A. Nesbit, B.A., and Dr. M. I. Beeman, in brief and appropriate addresses, presented the successful pupils with the prizes won by the contestants at the Athletic games of the school. Much credit is due Miss Beaman who trained the Glee Clubs, and Miss Grace Scriver who had the scenes from Tecumseh in charge, and not a little praise is due Miss Scriver for her splendid accompaniments. A most successful and enjoyable entertainment closed with the National Anthem, after Mr. Dunwoody, the Principal of the school, had expressed the thanks and appreciation of the staff and Literary Society for the interest manifested by so large an audience.

On Friday morning last the pupils of the Public School assembled in the Master's last day as teacher in the school. Mr. Sherry and Miss Hall, the lady principal, with the pupils of the school, joined those of Miss Baker's room and after appropriate remarks by the principal, in appreciation of Miss Baker who has resigned her position, read an address from the pupils, and Miss Vincent Foster presented her with a beautiful gold bracelet, suitably engraved. Miss Baker made a suitable reply, expressing her thanks for so kindly a remembrance, and her good wishes for the success of her spector Nesbit then made a short address eulogy of commendation of the splendid work of Miss Baker for ten years in the school, and urging the pupils to follow the excellent example of fidelity and devotion to duty that had been given them. At the occasion both Mr. Sherry and Miss Baker addressed their pupils with Christmas remembrances, in the form of artistic calendars, and the latter suitable books.

On Thursday night of last week Miss Baker was tendered a surprise party, prior to a drive to Napanee. Miss Beaman is boarding the Christmas holidays in Hamilton.

On Friday night, after the High School Concert, a number of Newburgh young people joined a number from Napanee in a Finkle's Hall.

The soft weather of this week has again played havoc with the preparation of the skating rink, but the boys are persistent and colder weather will see the rink opened.

Christmas brings the students home, the following being among the number: Misses Ethel Cassidy, Augusta Hall, Toronto; Misses Mary Beeman and Eva Shewey, from the Normal School, Toronto; Miss Jessie Finkle, Kingston Ladies' College; Whitby; Harry Beaman, from Toronto University; Hubert Ryan, from Queen's University.

Deep sympathy is felt in the whole community with Mrs. Harrison, wife of Constable Chaney, in the death of that young lady in the hospital at Watertown on Tuesday last, following an operation as a ruptu-e-trashing. Miss Chaney was a most amiable young woman, and was very popular as a student at the High School here.

There are few homes in the country where four school teachers are welcomed home for the holiday season, but such is the pleasure, however, of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Wellwood, of Bath, who are giving four children to the teaching profession in the province. Miss Effie, at Marysville; Misses Frances and Annie, in Prince Edward County, and Mr. Geo. Wellwood Warner, in Peterboro'. Still another son, Morley, is teaching in the Northwest.

The members of the Epworth League will enjoy their annual drive on New Year's evening, when entertainment at Selby.

Quite a happy nuptial event of interest in Newburgh was celebrated on Christmas Eve, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. Curtis, when Miss M. Baker, one of Newburgh's most estimable young women, became the bride of a respected townsman, Mr. W. Curtis, Perth, brother-in-law of the groom. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Bennett, of Perth, brother-in-law of the groom, in the presence of relatives and many friends in this village, where they have for many years resided, and the happy couple received their congratulations and hearty good wishes.

Miss Potter spent Christmas with friends in Toronto, and Miss G. Files accompanied her home, and spent Christmas with her.

Miss Bessie Bleecker is visiting in Toronto, the guest of Mrs. Percy Nesbit.

Miss Ethel Bleecker has had a very exciting time while driving home along the Napanee road on Monday, her horse becoming unmanageable going through the gate-house, but was away without any damage done. Some distance further the horse ran into a telegraph pole, and Mrs. Dean, of Napanee reaching him, was forced to hold him until some of an hour in the freezing cold until assistance arrived. A couple of men passing in a rig relieved the lady of her charge, Dean proceeded only to meet her difficulties over the hill, Bleecker driving home safely, though shaken and dreaded.

Christmas visitors—Miss Vera Bleecker, Miss Nesbitt, Miss Ethel Cassidy, Selby Shorey, Peterboro; at his father's, Jas. Shorey; Mr. Hunt and Miss Hunt, Odessa, at J. M. Denyes'; Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Chant, Tamworth, at Rev. J. H. Chant's; Mr. E. W. Stickney and niece, of Lyndhurst, at his home here; Mr. Hunter, Loughborough, at his aunts', Mrs. Lochhead's; Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Lighthall, Mrs. Bonter, Toronto, their grandfather, Mr. J. Reno; Mr. Wilbert Lapum, Toronto, at his mother's; Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Lapum, Rev. and Mrs. Melvin Tucker, Napanee, at Mr. Spencer's; Mrs. Wm. Lapum, Napanee, at Mrs. John Shorey's; Mrs. Hooper and Mr. Palmer Hooper, Kingston, at Mrs. Soper's.

The Presbyterian Sunday School's annual at home was held in Finkle's Hall, on Christmas Eve. First there was the supper and refreshments, then the usual programme of songs, and recitations, and the distribution of the gifts from the Christmas tree each child received a present. Mr. and Mrs. Fox and Roy Sampson for instrumental music, each rendering a solo, and Miss Fox was also awarded a prize for attendance at the school every Sunday of the year.

At the meeting of the Board of Education on Tuesday night, Miss Elsie Boone was appointed as teacher of the junior room of the Public School, at a salary of $300 per year.

Mr. E. Gandier has purchased Mr. Thos. Wheeler's property adjoining Mr. Dunwoody's and will remove to it in the spring.

Wheeler's property adjoining Mr. Dunwoody's and will remove to it in the spring.

Miss Maude Hill of London, Ont., is visiting her friend Miss Bessie Bleecker.

The bye-elections last Monday resulted in the return of Dr. McLean as Conservative member, Major Logan, Liberal, and Mr. J. T. B. Caron in Ottawa, all Liberals.

MOSCOW.

Christmas was very quiet, but generally observed as a holiday.—A company of fifteen entertained farmers and a few others, known as the Moscow Mutual Telephone Co., have established a telephone line about eight miles in length in their circuit, and will place numbers on every first class long distance telephone on same which will be a great convenience to themselves as well as others, as they are to be connected by a switch on the line.

ODESSA.

What a beautiful day last Sunday was. Such a lot of driving done. Everybody and his wife were enjoying the day, but on Monday—whew! that was a soaker. Those who came from Napanee to attend Court thought it was, no doubt. - Judge Madden presided.

Lodge meetings were not a few this week, the Free Masons, Chosen Friends, and the loquacious M.W. Hardy was also here in the interests of the C. M. B. A.

Christmas was not all that could be desired in the way of temperature. Still everybody seems to enjoy themselves. A wedding took place on Wed. last from the village. Particulars later.

Mr. Charles Derber has purchased the residence owned by Mr. H. Lachlan, and we hear purposes moving it farther back on the lot and remodelling it. This will make quite an improvement in the street.

Dr. Baker's handsome residence may be more easily seen.

Miss Kennedy is home at Enterprise for the holidays.

Mrs. Geo. Benjamin, of Kingston, at Mrs. Lewis'.

Mr. Peter Hillier, we are sorry to say, is not improving.

WILTON.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at the residence of Wm. T. Hodge, on Wednesday, Dec. 18th, at 11 a.m., Rev. D. Williams officiating. The contracting parties were Miss Grace Pearl Hodge, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Hodge, and Mr. Robert Kingsdale Wallace, of Kingston, Ont. The bride was very charmingly attired in cream crepe de chine. Miss A. Melissa Hodge, sister of the bride, acted as bridesmaid, while Mr. John H. Peters supported the groom. After the ceremony the wedding party and guests sat down to a sumptuous repast. Shortly after, the bride and groom left amid showers of rice and the best wishes of their many friends for Kingston, where they will reside. The bride's going away gown was of navy blue cloth, with white and blue hat to match. The bride received a number of many beautiful and useful presents. The groom's gift to the bride was a beautiful gold watch and chain.—Miss Eva Fralick has successful in her model exams at Kingston, and has been engaged to teach the Brewers' Mills school. We wish her every success.—Miss Edna Williams, of Paris, Ont., Miss Frances Williams, of Toronto, and Percy Williams, of Kingston, visited their parents at the parsonage.—Miss Lena Storms is home from Kingston Business College for the vacation.—A young daughter has come to reside at A. THE VERY LATEST.

She had come into the store to buy tablecloths, and she stated in the beginning that she wanted something new.

The salesman was patient and showed her everything in stock, but nothing suited.

"Oh, dear!" she exclaimed, fussily, "haven't you anything different?"

The clerk brought out one of the discarded tablecloths that he had put back on the shelf, and said with an air of interest:

"Here is one of the very newest designs, madam. You see, the centre is of linen and the border runs right around the edge."

"Why, yes! Let me have that one," she said eagerly.

Deafness Cannot be Cured.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

FLOSSIE CLANCY.

The death of Flossie Clancy, youngest daughter of Mrs. J. W. Miller, Newburgh, in the Waterloo County Hospital, on Friday evening, Dec. 20, after a very great shock, alike to relatives and friends, many of who were unaware of her illness until they learned of her death. Flossie had just reached her nineteenth year, and had entered the above hospital as a nurse-in-training on Oct. 26th last. Up to Sunday evening prior to her death, she had no symptoms of appendicitis and we're told by Dr. Ing, an acute case of the trouble had developed, and on Tuesday morning was thought to be a successful operation was performed. On Thursday blood poison followed and death came early Friday evening. Flossie was gifted with a rare genius that she had made no mistake in the calling she had chosen and that in the end would have won her way into the hearts of the hospital staff. The remains were brought to Newburgh on Monday evening last. The funeral service was held in the Wesley church on Monday, Dec. 23rd, where the deceased was a member and for many years attended the Sunday School. The service was conducted by Rev. R. Duke, pastor, assisted by Rev. A. C. Huffman, St. Paul's. Though the day was very unfavorable the church was well filled. The pall bearers was Luke NX., 38, from which words of comfort and consolation were delivered were spoken. The remains were taken to the vault at Centreville, and later be interred in the family plot. Flossie was a young woman of great promise, and the family have the sympathy of a very large circle of friends. The nurses of the Waterloo County Hospital sent a beautiful wreath of flowers and an expression of sympathy as well as a tribute of respect in which they held their departed sister. Another beautiful wreath was the tribute of Mr. and Mrs. Dawson, of Switzerville. A collection of condolence from the Wesley Methodist Sunday School was passed at the regular session of the school on Sunday morning prior to the funeral, which was greatly appreciated by the family. Flossie has been all the kindness shown them by so many friends near and from a distance.

Indigestion

Stomach trouble is but a symptom of, and not in itself a true disease. We think of Dyspepsia, Heartburn, and Indigestion as real diseases, yet they are symptoms only of a certain specific Nerve sickness—nothing else.

It was this fact that first correctly led Dr. Shoop to the creation of that now very popular Stomach remedy, Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Its direct action is to the stomach nerves, alone brought that current and favor to Dr. Shoop and his Restorative. Without that original and highly vital principle, no such lasting accomplishments were ever to be had.

For stomach distress, bloating, biliousness, bad breath and sallow complexion, try Dr. Shoop's Restorative—Tablets or Liquid—and be your best self what it can and will do. We sell and cheerfully recommend

The Conquest of Canaan

By BOOTH TARKINGTON,
Author of "Cherry," "Monsieur Beaucaire," Etc.

Copyright, 1905, by Harper Bros.

Within the house above a plane of evil life was being beaten to death for its sins and clamoring its last cries horribly. The old shed rattled in every part with the thud of many heavy feet and trembled with the shock of noise, an incessant roar of men's voices, punctuated with women's screams. Then the riot quieted somewhat. There was a clapping of hands, and a violin began to squeak measures intended to be oriental. The next moment the listener scrambled up one of the rotting piles and stood upon the veranda. A shaft of red light through a broken shutter struck across the figure above the shoulders, revealing a bloody handkerchief clumsily knotted about the head and beneath it the face of Joe Longden.

Joe opened the door and went in. All of the merry company (who were soon after sharply toward the door as it opened. One or two nearest the door asked the boy, irritated, what had happened to his head. He merely shook it faintly in reply and crossed the room to an open hallway beyond. At the end of this he came to a frowsy bedroom, the door of which stood ajar. Seated at a deal table and working by a dim lamp with a broken chimney, a close cropped, red bearded, red haired man in his shirt sleeves was jabbing gloomily at a column of figures scrawled in a dirty ledger. He looked up as Joe appeared in the doorway, and his eyes showed a slight surprise.

"I never thought ye had the temper to git somebody to split yer head," said he. "Where'd ye collect it?"

He unwound the handkerchief and removed it from Joe's head gently. "Whee!" he cried as a long gash was exposed over the forehead. "I hope ye left a mark somewhere to pay a little on the score o' this!"

Joe chuckled and dropped dimly back upon the pillow. "There was another who got something like it," he gasped feebly, "and, oh, Mike, I wish you could have heard him going on! Perhaps you did. It was only three miles from here."

"Nothing I'd like'd better!" said the other, bringing a basin of clear water from a stand in the corner. "It's a beautiful thing to hear a man holler when she gits a grand one like ye're wearing tonight."

He bathed the wound gently and, hurrying from the room, returned immediately with a small jug of vinegar. Wetting a rag with this tender fluid, he applied it to Joe's head, speaking soothingly the while.

"Vinegar in the world like a bit o' good cider vinegar to keep off the festerin'. It may seem a trifle scratchy for the moment, but it 's unequaled for blood p'ison. There go! It's the fine thing for ye, Joe. What are ye squirmin' about?"

"I'm only enjoying it," the boy answered, writhing as the vinegar worked into the gash. "Don't you mind my lunching to myself."

"Ye're a good one, Joe!" said the other, continuing his administration. "I never thought ye was afeard of the devil himself, let alone his imitation. 'I have seen the devil,' says he, 'and he looks like Mike.' Ha, ha! Ye'll be quotin' me next, I'm thinkin'."

"No, no; it's all right. I was some where I had no business to be, and I got caught."

"Who caught ye?"

"First some nice white people"—Joe smiled his distorted smile—"and then a low down black nigger helped me to get away as soon as he saw who it was. He's a friend of mine, and he fell down and tripped up the pursuit."

"I always knew ye'd git into large trouble some day." The red bearded man tore a strip from an old towel and began to bandage the boy's head with an accustomed hand. "Yer taste for excitement has been growin' on ye every minute of the four years I've known ye."

"I've got $7," Joe said, without replying to Mike, "and I'll leave the clothes I've got on. Can you fix me up with something different?"

"I'll have the things for ye, and I'll let ye know I have no use for $7," returned the red bearded man crossly. "What are ye sniffin' for?"

"I'm thinking of the poor fellow that got the mate to this," said Joe, touching the bandage. "I can't help crying when I think they may have used vinegar on his head too."

"Git to sleep if ye can!" exclaimed the Samaritan as a hideous burst of noise came from the dance room, where some one seemed to be breaking a chair upon an adjustable. "I'll go out and regulate the boys a bit." He turned down the lamp, fumbled in his slop pocket and went to the door.

CHAPTER VI.

THE day broke with a scream of wind out of the prairies and such cloudbursts of snow that Joe could see neither bank of the river as he made his way down the big bend of ice. The wind struck so bitterly that now and then he stopped and, panting and gasping, leaned his weight against it. The snow on the ground was caught up and flew like sea spume in a hurricane; it swirled about him, joining the flakes in the air, so that it seemed to be mowing from the ground upward as well as from the sky downward. Pierce as it was, hard as it was to fight through, snow from the earth, snow from the sky, Joe was grateful for it, feeling that it veiled him, making him safer, though he trusted somewhat the change of costume he had effected at Beaver Beach. A rough workman's cap was pulled down over his head and eyebrows; a knitted comforter was wound about the lower part of his face; under a ragged overcoat he wore blue overalls and rubber boots, and in one of his red mittened hands he swung a tin dinner bucket.

He bent his body against the wind and went on, still keeping to the back ways, until he came to the alley which passed behind his own home, where, however, he paused only for a moment to make a quick survey of the premises. A glance satisfied him; he ran to the next fence, hoisted himself wearily over it and dropped into Booth Tabor's back yard.

The place seemed empty, and he went on the point of going away when he heard the click of the front gate and saw Ariel coming toward him. At the sound of the gate's click he had drawn close against the side of the house, but she saw him at once.

She stopped abruptly and, throwing the waterproof back from her head, looked at him through the driven fog of snow. One of her hands was stretched toward him involuntarily, and it was in that attitude that he long remembered her—she looked no Undine of the snow.

Suddenly she ran to him, still keeping her hand outstretched until it touched his own.

"How did you know me?" he said.

"I knew from the way all the world ate made to that question. "Come into the house. I've got some coffee on the stove for you. I've been up and down the street waiting for you ever since it began to get light. There's no one there."

She led him to the front door, where he stamped and shook himself. He followed her on to feet.

She wasted no time in getting him to the kitchen, where, when she had removed his overcoat, she placed him in a chair, unwound the comforter and, as carefully as a nurse, lifted the cap from his injured head. When the strip of towel was disclosed, she stood quite still for a moment, with the cap in her hand. Then, with a broken little cry, she stooped and kissed a lock of his hair which escaped, discolored, beneath the bandage.

"Stop that!" he commanded, horribly embarrassed.

"Oh, Joe," she cried, "I knew! I knew it was there, but to see it! And it's my fault for leaving you. I had to go or I wouldn't have—I'—

"Never you mind about it!" he asked shortly.

"I haven't been to bed," she answered. "I've been watching all night and Nichols' and Colonel Flitcroft came about 2 o'clock, and he told us."

"Did he tell you about Norbert?"

"Yes—a great deal." She poured coffee into a cup and put on the stove, brought it to him, then, placing some thin slices of bread upon a gridiron, threw open the door of the stove and began to toast them.

"Where's your father?" he asked.

"He's in bed. They made him go. He was completely worn out. He's been very kind to me, Joe, and I'm so glad you've come to him. He's the only friend we have in the world, and he's very fond of you. He said last night that you were the best man he ever knew, and that your—your—"

"What was you doing at Jones's, Ta-bor?" asked the fugitive, filling his coffee, with a brightening eye.

"We were sent for," she answered.

"Who sent?"

She toasted the bread attentively without replying, and when she had finished, put the slices on a plate, piled it on a warm plate. This she brought to him and, standing in front of him, gave an order on his forehead for his consideration, looking steadfastly up at his eyes. He began to eat ravenously.

"What for?" he repeated. "I didn't suppose Jonas would let you come in his house. Was he sick?"

"Joe," she said quietly, disregarding his questions—"Joe, have you got to run away?"

"Yes, I've got to," he answered.

"Would you have to go to prison if you stayed?" She asked this with a breathless inanity.

"I'm not going to beg father to help me out," he said determinedly. "He said he wouldn't, and he'll be spared the chance. He won't mind that; nobody will care! Nobody! What does anybody care what I do?"

"Now you're thinking of Mamie!" she cried. "I could, Mary's kid. Whenever you don't talk naturally you're thinking of her!"

He pouted down the last of the coffee, growing red to the tips of his ears. "Ariel," he said, "if I ever come back"—

"Wait," she interrupted. "Would you have to go to prison right away if they caught you?"

"Oh, it isn't that," he laughed sadly. "But I'm going to clear out. I'm not going to take any chances. I want to change of costume he had effected at Beaver Beach. A rough workman's cap was pulled down over his head and eyebrows; a knitted comforter was wound about the lower part of his face; under a ragged overcoat he wore blue overalls and rubber boots, and in one of his red mittened hands he swung a tin dinner bucket.

"You needn't worry about that," returned the master of $7 genially. "I've saved enough to take care of me for a long time."

"Joe, please! I know it isn't so. If you could wait just a little while—only a few weeks—only a few, Joe"—

"What for?"

"I could let you have all you want. It would be such a beautiful thing for me, Joe. Oh, I know how you'd feel. You wouldn't even let me give you that dollar I found in the street last year, but this would be only lending it to you, and you could pay me back some time"—

"Ariel!" he exclaimed and, setting his empty cup upon the floor, took her by the shoulders and shook her till the empty plate which had held the toast dropped from her hand and broke into fragments. "You've been reading the 'Arabian Nights'!"

"No, no!" she cried vehemently. "Grandfather would give me anything. He'll give me all the money I ask for."

"Money?" said Joe. "What is it wandering? Money? Roger Tabor give you money?"

"Not for awhile. A great many things have to be settled first."

"What things?"

"Joe," she asked earnestly, "do you think it's half as much of me not to feel things I ought to feel?"

"No."

"Then I'm glad," she said, and something in the way she spoke made him start with pain, remembering the same words, spoken in the same tone, by another voice the night before on the veranda. "I'm glad, Joe, because I seemed all wrong to myself. Uncle Jonas died last night, and I haven't been able to get sorry. Perhaps it's because I've been so frightened about you, but I think not, for I wasn't sorry even before Colonel Flitcroft told me about you."

"Jonas Tabor dead!" said Joe. "Why, I saw him on the street yesterday!"

"Yes, and I saw him just before I came out on the porch where you were. He was there in the hall. He and Judge Pike had been having a long talk. They'd been in some speculations together, and if had all turned out well. It's very strange, but they say now that Uncle Jonas' heart was weak—he was an old man, you know, almost eighty—and he'd been very anxious about his money. The judge had persuaded him to risk it, and the shock of finding that he'd made a great deal suddenly"—

"I've heard he'd and that same shock before," said Joe, "when he sold out to your father."

"Yes, but this was different, grandfather says. He told me it was in one of those biz risky businesses that Judge Pike likes to go into. And last night it was all finished, the strain was over, and Uncle Jonas started home. His house to only a little way from the judge's house, but he dropped dgpn in the snow at his own gate, and some people who were going by saw him fall. He was dead before grandfather got there."

She put her hand on the boy's arm, and he let it remain there. Her face still sought his with a tremulous appeal.

"God bless you, Ariel!" he said. "It's going to be a great thing for you."

"You—you; it is." The tears came suddenly to her eyes. "I was sorry last night, but there had been such a long time of wanting things, and now—and now grandfather and I can go."

"You're going, too!" Joe chuckled. "It's heartless, I suppose, but I've settled it. We're going"—

"I know," he cried. "You've told me a thousand times what he's said ten times a thousand. You're going to Paris."

"Paris! Yes; that's it. To Paris, where he can see at last how the great pictures are painted—where the others can show him! To Paris, where we can study together! Oh, Joe, don't you know I'm the picture he sees upon canvas, and what's"—

"Go on!" he encouraged her. "I won't tell your boy say it. You don't mean that you're going to study painting. You mean that you're going to learn how to make cook-stoves! What's

MARMALADE

Now is the time to make your home-made Marmalade; make to suit your own taste.

I have all the different kinds of Oranges in stock—Bitter Oranges, nice and bright; Valencia Oranges, good size; fresh Lemons and the California Navel Oranges. These goods are nice and sweet just now.

I have a few cases of Corn and Tomatoes to sell three tins for 25c. This is a very low price this year for these goods.

Everything in the grocery line, all of the very best quality—Coffee, of course, that goes without me saying much about it, for it is well known that I have the very best Coffee in town.

BY-LAW NO.

OF THE CORPORATION OF THE TOWN OF NAPANEE.

A By-law to authorize the issue of debentures of the Town of Napanee to the amount of $15,800, for the purpose of raising $15,800 to provide for cost of completing and extending the Municipal Electric Light plant in the Town of Napanee.

WHEREAS the Corporation of the Town of Napanee has constructed an Electric Light plant and established a Municipal System; and

AND WHEREAS for additional sum of $8,800 is required to the cost of completing the said plant; and making necessary extensions thereto; and

AND WHEREAS it is desirable that the amount necessary to defray the cost of the said completion and extension of said Municipal Electric Light plant should be raised on the credit of the said Town;

AND WHEREAS in order thereto it will be necessary to issue debentures of the Municipality to the amount of $15,800 as hereinafter mentioned, and to impose a special rate on the debts intended to be created by this By-law sufficient to pay the said debentures to be applied to said purpose and no other.

AND WHEREAS it is also desirable to issue the said debentures at one time and to make the principal of said debentures repayable by yearly sums during the period of twenty years, inclusive, the amount of the said debentures, said yearly sums being of such respective amounts that the aggregate amount payable in each year for principal and interest in respect of the said debentures shall be as nearly as possible equal to the amount so payable in each of the other years during the currency of the said period.

AND WHEREAS the total amount required to be raised annually by special rate for paying the said interest and debentures hereinafter provided is $982.45.

AND WHEREAS the amount of the whole rateable property of the Town of Napanee, according to the last revised Assessment Roll is $1,175,195.

AND WHEREAS the amount of the existing debenture debt of the Municipality, exclusive of local improvement debts secured by special rates or local assessments, whereof no part of principal or interest is in arrear.

THEREFORE the Municipal Council of the Corporation of the Town of Napanee enacts as follows:

1. That for the purpose of raising the sum of $15,800 as aforesaid, debentures of the Municipality to the amount in the whole sum of $15,800 as aforesaid, in the form of Schedule "A" to this By-law, or to the like effect, shall be dated on the day of the issue thereof, and shall be made payable on the First day of March in each of the years from 1909 to 1928 inclusive, at the office of the Treasurer of the Town of Napanee, without interest, the interest on the said loans calculated at the rate of five per centum per annum being therefor included in the amount of the said debentures.

2. It shall be lawful for the Mayor of the said Municipality and he is hereby authorized to issue and sign and issue the said debentures hereby authorized to be issued and to cause the same to be signed by the Treasurer of the said Municipality, and the Clerk of the said Municipality is hereby authorized and required to attach the seal of the said Municipality to the said debentures.

3. That during the currency of the said debentures there shall be raised annually by special rate, on all the rateable property of the said Municipality, the sum of $982.45 for the purpose of paying the amount due in each year for principal and interest as the interest in respect of the said debentures.

4. This By-law shall take effect on the 28th day of December, A.D. 1907, subject to the vote of the electors of the said Municipality qualified to vote on this By-law on Monday, the Sixth day of January, A.D. 1908, between the hour of nine o'clock in the forenoon, and continuing till five o'clock in the afternoon of the same day, by the following Deputy Returning Officers at the following places, that is to say:—

INVITE A TEST

T. B. WALLACE ASKS CATARRH SUFFERERS TO TRY HYOMEI ON HIS GUARANTEE.

T. B. Wallace invites all who suffer from any form of catarrhal troubles to get a Hyomei outfit from him with his absolute guarantee that if it does not give perfect satisfaction, the money it is refunded upon request.

There is no other treatment for catarrh that in any way resembles Hyomei, none that gives such quick curative results and lasting satisfaction, no medicine that can be sold on a guarantee like this, to refund the money and cure.

Catarrh is a germ disease and can be cured only by breathing Hyomei, so that the most remote air cells in the nose, throat and lungs are reached by its antiseptic healing powers. In this way all catarrhal germs are killed, the irritated mucous membrane is healed and catarrh is driven from the system.

This wonderful medicated air treatment does not drug and derange the stomach, but is breathed through a little pocket inhaler that goes with every dollar outfit.

The unusual way in which T. B. Wallace sells Hyomei attests his confidence in the remedy.

The Best Flour, Dafoe's Monesuch, Dafoe's Manitoba Patent

By numerous tests by the best bakers the above mentioned grades of flour have proven to be the best in the market.

The best flour for bakers, and patrons may have same milled, thereby producing home baking that will please you more than cheaper than the product of the Western mills, which has to be transported thousands of miles at great expense, and usually is stored for a long time in elevators.

The grocer complains if the farmer or the miller sells flour, but there is no reason to complain for an article he can get at the home mill, and the farmer has the right to choose to buy flour from either a miller or grocer. Our flour is milled from the best selected wheat, for every bag of which a guarantee is given.

Choice Oat meal and Buckwheat Flour always on hand. Feed for cattle, horses, pigs, with the best feed mills known to the trade. A full line of Salt always on hand, and all else in the market for the purchase of all kinds of grain.

WISH YOU ONE AND ALL

A Happy and Prosperous New Year.

This paper comes to you a few days before the New Year. It is the time of the old year that we all devote to taking stock of past performances and considering future advances. It seems fitting that before embarking on the year 1908, we devote a brief space to summing up past achievements and telling you our ambitions for the future.

This past twelve months have meant a good deal to all of us who are engaged in making this a greater business than has ever been in Napanee, and we have always assumed that our customers are as much interested in the business as we are ourselves.

WE THANK YOU FOR THE ENLARGED BUSINESS YOU HAVE GIVEN US. To day the business is stronger and more prosperous than it has ever been. The knowledge of the sympathy and appreciation of our customers has been a spur and incentive to greater effort each year. If we have accomplished anything, it is owing to the support and encouragement you have given us. Our agreement with you for 1908 is to do still better.

EVENING WEAR FOR MEN AND WOMEN.

From the 1st of January until March 4th, the evenings will be almost all occupied by social functions of one form or another. Are you prepared for them? You had better look over your wardrobe and see if there are not many things you really should have. We are better prepared than ever in all Departments to cater to the tastes of our customers in these lines.

Dress Suits and Tuxedos, the Order of the Day for Men.

We aim to excell and judging by the increased patronage we have received, we believe we have accomplished our aim. Our Tailoring Department is in splendid shape to turn out extremely well made and good fitting Dress Clothes. We keep in touch with the newest fashions and can tell you what is what, or we can make them up to your individual taste. Positively no disappointment. All goods promised delivered on time. Many different lines of Undressed Worsteds, Vicunas and Cheviots to choose from.

Fur Wraps for Evening Wear.

Why not let our Fur-Manufacturing Department turn you out a real swell Evening Coat or Wrap?

In Fur Lined Coats we keep in stock quite a range of the darker shades but if you prefer some light tone or out of the ordinary shade we will build same to your order. You may have it half, three quarter or full length, lined either with Fur, Silk or Satin. Collar may be any kind of Fur you choose. For evening wear we suggest Lynx, Coon, Thibet, Fox, Mink, Marmot or Sable.

Our Women's Ready-to-Wear Dept. For Evening Wear.

For immediate demands our Ready-to-Wear Department may surprise you with the high class of garments that are ready for using. Such as Voile and Silk Skirts, Fancy Waists, Silk Petticoats and Dresses. In the same section you will find Ice Wool Fascinators, Clouds, Throw Overs, Gulfers, etc.

Laces For Trimming Evening Dresses.

In making our selection of Laces, we had Evening Dresses in mind. We are showing a complete range of Baby Irish in Lace with Insertion to match. Filet Laces are coming to the front very strong. It it is new and correct we have it.

Corsets.

Don't expect your dressmaker to fit your Evening Dress over ill fitting Corsets. If you have trouble getting the proper corset, you are welcome to any service our Corset Department can give you. We have with us in our Corset Department those who know the corset to fit your figure. If by any chance we have not the corset you should wear, we can have it made to your measure.

Rugs For Evening Use.

If in the rush of fixing up for Evening Gaieties, you think Carpets are shabby, just telephone the sizes and colors wanted and we will send you several handsome Rugs to choose from. Prices range from $20 to $60.

Our Evening Wear Section for Ladies' Dress Goods.

We have given special attention to the dainty fabrics for evening wear and will be able to please the most exacting purchaser, both in manufacturing the garment and material. The gay season is here, and the ladies appreciate our showing—which has been proven by the demand which has been made in our Dress Goods and Dressmaking Department. We mention a few of the popular weaves, and invite inspection—

FILET NET, PLAIN VOILES, POINT DE SPRIT, NUNS' VEILING,
HAIR LINE VOILES, BRUSSELS NET,
CREPE DE SOIE, SILK BENGALINE.

These are shown in the opera shades.

Our Dressmaking Department.

Under the able management of Miss Murphy—speaks for itself. The season for this Department closes Feb. 1st and will reopen again Feb. 24th, so take our advice and place your orders now, either for immediate or spring.

Linens For Evening Use.

Our interior Linen displays give you glimpses of the many beautiful pieces of hand worked linens. They represent the handiwork of the women of Canary Isles, Japan and Ireland.

We refer now to Tea Cloths, Carvers and Doylies. Our Tea Cloths are 30x30, 36x36, 45x45. Carvers, 18x27, 20x30. Doylies, 6, 9, 12, 18 inches, round and oval.

Women's Hosiery for Evening Wear.

With low shoes very much in use, we find a heavy demand for Embroidered and Lace Hosiery. Our range is largest in Blacks. In Lace Hose we only keep "Hermsdorf" Blacks. With them we are sure the black is fast. The embroidered designs are very pretty. The lace designs are both in all over and ankle lengths. The fine gauze Lisles we have in such light shades as Champagne, Bluet, Grey, Pink.

Women's Gloves For Evening Wear

The dressy evening gown is more complete with long Gloves. We are ready with several ranges, both in Silks and Kids.

KID—White and black in 20, 22 and 24 inch lengths, 5 3-4 to 7, 5-2 to and $3.00.

SILK—In white, pink, black, sky, lengths 20 to 26 inches. The 26 inch lengths come above the elbow, 50c to $1.50.

Furnishings for Men for Evening Wear.

DRESS SHIRTS AND NECKWEAR—A full stock in all sizes of shirts in the best makes.

HOSIERY—A beautiful assortment of fine embroidered Cashmere in all sizes. Also many fine lines of plain blacks.

COLLARS, CUFFS HANDKERCHIEFS, NECK WRAPS, SUSPENDERS, FOWNE'S CELEBRATED GLOVES, FINE UNDERWEAR, ETC.

NAPANEE GROCERS

DON'T LIKE OUR CASH PRICES.

The leading grocerymen have agreed to

Spend $5,000.00

if necessary to force us out of the town so they can restore former high prices. It would pay them IF 15,000.00 would do it; but as about $12,000.00 was spent in 18 months in a similar unsuccessful attempt in Picton, $5,000.00 seems insignificant.

Though one of our competitors explains why he was not in the coal oil combine, we challenge them to explain why they now advertise Sugar and Rolled Oats at about manufacturer's cost in car load lots, and then in 25c and 50c packages of sugar sell at a rate less than their own advertised prices. Is it not similar to the coal oil scandal?

All our prices are always right.

We continue to give 20 per cent. off Yeast, Soda, Blue, Butter Color, Diamond Dyes, Stove Blacking, Boot Polish.

10 per cent. off all kinds and prices of package Teas and package Breakfast Foods.

Our fourth car Redpath's Sugar just received. We have always given same rate in 25c, 50c and $1.00 packages.

10 per cent. per week compound interest on $1.00 for one year equals $141.03.

ERNESTTOWN STATION.

The fine sleighing of the past week has greatly added to the pleasure and business of the locality.—The Christmas tree entertainment of Union church S. S. for Thursday evening was a decided success. The church was crowded long before hour set for beginning of programme. Every piece was well rendered and Santa Claus was kind to all. A very pleasing feature of the evening was the presentation to Mrs. Alfred Asney by the school of a dozen sterling silver teaspoons and fruit spoon. Proceeds of evening $36.—Mrs. Joel Keller was summoned to the bedside of her mother, who is dangerously ill.—Mrs. C. D. Smith has arrived from Toronto to spend Xmas with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. N. S. Hazen.—Mrs. Elles and Mrs. Cynthia Asney spent a few days last week with their sister, Mrs. Lucas.—Miss Ida Buck, Morven, is the guest of her brother, Edmund Buck.—Mr. and Mrs. Elliott, Odessa, visited friends here last week.—Miss Grace Ireland is at her sister's, Mrs. E. Buck.

RHEUMATISM WILL SUCCUMB to South American Rheumatic Cure because it goes right to the seat of the trouble and removes the cause. Many so-called cures but deaden pain temporarily only. To have it return again with doubled violence. Not so with this great remedy. It eradicates from the system the last vestige of the disease and its cures are permanent. For sale by T. B. BELL ROCK.

Sleighing is fine here, excepting the road over the long bridge which is partly covered with water.—The county officials will have their eyes opened when they have another bill of damages to pay.—The school concert here on the 20th inst. was a decided success.—Our former teacher, Miss Markland, has taken a school in New Ontario.—Miss Goldie Seribner, of Conboe's school, and Miss Nellie Vanvalkenburg, of Glendower, are at home for the holidays.—Miss Edna Reynolds, Harrowsmith, is the guest of Miss Vanvolkenburg.—Miss A. Leamon, Kingston, is spending a few days with friends here.

60 SPECIALISTS ON THE CASE.—In the ordinary run of medical practice a greater number than this have brought cases of chronic dyspepsia and have failed to cure—but Dr. Von Stan's Pineapple Tablets (60 in a box at 35 cents cost) have made the cure, giving relief in one day. These little "specialists" have proven their real merit. For sale by T. B. Wallace.—72.

There is so much Rheumatism here in our neighborhood now that the following advice by an eminent authority, who writes for readers of a large Eastern daily paper, will be highly appreciated by those who suffer:

Get from any good pharmacy one-half ounce Fluid Extract Dandelion, one ounce Compound Kargon, three ounces of Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla. Shake these well in a bottle and take in teaspoonful doses after each meal and at bedtime; also drink plenty of good water. It is claimed that there are few victims of this dread and torturous disease who will fail to find ready relief in this simple home-made mixture, and in most cases a permanent cure is the result.

This simple recipe is said to strengthen and cleanse the eliminative tissues of the Kidneys so that they can filter and strain from the blood and system the poisons, acids and waste matter, which cause not only Rheumatism, but numerous other diseases. Every man or woman here who feels that their kidneys are not healthy and active, or who suffer from any urinary trouble whatever, should not hesitate to make up this mixture, as it is certain to do much good, and may save you from much misery and suffering after awhile.

Our home druggists say they either supply the ingredients or mix the prescription ready to take if our readers ask them.

The Conquest of Canaan

"There was that Joe, and nobody else, knocking up in a little low outside a tent."

to see the Spotted Wild Boy!" Yes, it was Joe Loudon! Think you Mr. Arp could forget that face, those crooked eyebrows? Had Eskew tested the recognition? Had he spoken with the outcast? Had he not? Aye, but with such peculiar result that the battle of words among the sages began with a true onset of the regulars, for, according to Eskew's narrative, when he had delivered grimly at the boy this charge, "I know you—you're Joe Loudon!" the extraordinary reply had been given promptly and without change of countenance, "Positively no free seats!"

"What's the matter with you?" Mr. Arp whirled upon Uncle Joe Davey, who was enjoying himself by repeating at intervals the unreasonable words, "Couldn't of be'n Joe," without any explanation. "Why couldn't it?" shouted Eskew. "It was! Do you think my eyes are as far gone as yours? I saw him, I tell you. What's more, that boy Joe 'll turn up here again some day. You'll see if he don't. He's a sort of trouble and iniquity, and anything of that kind is sure to come back to Canaan!"

Mr. Arp stuck to his prediction for several months. Then he began to waver and recede. By the end of the second year following its first utterance he had formed the habit of denying that he had ever made it'let all rest, finally having come to believe with all his heart that the prophecy had been deliberately foisted upon him and put in his mouth by Squire Buckalew, became so sore upon the subject that even the hardiest dared not refer to it in his presence.

Eskew's story of the ticket seller was the only one of Joe Loudon that came to Canaan during seven years. Another citizen of the town encountered the wanderer, however, but under circumstances so susceptible to misconception that a moment of illumination be decided to let the matter rest in a golden silence. This was Mr. Bantry, and the cause of his silence was the fact that his meeting with Joe occurred in the "Straw Cellar," a tough New York resort, in which neither of them should have been.

CHAPTER VIII.

EUGENE did not inform Canaan or any inhabitant of his adventure of the "Straw Cellar," nor did any hear of his meeting with his stepbrother, and after Mr. Arp's adventure five years passed into the imperishable before the town heard of the wanderer again, and then it heard at first hand. Mr. Arp's prophecy fell true, and he took it back to his bosom again, claimed it as his own the morning of its fulfilment. Joe Loudon had come back to Canaan.

The elder Loudon was the first to know of his prodigal's return. He was alone in the office of the wooden butter dish factory, of which he was the superintendent, when the young man came in unannounced. He was still pale and thin. His eyebrows had the same crook, one corner of his mouth the same droop. He was only an inch or so taller, not enough to be thought a tall man, and yet for a few moments the father did not recognize his son, but stared at him, inquiring his business. During those few seconds of nonrecognition Mr. Loudon was assailed favorably impressed with the stranger's appearance.

"You don't know me," said Joe, smiling cheerfully. "Perhaps I've changed in seven years." And he held out his hand.

Then Mr. Louden knew.- He tilted back in his desk chair, his mouth falling open, "Good God!" he said, and nodding the outstretched hand. "Have you come back?"

Joe's hand fell.

"Yes, I've come back to Canaan."

Mr. Louden plainly received this as no pleasant surprise. "What for?" he asked slowly.

"To practice law, father."

"What?"

"Yes," said the young man. "There ought to be an opening here for me. I'm a graduate of as good a law school as there is in the country."

Mr. Louden leaned forward, a hand on each knee, his brow deeply corrugated.

"Who do you think in Canaan would put a case in your hands?"

"Oh, I don't expect to get anything important at the start, but after awhile"

"With your reputation?"

"But that's seven years ago, and I suppose the town's forgotten all about it and forgotten me too. So, you see, I can make a fresh start. That's what I came back for."

"I don't believe," said Mr. Louden, with marked uneasiness, "that Mrs. Louden would be willing to let you live with us."

"No," said Joe gently. "I didn't expect it. Well, I won't keep you from your work. I suppose you're pretty busy."

"Yes, I am," responded his father promptly. "But I'll see you again before you go. I want to give you some advice."

"I'm not going," said Joe. "Not going to leave Canaan, I mean. Where will I find Eugene?"

"At the Tocsin office; he's the assistant editor. Judge Pike bought the Tocsin last year, and he's given a good deal of Eugene. Don't forget I said to come to see me again before you go."

Joe came over to the older man and held out his hand. "Shake hands, father," he said. Mr. Louden looked at him out of small inquiring eyes, the steady hostility of which only his wife or the imperious Martin Pike, his employer, could quell. He shook his head.

"I don't see any use in it," he answered. "It wouldn't mean anything. All my life I've been a hard working man and an abiding man. Before you got in trouble you never did anything you ought to. You ran with the lowest people in town, and I and all your folks were ashamed of you. I don't see that we've got a call to be any different now." He swung round to his desk emphatically on the last word, and Joe turned away and went out quietly.

But it was a bright morning to which he emerged from the outer doors of the factory, and he made his way toward Main street at a lively gait. As he turned the corner opposite the National House he walked into Mr. Eskew Arp. The old man drew back hastily.

"Lord 'a' mercy!" cried Joe heartily. "It's Mr. Arp! I almost ran you down!" Then, as Mr. Arp made no response, but stood stock still in the way, staring at him fiercely: "Don't you know me, Mr. Arp?" the young man asked. "It's Joe Loudon."

Eskew abruptly thrust his face close to the other's. "No free seats!" he hissed savagely and swept across to the hotel to pit his world afire.

Joe looked after the irate receding figure and watched it disappear into the Main street door of the National House. As the door closed he became aware of a mighty shadow upon the pavement and, turning, beheld a fat young man wearing upon his forehead a scar similar to his own waddling by, with eyes fixed upon him.

"How are you, Norbert?" Joe began. "Don't you remember me? I"— He came to a full stop as the fat one, thrusting out an under lip as his only token of recognition, passed balefully on.

Joe proceeded slowly until he came to the Tocsin building. At the foot of the stairway leading up to the offices he hesitated for a few moments. Then he turned away and walked toward the quieter part of Main street. Most of the people he met took no notice of him, only two or three giving him second glances of half cognizance, as though he reminded them of some one they could not place, and it was not until he had come near the Pike mansion that he saw a full recognition in the eyes of one of the many whom he knew and who had known him in his boyhood in the town. A lady, turning a corner, looked up carelessly and then half stopped within a few feet of him as if startled. Joe took off his sodden crimson, for it was the lady of his old dreams.

As she came to her half step of surprise, startled, he took his courage in two hands and, lifting his hat, stepped to her side.

"You—you remember me?" he stammered.

"Yes," she answered, a little breathlessly.

"Ah, that's kind of you!" he cried and began to walk on by her companion seriously. "I feel like a returned ghost wandering about—invisible and unrecognized. So few people seem to remember me."

"I think you are wrong. I think you'll find everybody remembers you," the respondent hurriedly.

"No; I'm afraid not," he began. "I"—

She interrupted him. They were not far from her gate, and she saw her father standing in the yard directing a painter who was at work on one of the east iron door. The judge was apparently in good spirits, laughing with the workman over some jest between them, but that did not lessen Mamie's nervousness.

"Mr. Loudon," she said in as kindly a tone as she could, "I shall have to ask you not to walk with me. My father would not like it."

Joe stopped with a jerk.

"Why, I—I thought I'd go in and shake hands with him—and tell him I"—

Astonishment that partook of terror and of awe spread itself instantly upon her face.

"Good gracious!" she cried. "No!"

"Very well," said Joe humbly. "Good-by."

Joe sat him meditatively back to Main street and to the Tocsin building. This time, without a moment's hesitation, he mounted the stairs and knocked upon the door of the assistant editor.

"Oh," said Eugene. "You've turned up, have you?"

"I've come back to stay, Gene," said Joe.

Eugene dropped his book. "Exceedingly interesting," he said. "I suppose you'll try to find something to do. I don't think you could get a place here. Judge Pike owns the Tocsin, and I greatly fear he has a prejudice against you."

"I expect he has," Joe chuckled, sodfewhat sadly. "But I don't want newspaper work. I'm going to practice law."

"By jove, you have courage, my festive prodigal!" Eugene said.

Joe cocked his head to one side with his old look of the friendly puppy. "You always did like to talk that novel, didn't you, Gene, didn't you?" he said impersonally.

Eugene's color rose. "Have you saved up anything to starve on?" he asked crisply.

"Oh, I'm not so badly off. I've had a salary as an office for a year, and I had one pretty good day at the races"—

"You'd better go back and have another," said his stepbrother. "You don't seem to comprehend your standing in Canaan."

"I am beginning to." Joe turned to the door. "It's funny, too, in a way. Well, I won't keep you any longer. I just stopped in to say good day." He paused, faltering.

"All right, all right," Eugene said briskly. "And, by the way, I haven't mentioned that I saw you in New York."

"Oh, I didn't suppose that you would."

"And you needn't say anything about it, I fancy."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Sad Story of a Mother of Four Children laid low with Consumption

What are Canadians doing to Combat this Disease?

We are shocked at the tragedies that the newspapers record almost daily, through railway accidents, explosions, falling buildings, and other causes.

Each incident must surely draw upon our sympathies.

But sad and lamentable as these are, they are insignificant compared with the loss of life and prolonged suffering that comes to thousands in the Dominion stricken with that dread disease Consumption.

30,000 die annually in the province of Ontario from this disease; probably double that number, taking the Dominion throughout.

We have on our desk a little booklet, issued by the National Sanitarium Association, by whom was established in 1902 the Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives. In these pages are published a few of the letters that are being continually received from applicants seeking admission to this Muskoka home for Consumptives.

Let us refer to one simply to emphasize the purpose of this article.

The story is of a resident in the village of Lucan—a mother. The friend writing on her behalf says that a few months ago this person, a Mrs. Carroll, buries her husband from Consumption. He was an oil man. He peddled oil around the country in his waggon. There are four small children. Now the mother has been taken ill and her physician diagnoses the case consumption—the infection doubtless obtained in nursing the husband.

The Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives are being asked to admit this patient.

It is a pleasure for the management of this institution to be able to say that at no time since the doors were opened—over five years ago—has a single applicant been refused admission because of his or her inability to pay.

This means a heavy strain financially on the Trustees, who year in and year out have gone on with the work, making further extensions and placing their hope in the good will and generosity of the Canadian public.

We do not know a more deserving charity in Canada. The consumptive is found everywhere, and we gladly append to this article the suggestion of the booklet, that our readers help as far as they can to maintain just such patients as the poor mother of Lucan.

Contributions we learn may be sent to Sir Wm. R. Meredith, K.C., Vice-President, Osgoode Hall, Toronto; W. J. Gage, Esq., 81 Spadina Ave., or J. S. Robertson, Sec.-Treas. National Sanitarium Association, 347 King Street W., Toronto, Ont.

A SOUND STOMACH MEANS A CLEAR HEAD—The high pressure of a nervous life which business men of the present day are continued to live make draughts upon their vitality highly detrimental to their health. It is only by the most careful treatment that they are able to keep themselves alert and active in their various callings, many of them know the value of Parmelee's Vegetable Pills in regulating the stomach and consequently keeping the head clear.

He—My views on bringing up a family—She—Never mind your views; I'll bring up the family. You go and bring up the coal!

PAINS, LIKE THE POOR, ARE ALWAYS WITH US—That portion of man's life which is not made up of pleasure is largely composed of pain, and to tie free from pain is a pleasure. Simple remedies are always the best in treating bodily pain, and a safe, sure and simple remedy is Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. You cannot do wrong in giving it a trial when required.

"You after the job as office boy?" asked the merchant.

"Nope," replied the youngster. "Any previous experience?"

"No sir, nothing serious about it at all," was the reply.

"Hang up your hat!"

KNOWN TO THOUSANDS—Parmelee's Vegetable Pills regulate the action of the secretions, purify the blood and keep the stomach and bowels free from deleterious matter. Taken according to direction they will overcome dyspepsia, eradicate biliousness, and leave the digestive organs healthy and able to perform their functions. Their merits are well-known to many ours spreading in many parts of the world, where they are in every home to the system.

Smith—Excuse me, Jones, but may I ask how you manage to have such delicious things to eat?

Jones—It's quite simple. I always kiss the cook before dinner, and hold her on my knee after dinner.

Smith—But what does your wife say?

Jones—O, she doesn't object. She's the cook.

LEARN DRESSMAKING BY MAIL

Is Your Spare Time at Home, Or Take a Personal Course at School.

To enable all to learn, we teach on cash or instalment plan. We also teach a personal class at school once a month—class commencing last Tuesday of each month. These lessons teach how to cut, fit and put together any garment, from the simplest child's dress to the most elaborate lady's costume. The whole family can learn from one lesson. We have taught over 2,000 pupils and guarantee to give $5000 to anyone who cannot learn between the ages of 14 and 40. You cannot learn dressmaking as thoroughly in any other teacher in 6 years. Because of imitations, as we employ no one outside the school. This is the only experienced Dress Cutting School in Canada, and excelled by none in any other country. Write at once for new system, as we have cut our rate one-third for a short time. Address

C. L. DREESE, M.D.

SPECIALIST IN THROAT AND LUNG TROUBLES ENDORSES VINOL.

He writes: "In cases where the curative influence of cod liver oil is needed, I prescribe Vinol, which I find to be far more palatable and efficacious than other cod liver preparations. I am convinced from my own experience and from a knowledge of the nature of Vinol, that it is a worthy cod liver preparation in which a physician may have every confidence." C. L. DREESE, M.D., Dodge, Ind.

Such testimony furnishes further evidence to the people of Napanee that our delicious cod liver preparation, Vinol, does all we claim for it.

As a body builder, and strength creator for old people, delicate children, run-down persons, after sickness, and for chronic coughs, colds bronchitis, and all throat and lung troubles, Vinol is unexcelled.

This is because Vinol is made by a scientific, extractive and concentrating process from fresh cods' livers, combining with peptonate of iron all the medicinal, body-building, blood-cleansing elements of cod liver oil, but no oil.

We ask the people of Napanee to try Vinol on our offer to return their money if it fails to give satisfaction. T. B. Wallace, Napanee, Ont.

PRESENTATION.

On Friday afternoon the pupils of Bell School, Tamworth, presented their teacher, Miss McGill, with a beautiful ebony toilet case, and a souvenir card receives with the following address:

Dear Miss McGill,—As you are about to sever your connection with Bell School, we, as representatives of its pupils, take this opportunity of thanking you for your faithful services in the past, and of extending to you our heartfelt wishes for continued success in the future. For the time that you have labored among us, and during that time we have found you not only a painstaking teacher but also an earnest obliging friend. You have ever been interested in our studies; you have manifested a deep interest in our success and our failures, and in every way have allied yourself with our interests.

And now as a slight token of our sincere respect and friendship, we beg you to accept this offering from the pupils of this school. May it keep fresh in you the memory of old days in "Bell school" to which you may look back in after years, we hope, as not entirely unpleasant and unprofitable.

Signed on behalf of the school:

Irene Lacey, Tommy Donovan.
Jessie Bell, Elsie Huffman.
Mabel Rogers.

A tickling cough, from any cause, is quickly stopped by Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. And it is so thoroughly harmless and safe, that Dr. Shoop tells mothers to give it to babies without hesitation, even to very young babies. The wholesome green leaves and tender stems of a lung-healing mountainous shrub, furnish the curative power in Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. It calms the cough, and heals the sore and inflamed throat membranes. No opium, no chloroform, nothing hard to take. Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. Simply a restorative plant. The Spaniards call this shrub "Wild Ivy." Ask your druggist for Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. For sale by T. B. Wallace.

MANITOBA BRIDES.

Waskada Expositor, 11th Dec.

On the 4th inst., at Melita Parsonage, by the Rev. Beatie, Annie E. Galloway to Harry Millar. Miss Pearl Tallen acted as bridesmaid, the groomsman being Mr. Seymour Young. After the ceremony the happy couple drove to Daisy, where a sumptuous repast was served at the home of the bride's mother. At the close of an enjoyable evening the bride and groom departed for their future home, amid a shower of rice. Both the principals are well known in our midst, and the Expositor joins with their many friends in wishing them a long and happy married life.

The bridesmaid was married to the groomsman on Wednesday, 18th Dec., at the home of the bride's parents.

These four young people will become residents of Waskada district. Miss Annie Galloway, Miss Pearl Tallen and Mr. Seymour Young, all come from Lennox and Addington. Miss Tallen's home was at Mountain Grove, and Miss Galloway and Mr. Young were formerly of Bath.

HAWLEY.

Rev. F. T. Dibb and Mrs. Dibb spent Thursday afternoon at Mr. H. Simpson's as Mr. Dibb is leaving the Parish of Frankstown to accept a call to Deseronto, the church people of Hawley gathered in and presented the rev. gentleman with an address and present, in token of his faithful services in their behalf. The evening was spent very pleasantly in conversation and games.—Miss Cora Charters has come home from Chicago to spend the winter. Her brother John of Lloydminster, Sask., is expected home before Xmas.—The thanksgiving at Bethel church was a great success. The proceeds amounting to $82.00. Though the church was well filled with people, everyone was given a hearty supper, and then gave good attention to an excellent programme furnished by Napanee talent.

SAND STREET.

Our esteemed and most respected teacher, Miss Barnhardt, gave a Xmas tree on the 20th of December, for her pupils and the parents of her section. It was highly appreciated by all. Miss Barnhardt received a beautiful present from Mr. and Mrs. Johnston, also several from her pupils, which showed the high respect in which she was held by both pupils and parents. We all hope to have her with us for some time yet.—Mr. Joyal passed through here last week on his way to Grand Arm.—School meeting next Thursday.

MRS. SAMUEL WISEMAN.

"He giveth His beloved sleep." Death had no sting, the grave no victory, in the passing away of Mrs. Samuel Wiseman, on November 11th, 1907, at her residence, Marlbank, but was a release from bodily suffering, and an entrance into perfect rest and joy.

The deceased's maiden name was Anna Switzer. Of Irish descent, she possessed the genial characteristics of that nation. She was born in Fredericksburgh, Dec. 24, 1833. She resided in Enterprise for many years, and was there married to Samuel Wiseman in 1855. Six years ago she came to Marlbank where she still resided at the time of her demise. One daughter, Nancy, who has been her constant companion and faithful nurse through her many years of invalidism, and two sons, Mark and Philip, Marlbank, deeply mourn her loss. Mrs. Wm. Hill, Sandhurst, is her only sister. She has three brothers, Robert, of Enterprise, and Martin and Henry, of Sandhurst. The funeral service was conducted by the Rev. J. W. Jones, of Tamworth, in the English church at Marlbank, the text being "The Lord is my Shepherd". The remains were placed in Tamworth vault and will be interred in Reidville cemetery. Mrs. Wiseman's humble piety and cheerful Christian endeavor her to many, and won the respect of all who knew her. Her last words expressed joy that she was entering into eternal rest.

AS OTHERS THINK.

EVERYONE IN NAPANEE HAS A RIGHT TO HIS OWN OPINION.

While everyone has a right to his own opinion, yet it is wise to always consider what others think and profit by their experience.

Nothing makes life so miserable, or interferes so widely with the usefulness of the average American, as indigestion, and it is well for us to give fair consideration to what others think about this remarkable affliction.

T. B. Wallace is positive that in Mi-o-na he possesses what he has an absolute cure for indigestion and the many disagreeable symptoms that follow this disease, such as distress after eating, coated tongue, bad taste in the mouth, dizziness, flatulence, nervousness and debility.

Their action in selling Mi-o-na on guarantee to refund the money unless it cures, shows plainly their belief in the value of this remedy. He takes all the risk, and there will be no charge whatever for Mi-o-na unless you are satisfied that it has relieved you of indigestion.

CURE FOR SEASICKNESS.

Both sailor and physician prescribe the new remedy, the mirror, as a preventative and cure for seasickness. All one has to do is to take a small looking glass in the hand and look intently steadily in the eye. If you are sick you will get relief, and if you are just getting sick you will escape it. The remedy is worth trying, and ought not to be repugnant to the female passengers.

To check a cold quickly, get from your druggist some little Candy Cold Tablets called Preventics. Druggists everywhere are now dispensing Preventics, for they are not a secret remedy, but are put up in little, convenient cubes and sold at 25c. a box. Preventics contain no opium, nor anything harmful or unpleasant to take. Taken at the first sneeze, Preventics will prevent Pneumonia, Bronchitis, La Grippe, etc. Hence they are especially valuable for children. 48 Preventics 25 cents. Trial boxes 5 cts. Sold by T. B. Wallace.

THE INS AND OUTS.

"Two short years ago," remarked the man with the whiskers on the lower extremities of his trousers, "I was without a cent in the world, and now I'm worth over $25,000."

"So I'm" interrogated the other occupant of the park bench. "How did you come by it?"

"Oh, I came out all right," answered the party of the prelude, sadly, "but my $25,000 stayed in."

A Denver man had a friend from a Kansas town in town on a big business deal, and at noon they went to a down-town restaurant and had luncheon together. The Kansas ranchman ate his entire meal with his hat on. When he was near the end he discovered he had no fork. "Say," he said to the Denver man; "that waiter didn't give me a fork." "Well, you don't need one," replied the Denver man, with experienced confidence. "I don't," came from the Kansan. "What am I going to stir my coffee with?"

The whole stock amounts to about $25,000, which has been purchased under the best conditions possible. My regular customers know what it is, and will not hesitate to take advantage of the large reductions.

To those who do not know what the stock is like, I can only say that this store has a reputation for keeping reliable goods at right prices for many years, and my experience of over forty years in the General Store business in this County should be sufficient to convince them that it will be to their interest to patronize this sale, and of the honesty of it

Everything will be carried out as set forth in this advertisement.

ALL FARM PRODUCE marketable, will be taken at cash prices.

This sale is being made in consequence of radical changes to be made in the business.

I will buy Turkeys, and Geese, and Poultry all next week, and give best market price in cash, or goods at reduction prices.

CARD OF THANKS.

The R. C. congregation of Carmanville desire to thank those gentlemen who, with their teams, came to our assistance in drawing stone from Centreville and Camden East to the foundation in Carmanville. They also wish to thank those gentlemen who having no teams, hired one to assist us. The spirit of good-will evinced by the Protestant community on this occasion was much to be admired, and if ever an opportunity presents itself, it will not be forgotten by the Catholic community. Wishing to all the blessings of this holy season: "Peace and good will."

HAY BAY ENTERTAINMENT.

Hay Bay Methodist S.S. entertainment was held on Friday evening, Dec. 20th, and a very enjoyable time was spent by a church full of people. The school had been faithfully trained and rendered a programme of rare merit. Not frequently is such a treat given. It is unkind to draw comparisons. The recitations and songs were without exception excellent, but the rank of the writer makes necessary mention of two. The Old Timey Miller, a song by two boys in costume, and The Happiest Day, a phantasy by the young people. At the close Santa Klck appeared to the delight of all. As a pleasing finale Mrs. A. C. Parks, the indefatigable superintendent, was by a selection called to the platform and the following address read, and presentation made of a sterling silver tea set, engraved "Mrs. A. C. Parks from Hay Bay Methodist S. S., Christmas 1907."

Dear Mrs. Parks,—Your friends and associates in Hay Bay Sunday School desire to express to you their unstinted appreciation of the long and loving labored with no definite expression of it. We, your friends and associates, desire to bring to our midst. We are glad for your work and thankful for your wise and charitable counsel and godly example, and we hope you may long be spared to live with us that we may prove to your word and life. As an expression of our good will and friendship and appreciation of your work, we wish to present to you this little remembrance, and we desire that we may for many years call ourselves your friends and associates in the Master's service. Signed on behalf of the school,

MRS. J. A. PETERSON, Secy.

ADDRESS AND PRESENTATION.

The pupils of Selby Public School surprised their teacher last Friday by presenting to her a toilet set, and the following address:

Miss Annie E. Grass:—

Dear Teacher,—It is with regret we learned of your departure from among us. As a school we are very sorry to lose you. But what is our loss will be others' gain. You have always been ready and willing to help, and to do all for our good.

That you may know that we, the pupils of Selby School, appreciate your teaching and help, we ask you to accept this Toilet Set as a slight token of our love and esteem.

We all join in wishing you a merry Christmas and many happy useful years.

Signed on behalf of the school,
Jennie Dudgeon, Grace Joyce,
Gladys Bikley, Beatrice Lynch.
Myrtle Coolidge,

Miss Grass thanked her pupils for their kindness towards her, and their appreciation of her work. She also takes this opportunity to thank Myrl. Coolidge, Ross Sager, Crossley Bradshaw and Davis Robinson for individual remembrances.

PRESENTATION.

The ladies of Mrs. A. W. Grange's Bible Class met at the parlors of Trinity Church, Napanee, last Sunday, and made her a present of a handsome Bible and Hymn Book.

ADDRESS.

Dear Mrs. Grange,—We, the members of your Bible Class assembled here, desire to express to you—for many years our teacher—our sincere appreciation of your efforts to give us a better understanding of the Word of God.

We beg to assure you, dear Mrs. Grange, that the occasions on which we gather together in our class, under your tuition, are times of rare profit and delight. The Word grows luminous as you shed upon it the results of your research and thought; the truth stands out in clearer outline; our conceptions of duty are exalted; our reliance purpose grows stronger; and life generally seems to hold in it larger and loftier possibilities, as under your leadership we study together the truths of inspiration.

We thank you most heartily for your able and self-denying labors, and while you have a reward—as all true Christian workers have—much higher than can be embodied in these expressions of thanks, yet being expressions which come from our hearts, we trust you will join them with your other need of praise, so that you may be cheered in your work of love, bearing with you the assurance that it is not in vain in the Lord.

We desire your acceptance, Mrs. Grange, of this Bible and Hymn Book, as a token of our very high esteem and affection. We dare not say the gift has no intrinsic value, that would be a dishonor done to the Scriptures and Hymn Book apart from our thought; but meaning only that while its monetary value is inconsiderable the goodwill underlying it is immense.

And with "The Book" we pray for continued wisdom and grace to teach it through many pleasant years to a constantly growing class membership, and ever as you teach its truths to others, that their power and blessing may enter in larger measure into your own life enriching it with the fullness of peace and love.

In conclusion we wish you and yours, dear Mrs. Grange, the happiest Christmas and New Year that the Providence of God, and the wishes of your friends can grant.

Signed on behalf of the class,
MRS. W. A. ROSE,
MRS. FINKLE.

Mrs. Grange was greatly taken by surprise, but thanked the members of her class in appropriate and feeling terms.

THE DAY-LIGHT STORE

This Great Store Extends to the Entire Community a Very Happy and Prosperous New Year.

Our Mammoth Clearance Sale of Surplus Stocks, which has run its 30 days, has broken all records of merchandising in Napanee. We gave the people January prices during December, something which has been appreciated by the crowds of shrewd buyers. The sale itself was beyond anything ever attempted in this town. It was not an offering of a piece here and there, but the entire stock of this great store took their places in the big sale

Now it is a complete clearance of holiday goods which consist of broken lots of every description, and will be disposed of at quick selling prices.

--FURS--

Our immense stock of Furs has had a great run during this Clearing Sale, but we have not allowed the lines to be broken yet, and for that reason our patrons have had the same chance to buy high-class Furs all month at February prices.

You will benefit greatly to buy Furs now. We have the same great selections to pick from.
